BOY BLUE AND I.

When Dick was ten and I was eight,
Life's morning sweet and early!
While he wore aprons checked with blue,
And yet my hair was curly;
We used to read the livelong day
Strange tales and old romances;
Dick liked the Indian stories best,
But I had softer fancies.

I clung to fairy tales, alas!
And books with yellow covers;
I thought myself a heroine,
And went in search of lovers.
In my young heart in those fond days
Of bright, unclouded weather,
Imps, soldiers, ogres, ghosts and war
Were all linked in together.

We had one play called Bunker Hill;
Dick always wished to play it.
I liked dolls better, though, of course,
I was ashamed to say it.
Dick had a company of boys,
The name of one was Mosca;
I made him once a soldier's cap
And trimmed it round with roses.

I followed in the ranks myself,
Their only banner bearing;
Dick fastened to my father's cane
The apron I was wearing.

O happy days, too briefly bright!
O memories quaint, but pleasant!
I can not bear to link to-day,
The glad past with the present!
My childhood's visions seem to mock
My lone heart, sad and smitten;
In dearer life-blood than my own
The page of war is written!

I know not where in death he sleeps—
Far distant from each other
I watched and wept, he fought and fell,
My brave and generous brother!
'Tis all we know. O no! not all—
He died as heroes perish:
He left a memory for our hearts
To fondly, proudly cherish.

N. Y. World.

MISS BECKY'S HOME.

Why She Went to Live With an Old Gentleman.

MISS BECKY was going to the "Old Ladies' Home" at last. It was a sorry fact, but there was nothing else for her to do, it seemed. Who would think of offering any other home to a poor, almost helpless old woman who had out-lived her usefulness? Having passed her days in other people's houses, so to speak, she might not mind it as much, perhaps, as a more fortunate being.

"Yes," she said, "there's a vacancy in the 'Old Ladies' Home,' and the hundred dollars that Parson Amory left me will pay my way in, but it wouldn't last me long if I began to spend it, you know, and I shall have a warm bed and my regular meals without worrying about where the next one's coming from. I'm 'most tired worrying about ways and means. Seems as though I had been about it all my life, ever since father was taken with heart disease hearing the class in algebra. Now that the rheumatism has got the better of me, so that I can't work in cold weather, and the doctor says it'll draw my fingers up so that I can't use them, soon, it doesn't seem as if there was any thing left for me in this world but the Home—and I ought to be thankful for that!"

Miss Becky had had other expectations in her heyday, when young Larry Rogers met her and carried her basket; when his strong arm paddled her down the broad river to church on Sunday mornings; when they sang together in the choir from the same hymn book; when they loitered homeward in the fragrant summer dusk, and heard the whip-poor-will complain, and startled the fire-flies in the hedges as they brushed by. It sometimes seemed to Miss Becky as if all this had happened in another planet. She was young then, with a bloom on her cheek; but, although the rheumatism had bent her figure, and rendered her more or less helpless at times, yet her dark, velvety eyes looked out like soft stars, and the ghost of a dimple still flickered on cheek and chin in spite of her sixty-odd years. Miss Becky's father had been the district school-teacher in those far-off days of her girlhood. He had taught her the simple lore at his command, but it was Larry Rogers who had taught her music, hour after hour, in the empty old school-house; they had practiced together, while he wrote the score on the blackboard. But all this had not sufficed to enable her to earn a livelihood. Her education, musical and otherwise, had stopped short of any commercial value. In those days she had never expected to earn her living by the sweat of her brow. Larry was going to give her every thing. How trivial the little quarrel seemed to-day which circumvented this fine resolve of his! But what magnitude it had assumed at the time! On his return from a trip to a neighboring city, some busybody whispered to Larry that Miss Becky had been seen driving with Squire Eustis' son, Sam, behind his trotters. Sam was just home from college, a harum-scarum fellow, they said, who made love right and left, and gambled a bit; and when Larry reproached her with it she had not denied; she had simply said: "What then? If you choose to listen to gossip rather than wait till I tell you—"

"But you didn't tell me; and I've been home a week."

"I had forgotten all about it till you reminded me," said Becky.

"It's such an every-day affair for you to drive with Sam Eustis!"—which incredulity so stung Becky that she would not condescend to explain that she had carried some needlework up to Squire Eustis' which she had been doing for his wife, and, that as she left to walk home, Sam was starting off with his smart chaise and new dapple-grays, and the Squire said: "Take Miss Becky home, Sam, and show her their paces;" and how she had been ashamed to refuse the kindness, although preferring to walk a thousand times; and how, once in the chaise, Sam had been the pink of courtesy, and had begged her to drive over with him to Parson Amory's, three miles out of her way, "that Lucy Amory may see that you don't disdain my company. For you see," said Sam, who was not as black as he was painted, or as many liked to link to-day, "Lucy can make me what she will; without her I shall be nothing and nobody; but they've told her all kinds of wild things about me; they've told her she might just as well jump into the river as marry such a scapegrace. And perhaps if I made her a little jealous—you know there's no harm in that, is there? all's fair in love—and perhaps if the old folks see me driving about with Miss Becky Thorne my stock may go up, and I may be 'saved from the burning,' as Parson Amory says." And Becky had consented; how could she refuse to do a service for such a true lover? So slight a thing, too! She had often traversed the same road since, on foot, on her daily rounds of toil or mercy. Sam Eustis had married Lucy Amory years ago, and was the foremost man in the county to-day. Strange, how that friendly drive had interfered with Miss Becky's prospects; how the simple fact of carrying home Mrs. Eustis' needlework should have determined her fate, and devoted her to a life of hardship and the "Old Ladies' Home" at the end! Talk of trifles! Poor Miss Becky! she remembered that once or twice the opportunity had offered when she might have made it up with Larry; but pride, or a sort of fine reserve, had locked her lips—Larry ought to know that she was above silly flirtations. Once, when they had met at Lucy Amory's wedding, when they all went out into the orchard while the bride planted a young tree, and the guests looked for four-leaved clovers, she had found herself—whether by accident or design she could not tell—on the grass beside Larry; their fingers met over the same lucky clover, their eyes met above it, and for an instant she had it on her tongue's end to confess all about the drive and its result, to put pride in her pocket, but just then Nell Amory called to Larry.

"Oh, a horrid spider!—on my arm, Larry! Kill him, quick—do! Oh—oh—oh! I shall die—I shall faint!" and that was the end of it.

The old orchard, with its fragrant quince bushes, its gnarled apple trees, its four-leaved clovers, was a thing of the past; a cotton-mill roared and thundered there all day long where the birds built and the trees bourgeoned thirty odd years ago. It no longer blossomed, except in Miss Becky's memory. She had turned her thoughts to raising plants when she was left to her own resources, but one cruel winter's night killed all her slips and the capital was lacking by which she might renew her stock. Since then she had gone out for daily sewing, had watched with the sick, had been in demand for temporary housekeeper whenever a tired matron wished an outing; but latterly her eyes no longer served her for fine work, and sewing-machines had been introduced; she was not so alert in the sick-room as of yore; she moved more slowly and her housekeeping talent was no longer in request; added to this, the bank where her little earnings had been growing one day failed and left her high and dry. Some of her friends had traveled to pastures new, some had married away, some had ignored and forgotten her. As for Larry Rogers, he had been away from Plymouth this many a year. Somebody had sent him abroad the year after Lucy Amory's marriage, to develope his musical genius. He had grown into a famous violinist, playing all over the country to crowded houses, before the finest people in the land. It was a beautiful romance to Miss Becky to read in the Plymouth Record about our "gifted townsman;" she seemed to hear the echo of his violin when the wind swept through the pine boughs. She had no bitter thoughts; she did not blame him because she sat in shadow, because her life had been colorless. She sang again the old tunes he had taught her, and made a little sunshine in her heart. All of happiness she had ever known he had brought her. Why should she complain? And now she was going to the "Old Ladies' Home."

"It isn't exactly what I expected in my youth," she said to the old doctor's widow.

"No; but you'll have a nice room and a bright fire, and the neighbors will drop in to see you and make it seem home-like. Now, there's old Mrs. Gunn; nothing can persuade her to go to the Home. She says it's only a genteel almshouse after all; and so she rubs along with what little she can earn and what the neighbors have a mind to send in; and they have to do it mightily gingerly, too, just as if they were asking a favor of her. Lor'! she doesn't earn her salt."

"I dare say," returned Miss Becky. "Now, if it hadn't been for the rheumatism I could earn my living for years yet, and, may be, get something ahead again. But it seems as if the rheumatism laid in wait for the poor and friendless."

"You ought to have married when you were young, Becky," said the doctor's widow, who had forgotten all about Becky's love affair, and labored under the impression that she had never had a chance—an impression which matrons are apt to entertain concerning their single friends. Miss Becky had been spending some weeks with Mrs. Doctor Dwight, who had moved away from Plymouth after her husband's death. She was there chiefly to put some stitches into the widow's wardrobe, which nobody else would do so "reasonably," that lady's grief having incapacitated her for holding a needle, or giving her mind to the material details of "seam and gusset and band." But during the visit Miss Becky had been seized with her sharpest attack of rheumatism, which had kept her in bed for weeks, till her wages were exhausted by drugs and doctor's fees. It was at this time that she made up her mind to go into the Home on her return to Plymouth.

Mrs. Dwight saw her off at the station. "I hope you'll find the home cozy," she said, outside the car-window. "It's lucky Parson Amory left you that hundred dollars, after all. He might have doubled it."

"Yes, I suppose so," Miss Becky answered, meekly. Perhaps she was thinking that if she were Mrs. Dwight no old friend of hers should go begging for a refuge at an alms-house door, were it ever so genteel an alms-house. Perhaps she was thinking of the pretty, comfortable home waiting for her friend, and wondering why their fortunes were so unlike.

"Write when you reach Plymouth and let me know how you're suited," said Mrs. Dwight, and just then the cars gave a lurch and left her behind, and Miss Becky turned her glance inward. Somebody had taken the seat beside her.

"Your friend was speaking of Parson Amory, of Plymouth," said he. "I couldn't help hearing. I was born in Plymouth myself, but I haven't met a soul from there these twenty years. I'm on my way down to look up my old friends."

"Twenty years is a long time," answered Becky. "I'm afraid you won't find many of your friends left. You'll hardly know Plymouth."

"I suppose not—I suppose not. Have you lived there long?"

"I? I have lived there all my days."

"Good! I am hungry for news of the people. Tell me every thing you can think of. Did Parson Amory leave a fortune? He was called close. Where's Miss Nell—married or dead? I can see the old place in my mind's eye; and the parsonage under the elms, and the orchard behind it, where Lucy Amory planted a young tree on her wedding day, and the gown little Becky Thorne wore—by the way, is she alive? Do you know her?"

"I AM BECKY THORNE."

Miss Becky hesitated an instant.

"Yes," she replied, "I know her—more or less. She's alive."

"And married?"

"Well, no, she never married."

"She must be sixty odd; she was a pretty creature, such dimples—I suppose they are wrinkles now! Where have the years gone? Is her home in the old place still?"

"Her home?" said Miss Becky, flushing a little, "she has none. She is on her way to the Old Ladies' Home."

"To the Old Ladies' Home! Becky Thorne!" he gasped; "and I—"

"You seem to have known her pretty well," said Miss Becky, who was beginning to enjoy the incognito.

"I should think so! I've loved Becky Thorne from my cradle; we had a silly quarrel, which parted us—such a trifle, when I look back. Do you ever look back, madam?"

The twilight was falling about them; Becky's face had grown a shade or two paler all at once; she turned her dark, velvety eyes full upon him with a startled air.

"You—" she said, "you must be Larry Rogers." Then the color swept to her cheeks in a crimson wave. "Do you know I never thought you had grown old like myself? Don't you know me? I am Becky Thorne!"

Just then the train thundered through the tunnel, and they forgot that they were sixty-odd.

"On the way to the Old Ladies' Home," she wrote Mrs. Dwight, "I was persuaded to go to an old gentleman's, instead."—Mary N. Prescott, in the Domestic Monthly.

The Color of Trout.

The color of a trout's back depends on the color of the bottom of the river, but the trout which grow rapidly differ greatly in spots and color from those which grow slowly and thrive badly, and a middle-aged trout differs in color from an aged trout. Speaking generally, the young, healthy, fast-growing fish will have silvery sides, white belly and plenty of well-defined spots. The poorly-fed fish will have few or no spots, a drab belly and muddy-yellow sides. The old trout will be much the same in appearance, only more so, and will be particularly lank and large-headed. This accounts for those trout which have access to salt water being brighter and more beautiful than others which do not. The variety and abundance of their food make them so.—American Angler and Hook and Line.

STUDY IN BROWN AND WHITE.

A Sensibly Chosen Summer Dress for Little Folks.

HAT shall be bought for the every-day wear of the small pedestrian who indoors is just able to walk into mischief of varying kinds, but shows a decided preference for the wash-basin, the shoe-blacking and the ink bottle, and out of doors rejoicing in nothing so much as a sand heap and unlimited water? The pure white and delicate pinks and blues, a first choice for only darlings and children of ample incomes, must be passed reluctantly over by the mother of many, of moderate means, and something that will wash, something that will wear, and something that will not be expensive are the requisites demanded for morning or "mud pie" dresses in families not a few.

This spring, calico, cambric, percale and the fancy ginghams were all tried in the balance and found wanting; calico and cambric fade and grow thin before the summer is half ended; percales, when pretty in design, soil almost as quickly as white, and when dark enough to be useful are somewhat unattractive in design. The ginghams, while tasteful and admirable for afternoon wear, do not possess the staying qualities called for in the dress worn during the forenoon. Denim, suggested by reading "Ascutney Street," seemed a last resort, but also an unmistakably ugly one, until a pile of kitchen aprons, still fresh and clear-looking after some months' hard service, suggested a material that would meet most of the requirements of baby's dresses.

Nine yards of a clear dark brown and white in quarter-inch checks were chosen from a great variety of apron ginghams at eight cents a yard, offered for a selection, the nine yards making three dresses of the following pattern, which was decided upon after much deliberation: A very short, plain waist, with a sleeve puffed from the shoulder to the elbow, plain and tight-fitting from the elbow to the wrist; a plain, full skirt, containing three breadths, finished with a four-inch hem, and reaching to the ankles.

Around the neck is a frill of embroidery, half a yard long, and two inches deep, which gives the finishing touch to a little dress that is quaint and comfortable looking, and when its wearer is crowned with a broad-brimmed brown sailor, or better still a little sun hat of white pique, the effect is very pleasant, almost picturesque. This, at least, is the verdict of the mothers of a little hill-top colony where the dress has been chosen, by general consent, for their two and three-year-olds, boys and girls, who are to revel in sunshine and sand gardens, during the coming long summer mornings.

Two dollars will buy materials for six dresses, including embroideries and buttons, and one dress, cut and fitted perfectly, will serve as a pattern for the others, any one of which can be made on the machine in three hours, an easy piece of work for a morning or afternoon. When economy is the first consideration, the material can be made up Mother Hubbard fashion, and the neck finished with a frill of the same, but the first pattern is, otherwise, well-worth the difference which would thus be saved.—Good Housekeeping.

The White House Silver.

Women all over the land know how it is not to have enough silver knives and forks to go around, and they have all felt the anguish of seeing the most distinguished guest get the plated one by mistake. But who would dream that the White House would not have enough knives and forks to go around, and yet it is true. Every time fifty people sit down to a state dinner there two of them take their bouillon from plated spoons, their terrapin from plated forks and cut the fillet of beef with plated knives.

It is a horrible thought, but there are only four dozen genuine silver knives, forks and spoons in the butler's pantry, and by the most skillful ingenuity they can not be made to do duty for fifty people. There is one set of knives and forks in the sideboard which has a history, for it cost a President his re-election. These are the gold knives and forks which Van Buren added, and when the people learned that the public moneys were being taken to put gold spoons in Presidents' mouths they promptly defeated him.

Now, the truth of the matter is that they are not gold at all, and the people were hasty in their judgment. They are solid silver washed with gold, and it was only a few years ago—in President Arthur's day—that they began to wear off and disclose the hoax. He had them rewashed, and they are still used on state occasions. They are small, fine bladed and much more delicate than those commonly in use in this day. Many of the larger pieces of silver date back to Madison's day, although no memoranda have been kept, and it is hard to tell when things were purchased.—N. Y. World.

Action of Mildew on Cotton Fabrics.

Owing to its comparative freedom from impurity cotton may be stored for a long period without undergoing any change, more especially if it is bleached and kept dry. When, however, it is contaminated with added foreign organic matter, such as starch, gum, etc. (as in finished calicoes), and then exposed to a moist, warm atmosphere, it is very liable gradually to become tender or rotten. This is owing to the growth of vegetable organisms of a very low order called mildew. These fungi feed upon the starchy matters present, inducing their decomposition, and after some little time the cotton fibers themselves are attacked. The simultaneous production of crenic, humic, ulmic and other organic acids may possibly assist somewhat in the tendering process.—N. Y. Telegram.

IN OUT OF THE WET.

With No Apologies to Some Lady Writers of Fiction.

NATURE, in her great laboratory, can work wonders with very poor instruments. The instruments she used with which to mold the fair form of Leonora Scruggs were the world, a belle of the sacrilegiously Leonora was a child of nature, and likewise of Peter and Betsey Scruggs.

one of those feeders of farmer's hired man, and culinary department yclept a hash-jerker.

The years go fleeting by with their cargoes of hopes and joys, of "nights out painting the town," of toil and moil, of Budweiser beer, of unpaid bills, of heart burnings and other physical ailments, and Leonora Scruggs has changed from the budding convolvulus of sweet girlhood to the redder and full-blown paeonia of womanhood, and all unknown to her, her fate is coming toward her, relentlessly, surely, sent by his employer to collect the price of a copy of "Samantha at Saratoga," which Leonora, in a moment of abstraction, forgetting that her wages was only four dollars a week and Sunday nights out, had ordered.

Seated in the pantry, the outlines of her fair young form rather promiscuously revealed by her loose-fitting Mamma Hubbard, was Leonora, bathing her guileless young feet in a dishpan, when the door-bell was rung savagely and a reformed salvation army major called for Miss Scruggs.

If I had a little more time to devote to writing this, I would now work in several exclamatory sentences about the shadow of the destiny that was falling upon Miss Scruggs, and upon the dishpan and pantry, but tempus is skipping and I must on.

The voice of the stranger sounded to Leonora like the sweet gurgle of boiling mush and the sacred hour that comes to women nominally but once, was upon her, and she knew that she heard the voice of the man who was to walk by her side, and put up with her kicking, and pay her millinery bills through all the shadowy years of the misty subsequently.

Peeping coyly from behind the door, and at the same time gracefully inserting her innocent feet in an old pair of carpet slippers, Leonora bashfully lisped: "Ah, there! my size."

Andronicus O'Vanderpeel raised his hat, thereby showing his wealth of carrot-hued hair, took a hitch at his pants, which were supported by an antique belt, stood on one foot, and in rich, manly tones, replied:

"Morning, lady; fine day; gotcher Smanthy at Sairtoga; two dollars, please."

Fairly carried away by the emotions the voice of Andronicus set stirring in her bosom, Leonora could only murmur, while the tell-tale hair-oil trickled across her forehead and down her nose:

"Come, now, McGinty, don't be a chump; I won't pay for no dad-binged book, but the folks is away from home, and if you want to come in and help me pare these taters we'll have more fun than some people have sheep."

And thus were two more heaven-born souls warmed by the glorious sunshine of love; thus did the only true secret of happiness come to two lives; thus did two full-grown people grow so spooney upon each other that in thirty minutes he was calling her The Pride of His Life, and ere the lagging hour-hand had circled once around its course she was sitting on his lap and calling him "baby." And ere the ruddy sun had buried his radiant features behind the western hills Andronicus had experienced the rich, I might even say opulent, pleasure of holding a one hundred and forty-pound girl on his knees for four mortal hours, and when, in a voice choked with emotion, he asked her if she would "get hitched" to him, she buried her fat young face between the lapels of his vest, and murmured: "Bet yer neck."—V. Z. Reed, in Texas Siftings.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

Inits Worst Form.

I BENTON, LAF. CO., Wis., Dec., '88.
Rev. J. C. Koenig: Gentlemen—For the following: Samuel Bloomy who was suffering from Vitus Dance in its worst form for about 16 years was treated by several physicians without effect, two bottles of Pastor Koenigs Nerve Tonic cured him.

Prejudiced, yet Convinced.

So. Norwalk, Con., May, 1890.
Although I took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic with a certain prejudice, it has done me so much good that I must thank him for it, because now I can sleep again. Since the terrible catastrophe of the Johnstown flood, where I lost five members of my family, terrible fictions occupied my mind, so that I was since quite despondent. But now I come to myself again, and attribute this to the good effect of the Tonic.

MR. KILGORE'S KICK

Disorderly Scenes in the House of Representatives.

DOORS LOCKED BY THE SPEAKER

One is Burst Open by the Member from Texas and Mr. Dingley Injured.

Several Democrats Leave the Chamber on Account of the Virginia Contest. The Republicans Hold a Caucus—Telegrams Sent to Absent Members to Return Immediately to Make a Quorum.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The House has furnished another sensation. The Democrats have been trying for several days to prevent the unseating of Mr. Venable of Virginia and giving his place to Professor Langston, the colored contestant.

The Democrats opened the ball by filibustering against the proposition to approve the journal. In pursuance of this policy the greater number left the hall in order to break the quorum. A call of the House was ordered. This brought the Democrats back again. Then followed the usual motion, which was that further proceedings under the call be dispensed with. While the yeas and nays were being taken on this proposition a score or more of Democrats started to leave the Chamber.

This brought Mr. Burrows, of Michigan, one of the Republican leaders to his feet with a suggestion to the Speaker that the departing members ought to be obliged to remain. The Speaker replied that the rules were intended to secure that end, and looking about him he espied Mr. Houk, the assistant doorkeeper, whom he instructed to lock all the doors leading into the corridor.

At this moment Mr. Kilgore of Texas essayed to pass through the door at the Speaker's left. The doorkeeper in charge refused permit him. In peremptory tones the Texan demanded that the door be opened, and that too, without delay. Still the doorkeeper refused.

Mr. Kilgore thereupon drew back one foot, and administering a vigorous kick to the frail baize structure, broke its fastenings and shot it quivering outward.

Mr. Dingley, the journalist Representative from Maine, all unconscious of impending trouble, came along the corridor at that instant and received the flying splinters from the shattered clock full in his face. His nose was badly brnised, but with this exception he escaped unhurt.

While this scene was being enacted Representatives Amos Cummings of New York and Coleman of Louisiana went to the door on the other side of the presiding officer's desk. The messenger attempted to stop them, but the two members coolly turned the key and unlocking the door stepped out without further opposition.

THE HOUSE DEADLOCK.

The Republicans Decide in Caucus to Telegraph for All Absentees.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—A caucus of Republican members was held to determine on means to break the deadlock now prevailing in the House. After a short discussion about amending the rules to prevent a quorum from being broken when once secured, it was decided to call the roll to ascertain how many members were present. The call showed that 145 Republican members were in the hall. To make a quorum 19 more members would be required.

Several Republican members who were not present are in the city and it was stated that these and a number of others, who are out of town, sufficient to make a quorum, could be secured for attendance. It was decided that telegrams should be sent out to all absentees to return to Washington without delay.

The statement is authorized by prominent Republican members that the House will refuse to allow Congress to adjourn until the Langston-Venable case is disposed of. Several Republican Senators were present at the caucus but took no part in the proceedings.

Fled on the Eve of Marriage.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Sept. 19.—Nothing has yet been heard of William Lynn, the young barber who disappeared in a peculiar manner. He was to have been married yesterday morning to the daughter of a saloonkeeper, and the friends of both parties were present in large numbers in the Catholic Church. No wedding party appeared, however, and the affair has since been worked up to a regular sensation. The young girl is heartbroken over the affair.

THE PORTSMOUTH TRAGEDY.

The Coroner Finds that Hein Attempted to Add Another Victim to His List.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Sept. 19.—It was learned by Coroner S. C. Whittier that Fred H. J. Hein attempted to add to his list of victims his mother-in-law Mrs. Lucas, whom he never liked.

It is known that he went three times to her house in Hill street, near his own, and tried to force an entrance, but failed to do so, because Mrs. Lucas, alarmed by his frequent threats to take her life, always kept her door locked.

Mrs. Lucas told a reporter that Hein was a perfect brute; that his own mother, whom he had shamefully abused, warned Alice Lucas not to marry him; that, although Hein never struck his wife, he frequently threatened her life; that he denied her proper clothing and pocket money; that he had kept a mistress, by whom he had a child, and that his cruelties forced his wife to leave. The talk against her daughter's character, Mrs. Lucas says, is untrue.

On the other hand, Hein is spoken of by those who knew him as being a sober, industrious fellow, who was made desperate by his wife's unfaithfulness.

MAY BE A REPUBLIC.

A Mob Threatens the King, but the Troops Are in Control.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—Reports from Lisbon are to the effect that serious fighting has occurred between the people and the authorities, and the Government has established a state of siege. The Government forces are at present in full control. The mob shouted for Serpa Pinto, and "Down with the English and the Braganzas," meaning the King.

Senhor Magahoes Lima, the editor of La Secula, said in an interview to-day: "The idea of a Portuguese Republic was born of the success of the Brazilian revolution, which gave the impetus.

"Large funds are supplied to us by wealthy Brazilians, and one week after we install the republic we shall not have a single adversary; even the clergy are on our side. We fear no foreign intervention, but, on the contrary, our republic will shortly lead to the establishment of a republic in Spain."

The Bridegrooms Hold Their Lead for the League Pennant—Anson Won and Lost a Game—Cleveland's Brotherhood Team Defeats Pittsburg—Louisville at the Head in the Association Race.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The League baseball season here came to an illustrious end in Brotherhood Park. The contest between the nines of Ewing and Ward, which marked its death, was a monument of pleasure and excitement.

As good a game was never played in Brotherhood Park, and a better one never anywhere. Brooklyn divided with New York the numbers and enthusiasm of the grand stand, and New York divided with Brooklyn the honors of the field.

Ward's men in the early the game had the best of it. At the end of the fifty inning the score was five to two in their favor. In the sixth they scored another run on a wild pitch by Crane. Ewing in trying to stop the ball, injured his hand, and Bill Brown took his place.

The game was interesting throughout, the winning run for Brooklyn being made by a bunt hit by Joyce in the ninth inning.

SULLIVAN AS A STAR.

The Champion Signs a Contract for a Tour Through Australia and England.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—A contract was signed in this city between John L. Sullivan, Duncan B. Harrison and Jack Barnitt on one hand, and J. C. Williamson, the Australian manager, on the other, by which the first named three agree to place themselves under the latter's management during a tour through Australia and England.

A new play is to be written for Sullivan and Harrison, and Barnitt is to hold about the same position that he now occupies with the "Honest Hearts and Willing Hands" combination—that of a sort of companion to the champion. They will receive a guarantee and a percentage of the profits. Twenty-four weeks will be spent in Australia and the Colonies and twenty-six in England.

It is possible that all of the members of the present company will be engaged for the tour. They will leave San Francisco on July 1 next.

The success of Sullivan's present venture seems to have induced John L. to definitely abandon the prize ring.

LIVES REPORTED LOST.

A Disastrous Cyclone Said to Have Struck Manning, Iowa.

DES MOINES, Ia., Sept. 19.—Alarming rumors came from about Manning to the effect that the storm there assumed large proportions, tearing down houses and killing and injuring many people. Up to this time these reports have not been verified, but the latests reports are that six people have been killed and an indefinite number injured.

At Council Bluffs there was a heavy rain storm, accompanied by lightning. Many cellars in that city were flooded, and the damage to goods in the basements of busines houses will be heavy. The large volume of water on the streets caused a suspension of trade for over an hour. Several buildings were struck by lightning and three people were seriously injured.

Considerable damage was also done in the neighborhood of Emmetsburg.

New York Police to Take the Census.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Mayor Grant sent a letter to the police commissioners enclosing the report of the Board of Health arraigning the work of the Federal census enumerators in this city. The Mayor says that such an enumeration as the Board of Health suggests is, in his judgment, necessary for the purposes of vital statistics and other public matters, and asks that a sufficient number of policemen be detailed to make a complete count of the population.

A Dam Gives Way.

TROY, N. Y., Sept. 19.—The dam at the outlet of the reservoir, six miles northeast of the village of Poestenkill, known as the Bonesteel Pond, gave way during the morning. The water rushed down the narrow valley, tearing up trees and carrying away everything standing. Six new bridges on the Poestenkill and Columbia highway were washed away. The barns and sheds of George Cottrell were wrecked and three sawmills washed away.

Surprise in London.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The one topic in London to-day is the arrest of Dillon and O'Brien. The general feeling is one of profound surprise. No explanation of the reasons for the Government's course has as yet been given. On all sides doubts are freely expressed as to the political wisdom displayed, but it is too early to estimate the effect of the arrests on public opinion in England.

Indicted for Train Wrecking.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 19.—The grand jury at Troy indicted Cain, Buett and Reed under section 635 of the Penal Code, charging them with misplacing a cabbage switch two miles above the point where the train was wrecked. It is said that Cordial and Kiernan's cases were considered and no evidence against them was found, and they will be discharged.

More Trouble Over the World's Fair Site.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—It is said that the World's Fair National Committee will reconsider the vote by which Jackson Park and the Lake Front were selected as a site for the Fair. There seems to be a great deal of dissatisfaction among the members of the commission over this matter, and a number of them expressed regret yesterday that they had ever voted for a dual site.

Died While Visiting Friends.

BENNINGTON, Vt., Sept. 19.—First Lieutenant Fred. D. Holton, of the Second United States Cavalry, stationed at Fort Whipple, Arizona, died here of Bright's disease. McKee Rankin's Domestic Troubles.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—McKee Rankin, the actor, has been served with a summons and complaint at the instance of his wife, formerly Kitty Blanchard, who alleges that her husband has not supported her in three years. LONDON, Sept. 19.—The excitement in sporting circles is hourly increasing with regard to the Slavin-McAuliffe set-to. The men are in splendid condition, and as the price of entrance tickets has already risen to £25 ($125), it may be inferred that the occasion will be one of unusual interest.

A GREAT SENSATION

Over the Arrest of Dillon and O'Brien in Ireland.

THEY CANNOT COME TO AMERICA

Balfour Charges Them With Inciting Tenants Not to Pay Rents.

They Are Released On Bail—More Arrests Expected—Davitt Says It Will Help the Irish Cause—Parnell May Visit This Country—The Arrests Cause Surprise in London.

DUBLIN, Sept. 10.—No event has occurred here in years that has caused the widespread excitement and indignation as the arrests of John Dillon and William O'Brien, and the general opinion is that the arbitrary action of the Government will prove a boomerang.

There is no doubt that the arrests of the Irish leaders were made for the purpose of breaking up the American mission, as Dillon and O'Brien were booked to sail on the Teutonic for New York on October 1.

How the Arrests Were Made.

Mr. Dillon, when arrested, was in his uncle's house at Ballybrack. The police inspector, accompanied by two constables, entered without knocking or notice and rudely ordered Mr. Dillon to accompany him. The latter asked for the inspector's authority, whereupon the officer produced his warrant, accusing Mr. Dillon of inciting the tenants of Smith-Barry, in his recent speech at New Tipperary, to not pay their rents.

Without waiting for Mr. Dillon to take a change of clothing, the police hurried him to a car and took him to Dublin and thence to Tipperary, to be arraigned before Colonel Caddell, the magistrate whom Dillon a few weeks ago most severely denounced in a speech in Parliament.

Mrs. O'Brien Accompanies Her Husband.

Editor William O'Brien was taken in custody later at the Glen Gariff Hotel. His wife was with him. Without calling him to one side, the officer presented his warrant, and told Mr. O'Brien to come along immediately. "Another attempt to keep me from telling Americans the truth about Ireland," said Mr. O'Brien as he accompanied the officer.

The charge against Mr. O'Brien was the same as against Mr. Dillon, that of inciting tenants not to pay rent, and of advocating the boycott in speeches at Limerick and New Tipperary.

Released on Bail.

O'Brien and Dilion were taken to Tipperary. There was a slight disturbance outside the court house before they entered. Mr. Ronan, who conducted the prosecution, asked that the prisoners be remanded until Thursday. They were admitted to bail.

Mingled surprise and indignation are the predominant feelings in Dublin today.

Dispatches from various parts of Ireland indicate that the Nationalists are everywhere greatly excited at the arrests.

DILLON INTERVIEWED.

He Says the Nationalists Are More Stronger To-Day Than Ever Before.

DUBLIN, Sept. 19.—In an interview after his arrest Mr. Dillon said he was mystified as to the object of the Government, unless it was to prevent Mr. O'Brien and himself and others from proceeding on their intended mission to America. He was certain, however, that the American friends of Ireland would not in any event withhold needed support from the unfortunate tenants on the Tipperary and other estates. The unjust and arbitrary action of the Government would injure the opponents of the tenants' rights more than a dozen public meetings would have done.

He called attention to the coincidence of Father Conway denouncing him and his colleagues from the altar in the Tipperary church at the very moment when the warrants of arrest were being drawn, and appealed to the people to say whether this could have been merely accidental, or whether it did not indicate collusion between certain members of the priesthood and the Tory enemies of Ireland.

He had satisfied himself that all reports of dissensions in the ranks of the Nationalists were unfounded. He had traced these malicious stories to a drunken renegade Member of Parliament. The Nationalists were stronger to-day than ever before, and would only be more firmly united on account of the arrests.

Carroll Declines Myer's Challenge.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 19.—Billy Myer, the Streator cyclone, offered Jimmy Carroll, the winner of the late Bowen Carroll fight, a match for $2,500 and a good outside bet. Carroll declined, and he said he had no idea of fighting for six months, and that if he fought anybody it would be McAuliffe, whom he is anxious to meet. Carroll expects to go to Boston on Sunday.

Parnell May Visit America.

Mr. Parnell has been counting upon great results from the proposed American stumping tour, as he is nervously anxious to have a large fund raised for the important elections of 1891, and it is thought possible that he will go to America and deliver a series of appeals himself if Messrs. O'Brien, Dillon and others who had expected to go are imprisoned or kept at home by legal proceedings. Mr. O'Brien is in fairly good health, and could stand prison life better than he could during his last severe experience of that kind. Mr. Dillon, however, is quite delicate. Both of them expect that they will be forced to serve the maximum term of six months.

ROMANTIC SUICIDE.

Two New York Lovers Fulfill Their Promise and Die Together.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The romantic suicide of Miss Emilie Rossi, a German actress, and Gustav Koch, a crayon artist, is still wrapped in deep mystery. Both deaths had been premeditated, and were the carrying out of an insane resolve. The suicide of each was a most dramatic one.

At 5.20 both ended their lives. Koch stepped out on the platform of the elevated railroad station at Canal street. No one paid any particular attention to him. After pacing up and down the station platform several times, he stopped at the south end, when a woman put her head out of the third-story window of the Bowery building. He said to her: "Yes, I have come, Emilie, are you ready?" She replied in the affirmative and a pistol shot rang out in the air. Koch fell dead on the platform. Immediately a second shot was heard in the room occupied by the young woman. The police rushed into the room and discovered the dead body of a beautiful lady. A black hole in the breast showed where a bullet had entered.

Emilie left a letter addressed to her aunt, Mary Knoon, with whom she boarded, in which she spoke about her lover, Koch, a quarrel with her mother, a determination of Koch and herself to commit suicide and asking that her body be cremated.

Wire Tappers Arrested.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—W. J. Wade and Frank Edmunds, operators, William Johnson, lineman, and Mary Bayson, who was to place the money, all from New York, were arrested here on the charge of attempting to swindle the bookmakers who keep places in the northern portion of the city designated as "Monte Carlo," by tapping the telegraph wires. They all gave their residences as from New York, and intimated that they were in the employ of New York parties. They were caught tapping the wires, and but for the bungling work of the lineman would have made a rich haul.

BY THE WAY.

—A very enthusiastic meeting was held by Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., last evening.

—The postoffice at Bloomfield was robbed Wednesday night by exactly the same methods which were employed in robbing the Bound Brook postoffice.

—There is offered at Mme Getti's, Park avenue and Fourth street, a large line of the celebrated Perrin gloves for ladies. These gloves excel most of the higher grades, while their price is much lower.

—The camp meeting in Hyde's grove will be continued this Sunday afternoon and evening. Good singing and speaking. Preaching by a colored female evangelist. The camp will positively be broken after Sunday.

—A public meeting will be held in Hope chapel this evening at eight o'clock under the auspices of the temperance club. The club promises a good time and all are cordially invited to be present. Young and old will be welcome.

—The guests at Hotel Netherwood are brought regretfully to the realization of the fact that the close of another happy and successful season is at hand, by the notification that the last meal served this year will be the Saturday morning breakfast of September 27.

—The suggestion has been made that more attention should be paid to the teaching of local geography in the public schools. There are too many school children well posted in the geography of Montenegro who can't tell whether the Millstone River empties into the Raritan or the Delaware, and the same condition of ignorance prevails all over, not only in this State but in many others.

—The New Jersey edition of the New York World continues to harp on its charges against F. A. Dunham, engineer of the county roads—charges which THE PRESS has exclusively shown to be false. The accusations can do Mr. Dunham no harm, however, even where he is not known, as the article in refutation of them has been copied from THE PRESS and published in the local papers throughout the State.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss L. E. Miller, of West Third street, is visiting at Harrisburg, Pa.

W. J. Stephenson, the caterer, has returned from a ten-days' rest at Seaside Park.

James C. Pope is slowly but steadily recovering his former health although not yet able to be out.

Mrs. S. Randolph and her sister, Miss Grace Johnson of Duer street, have returned from a visit with friends at Mortown.

Miss Anna L. Borst has gone to Highland, N. Y., for a few weeks, where she will be the guest of her sister, Mrs. Seymour Halt.

Mrs. George Patterson of Westfield, and Mrs. F. F. Beals of Plainfield, are among the recent arrivals at Tunnicliff Cottage, Richfield Springs.

F. A. Church has set an example for the property owners on his side of Craig place. He has curbed his gutters and taken down his front fence.

Charles Blake, who has just closed a successful season as manager of the Lake Hopatcong Hotel, is the guest of his brother-in-law, James Heath.

Donald Dowlie, the eminent traveler who delighted the guests of Hotel Netherwood with one of his charming lectures a few nights ago, will repeat the lecture at Reform Hall Monday evening.

The Rev. Dr. Lewis, of the Seventh Day Baptist church, will return from his vacation in the West next week. His pulpit will be occupied to-morrow morning by the Rev. Geo. W. Lewis, of Louisiana.

Colored society is on the qui vive over the approaching marriage of Edward Alfred Martin and Miss Anna Johnson. The wedding will occur Thursday, Sept. 25, at the home of Peter Gordon, 70 East Fourth street.

The Misses Etta Krymer and Etta Howland were highly complimented last evening for their tasteful arrangement of the floral decorations at the Christian Endeavor meeting in the Trinity Reformed church, and Messrs C. P. Wheeler, Andrew Carpenter, Chas. Wheeler and Whitfield Frazee were deservedly praised for their excellent instrumental music.

Lucy P. Myers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Myers, of East Front street, died at Colorado Springs, this morning after a lingering illness. She was a niece of ex-Councilman J. K. Myers and of the late Joseph Myers, Cashier of the City National Bank, and was a sister of Mrs. Frederick J. Mead, whose husband, a prominent official of the American Bank Note Company, died a short time ago. The funeral services will be held Monday at Colorado Springs.

You sturdy oak whose branches wide
Boldly the storm and wind defy,
Not long ago an acorn, small,
Lay dormant 'neath the summer sky.

Not unlike the thrifty oak in its germ, development and growth, is consumption. But even this mighty foe of mankind, positively yields to the wonderful curative properties of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Don't be blind to your own interests and think yours a hopeless case. That remarkable remedy has rescued thousands. It is the only medicine of its class, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee that it will benefit or cure in all cases of disease for which it is recommended, or money paid for it will be promptly refunded.

A PET CAT'S TREACHERY.

Pussy Bites Her Master, and Fears of Hydrophobia are Raised.

John P. Stockton, Jr., of Seventh street, son of the Attorney-General of New Jersey, was bitten by a cat yesterday, and the wound is such a severe one that the aid of Dr. Gibier, of the Pasteur Institute, may yet be required to prevent blood poisoning or hydrophobia.

Mr. Stockton's cat had for several days been indulging in queer antics, and a superstitious servant declared that 'twas possessed with witches. Yesterday the cat became such an object of terror to a child who had been trying to play with it that Mr. Stockton picked it up to put it out doors. Without an instant's warning the cat made a savage snap at Mr. Stockton's hand, and imbedded its teeth again and again in the flesh. The hand was terribly lacerated, and Mr. Stockton at once bundled the cat up in a basket and went to New York, where Dr. Gibier dressed the wound and took charge of the now vicious but hitherto pleasant and petted pussy.

Dr. Gibier will keep the cat long enough to determine whether or not it has hydrophobia, and meanwhile he gives Mr. Stockton daily precautionary treatment.

The Crescents Hold Down the Norwichs.

Yesterday's attendance at the Crescent League's ball grounds was a remarkably large one for a mid-week day, fully 1,000 being present. It was also remarkable because of the presence of so many of the clergy of the city, and so many who were strangers to the game. But probably the most remarkable thing about the attendance was its unanimity of feeling in favor of its home team. Even Umpire Berriman was accused by some, but without reason, of "roasting" the Crescents.

There had never been witnessed such a fine fielding game on the grounds before as that put up by the Crescents. The Norwich men were astonished and loud in their praise of it. They said that against all other teams they had met, such balls as Martin, Lee and Lufbery stopped, would have been safe hits.

McIndoe was not able to be present and his place was filled by Carbonell of Somerville. He dropped a fly (the only error made by the home team), made a hit, a sacrifice, and a strike-out. The rest of the positions were played by the regular team, and played to perfection. Gregg puzzled the professionals. Hackett was the only one who could find Gentle Michael's curves. Outside of him but four of the Norwich batters hit the ball safe, and they only once each. O'Connell was the only man who stole a base on Jones.

The Crescents' run was made in the ninth inning. Jones got to first on O'Connell's only error. Lee followed and filed out to right field. This with Carbonell's sacrifice helped Freddie to third from whence he stole home on a short passed ball. The score:

The Next Show at Music Hall.

Manager W. S. Cleveland announces some strong engagements for his Consolidated Minstrels, which appear at Music Hall Thursday evening of next week. Among the names are those of Billy Emerson (who is still "happy as a big sunflower"), Hughey Dougherty, Barney Fagan, Luke Schoolcraft, Griffin and Marks, Fields and Hanson, Signor Benedetto, the marvelous male soprano (an importation), Raymond Shaw, the phenomenal alto, Charles Noble and J. Marcus Doyle. The Cragg troupe of gentlemen acrobats, another reigning novelty from Europe, will be featured in the olio; Eddie Fox will conduct the grand orchestra.

Fagan's two productions will be put on elaborately, and will cost, it is said, not less than $15,000 for scenery and costumes. Cleveland seems to be developing into something of a monopolist, who takes his pick of available talent and leaves what he doesn't want for his rivals. It is even rumored that he would decline to accept the earth with a fence around it, unless the donor should guarantee that the fence would be high enough to display his four-sheet-high lithograph stands. And yet he has been accused of fastidiousness.

—Joe, the peripatetic Amboy clam man who you all know, was heard to inquire of a friend the other day: "Shimmey! How vill I go by Third East street."

UNION COUNTY'S W. C. T. U.

They Have Grown So, They Now Have a National Delegate.

Mrs. M. D. Tomlinson was re-elected President of the Union County Woman's Christian Temperance Unions at yesterday's convention, and Miss Clementine Yates was elected Corresponding Secretary. Miss Thirza Greaves, of Westfield, was again chosen Recording Secretary, and Miss G. T. Underhill, of Rahway, was elected Treasurer.

The convention was attended by 105 delegates from the 10 local Unions, all of whom thought it the best one ever held.

The membership was reported to be 516, which entitles Union county to a delegate to the National Convention to be held this Fall in Atlanta.

The 14 departments have expended in their local work $4,978.97. They have held 704 meetings, 108 of which have been public meetings. The sum of $27.19 has been sent to Nebraska. There are ten W. C. T. Unions, and three "Y" Unions in the county.

The devotional exercises at the opening of the convention at 10 A. M., were in charge of Miss Yates, after which the reports of the Secretary and Treasurer were given, followed by those of the Superintendents of the different branches of work which are carried on by the Unions. Among the Superintendents' reports were those of Mrs. P. H. Bennett, of Craig place, on Juvenile Work; Mrs. J. W. Yates, of East Seventh street, on Literature; Mrs. J. H. Coard, of Putnam avenue, on Hygiene and Heredity; Mrs. S. R. Krom, of Madison avenue, on Press Work; Miss May Tomlinson, of LaGrande avenue, on the Kitchen Garden; and Mrs. T. C. Bodine, of Dunellen, on Tobacco and Narcotics.

A very nice lunch was served at 12:30 by the Willard Union of Westfield, after which the reports were finished, and the President's address, which was listened to with rapt attention by all, was given. The election of officers concluded the afternoon exercises.

There were five visiting delegates present from other states, two of whom—one from Kansas and one from Ohio—gave earnest accounts of the work of their Unions.

The evening service consisted mainly of an address by Miss Greenwood, the National Superintendent of Evangelistic Study.

The Pæons of the Enemy.

(From the Somerville Gazette.)

Speaking of mascots, what's the matter with the blue shirt Harkins has recently donned?

Thanks, brother Demarest, for the real nice account of the game in the Press. The West End players have not yet overcome the effects of it.

What a mighty yell arose when the West Ends scored their two runs! And how much mightier was the yell when the Crescents were released from the prospects of a coat of whitewash.

Poor fellow! He had it. After Saturday's game he asked ticket clerk Reger at the station for a ticket. "Where to?" he was asked. "West Ends 2—I mean Plainfield," was his mournful reply.

Umpire Quinn's decisions on Saturday gave very general satisfaction. It was he who umpired the Yale-Princeton games. He will umpire the remaining games of the West End-Crescent series.

A comparison of the strength of the two clubs as indicated by the game last Saturday is unquestionably favorable to the West End club. It is conceded by competent judges of both clubs that Gregg's pitching was simply pie for the West Ends, and all that saved him from being knocked out of the box was the condition of the weather. For instance: Riley's two-base hit in the sixth inning and O'Rourke's long fly which immediately followed would, with a dry ball, have gone over the left field fence. Gregg had better command of the wet ball than Harkins, yet he struck but one man out; Harkins struck out seven and gave three bases on balls. As to fielding, the clubs are fairly matched; the errors on both sides were partly excusable by reason of the wet grounds and ball. As to players, both clubs have recently made valuable acquisitions, the Crescents securing Hatfield and Lever, and the West Ends Riley, O'Rourke and Bowes. It is rumored, however, that the Crescents have secured "Cyclone" Ryan of the Norwich club for the remainder of the series. If this be true the game on Saturday will be closer if possible than the one here, but given a dry day, the West Ends should win.

Sold Liquor to a Minor.

Frank Linke was today convicted of illegal liquor selling. He was tried before City Judge Codington and a jury, on complaint of Police Captain Grant, who produced evidence to show that Linke's assistant, fifteen-year-old Garret Kiely, had sold six bottles of beer to fifteen-year-old Wm. Wilson. As it is against the law to sell liquor to minors, and as Captain Grant and the other city officials are determined to make all liquor sellers live up to the letter of their licenses, this transgression was speedily followed by Linke's arrest. The jury found Linke guilty, and Judge Codington announced that sentence would be pronounced Monday morning.

—Ex-Postmaster Littell, of Bound Brook, while at Mr. Combes' house near the Presbyterian cemetery at that place, yesterday, was attacked by a dog, which sank its teeth into his right leg, leaving imprints, but drawing no blood. Mr. Littell's wife died of lock jaw a few weeks ago.

Engineers at Gettysburg.

GETTYSBURG, Sept. 19.—The 15th and 50th New York Engineers dedicated their massive granite monument here. The monument represents a castle, the badge of the engineers corps, and stands on Meade avenue, on the field of the second and third days fight.

Germany Opposed to Slave Trading.

BERLIN, Sept. 19.—The Reichsanzeiger says that Germany is determined to continue as hitherto to relentlessly oppose slave hunting and professional trading in slaves, and she reserves the choice of the proper movement to further restrict slavery.

Postoffice Robbed.

BLOOMFIELD, N. J. Sept. 19.—Burglars broke into the postoffice in this place early in the morning and stole a quantity of stamps, stamped envelopes and registered letters. It is not known how much cash they secured.

What Davitt Thinks.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—Mr. Michael Davitt was interviewed in regard to the arrests. He took a very hopeful view of the situation, and thought the effect would be entirely favorable to the Irish cause. "If Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien," he said, "had deliberately set out to devise plans for increasing the popularity of the plan of campaign and heightening the prestige of the Land League, they could not have accomplished their purpose in any way more successfully than by inducing Mr. Balfour to take precisely the step that he has taken.

Parnellites Expect a General Raid.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The Parnellites anticipate a general raid following the arrests of O'Brien and Dillon, with a view to suppressing the League in all directions. Mr. Parnell has arranged for an early meeting of his followers in London. Messrs. T. P. O'Connor and James J. O'Kelly will probably take the berths on the Teutonic engaged for Messrs. O'Brien and Dillon.

Republican Nominations.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 19.—The Republican convention of Monroe County nominated Burton H. Davy for sheriff, Philetus Chamberlain for special county judge, Alexander McVein for treasurer, and Harrison C. Fuller for justice of sessions.

Saw Schlitz Cut His Throat.

PATERSON, N. J., Sept. 19.—Some men who were in Rogers' woods saw a German draw a razor from his pocket and cut his throat from ear to ear. The man staggered and fell. As he lay dying he managed to gasp out that his name was Jacob Schlitz and that he lived at College Point.

If report is to be relied on, the Chinese have still a long way to go before they will be in a position to avail themselves of the benefits of modern scientific progress. It is stated that the Imperial palace, by order of the young Emperor, was fitted throughout with electric lights. The Imperial Cabinet was called together to witness the formal opening of the new system of illumination. Instead, however, of their expressing admiration of the brilliant light, they stood aghast. This wonderful sheen, which came and went at the touch of a button, could only be the offspring of supernatural powers and was probably a machination of evil spirits. Thus in solemn conclave the mandarins decided, and in a few days the electrical plant was removed.

Good for young and old. We know of no better tonic for the system than Hires' Improved Root Beer. It is delicious, effervescent, sparkling, appetizing, and a helper of temperance. Satisfying the thirst, enriching the blood, and fortifying the system against the advances of disease. A 25 cent package makes five gallons. Sold everywhere.

THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR UNION.

A Successful First Meeting, Preliminary to the Great Revival.

A large and interested audience attended the first meeting of the Local Union of Young People's Societies for Christian Endeavor in Trinity Reformed church, last evening. The seven societies composing the Union were handsomely represented, and delegates were present from outside branches of their popular and flourishing organization.

The meeting was conducted by the Rev. Asa Reed Dilts, the President of the Local Union. The early part was devoted to a service of song and prayer. Special music was rendered by a union choir of fifty voices, under the leadership of M. Marvin Dunham, and there was congregational singing also. The choir music was very good, and evidenced careful preparation. The individual parts were pleasing and effective. Prayers were offered by various members of each Society, and passages of Scripture were read by Mr. Dilts. Two-minute reports from the Secretaries of the seven Societies were read. The Society of the First Presbyterian church was organized in April, 1887, with 18 members; it now has 41. The Congregational Society, which was organized December, 1885, with 49 members, now has 62. The Trinity Reformed had 41 members at its organization in October, 1885, and now has 164. The especially notable feature of this society is its remarkable hot weather record. The average attendance at the Monday night meetings in June was 108 each evening; in July and August, 104. The Park Avenue Baptist Society is a re-organization of the Young People's Association, which was as enfeebled as the present Society is strong. In November, 1888, when the Society was formed, the number of members was only 12; now it is 49. The Warren Union Mission Society began its existence in May 1888, with 25 members; it now numbers 57. Three members were converted last month. The Society of the New Market Baptist church has now 54 members, a gratifying growth over the single dozen of September, 1889. The Presbyterian Society of Dunellen counts 40 members. It had only 22 in October 1886, when it was founded. The total membership of the Local Union is therefore 467, as shown in an excellent report by Miss E. C. Benedict, the Local Union Secretary. It was organized April 24, 1890. The result of its organization has been to infuse new life and enthusiasm into the individual work.

Before introducing the two speakers of the evening, Mr. Dilts impressed upon the members of the Union the value of loyalty. He urged them to be loyal to Christ, loyal to the church universal, loyal to the church individual, loyal to the Christian Endeavor Society, loyal to the Local Union, and loyal to every one who needs Jesus Christ.

The Rev. W. C. Stinson, of Dunellen, and the Rev. C. L. Goodrich, of the Plainfield Congregational church, had been invited to speak on the subject, "How to Prepare for a Revival," and both made highly interesting addresses.

Mr. Stinson explained the different methods of different evangelists, and praised the local churches for their enterprise in securing the services of the Rev. B. Fay Mills, who will begin his great work in Plainfield in November. We must do more, however,—he said—than send for the man. We must send for the Master. We must pray for the baptism of the Holy Ghost and of fire. There were too many ecclesiastical ice-houses. We must arouse every energy, heap on the anthracite, and develop an undying fervor. We must each realize the importance of our individual responsibility, and must work and pray unceasingly, to bring about glorious results through the aid of our evangelistic leader.

Mr. Goodrich said that the greatest revival in Plainfield's history—that of Mr. Earl, years ago—had been preceded by weeks of special prayer; and Mr. Mills, in his conferences with the local pastors relative to his coming work here, advised that the clergymen and their congregations keep the revival constantly in mind, and think over it, and pray earnestly for its success. There must be personal work; each Christian, each member of the Union, must devote himself to assisting in the work of salvation. Let each one try to convert, by prayer and personal effort, such of his acquaintances as had not professed Christianity. During the weeks intervening between this meeting and the coming of Mr. Mills let each one be thinking, thinking, thinking, of ways to aid the work. The unity of this personal effort could not fail of marvelous results.

Caught The Hotel Breaker.

Officer Marsh yesterday arrested Bernard Bently, for breaking and entering Frederick Coombs' Hotel, Westfield, the night of September 5, last, and for stealing one gold watch, three boxes of cigars and the contents of the money drawer consisting of a dollar or two in silver; as told in THE PRESS at the time.

The officer recovered the watch, Bently having pawned it. He was taken before Justice Hart and committed to the county jail to await the action of the Grand Jury in October next.

It Was a Rainy Day, Anyway.

The boy who writes baseball news for the Westfield Leader, thinks Manager Lent has a claim against the Plainfield managers for losses incurred by the canceling of last Wednesday's game at Westfield. But the fact is the contrary is the case, because the Plainfield managers are out their $75 guarantee while Mr. Lent only loses the six or seven dollars that is Westfield's total expenditure at the gate.

PEACHES AND OTHER FRUIT.

The Late Peach Crop Damaged by Rain—Apples Very Scarce.

With the exception of a few small lots of peaches to come from the Hudson River Valley, the season's supply of fine table peaches is about at an end. All varieties of peaches are ripening this season a week or ten days earlier than usual. The recent rains, which extended all over those sections from which peaches are now coming, have seriously damaged the fruit. Had the weather been altogether favorable the supply this week would not have been very attractive to the eye. The storms cause all of them to crack in spots and ripen unevenly. This is the week to secure smocks, the variety so popular among housekeepers. There will be possibly a thousand or more baskets of these peaches from New Jersey. The best will sell at wholesale for nearly or quite $4 per half-bushel basket, and the commonest of them may be sold for as low as $1 per basket. There are some nice looking peaches on the fruit stands—white, red, and yellow. Upward of a thousand boxes of California clingstones have been sold at from $1.30 per box to $1.52. These boxes contained about eighty peaches each. They looked very much like peaches and tasted very much like something else, but they were handsome and sold well There are many white peaches from New Jersey that does not present a very attractive appearance, but purchasers will find them to be very good. From Western New York along the Lewiston Mountains, in Niagara county, quite a crop of Crawford Late, a variety planted very largely there, was expected. The first of them have made their appearance in the market. They are very sweet and of delicious flavor, but scarcely much larger than Seckel pears. No good peaches will come from there, and the Niagara peach crop may also be counted a failure.

The California Bartlett pears are the best of that variety to be had this year. This variety, grown anywhere in the East this season, is of very inferior quality, and it is out of the question to get any of the variety that are clear-skinned and free from worms. Yet the best Boston Bartletts, notwithstanding their many defects, now sell at wholesale for even a higher price than they were sold for last week, when in many cases they brought upward of $5 per bushel. Western Bartletts are of very poor quality, and nothing good is hoped for from them this year. Any good table pear will wholesale for upward of $6 per barrel, and fine quality Seckels will readily sell for upward of $10 per barrel.

Good apples are scarce. In the vicinity of Albany, along the Upper Hudson, there are a good many apples—for the season—and some good ones, but the Missouri apple crop must furnish almost the entire supply of fine grade apples this year. One of the dealers in apples, who buys and sells more apples probably than any other dealer in the country, who has spent several weeks in that State securing apples for this market, and for Europe, says the Missouri apples this season are nearly perfect. It is a very common apple that does not wholesale this week for upward of $2 per barrel, and any good-style apple wholesales for upward of $3 per barrel, while many barrels of choice apples wholesale for upward of $4. Grapes are abundant, good and cheap. From New York State the kind that will be most abundant is the Moore Favorite, Concords, and Hartfords, of the black variety, the Niagara and Marthas of the white variety, and Delaware of the red grapes. Good sound grapes—the Jersey Ives—can be had at wholesale for 3 cents per pound, while the best Niagaras and Delawares are wholesaled in some cases for as high as 15 cents per pound, and only the very best Concords (in fancy style of packages) can be wholesaled at above six or seven cents per pound.

To Crush Out Amateur-Professionals.

Plainfield bicyclists will be interested to learn that the League of American Wheelmen and the Amateur Athletic Union are likely to join hands to crush out the rising tendency among amateur wheelmen to enjoy the privileges of professionals and at the same time retain their amateur standing. The Racing Board of the League of American Wheelmen over a year ago were brought to recognize the need of such a change in their constitution as would prohibit this tendency, and a feeble attempt in this direction was made at the meeting of the League; but the opposition of the Union forced the League so to amend the new clause as really to make it the same as before. Now that the large athletic clubs are having trouble of this sort, it is probable that a law will be passed at the next meeting of the Union in Washington, October 11. Prominent wheelmen who have been interviewed on the subject express themselves as greatly in favor of such an amendment, now that both sides have decided to treat the matter; and the only reason that it was not attempted before was that it was next to impossible to obtain the proof necessary to a conviction, although it was known to be a fact that some of the best athletes in the various associations were drawing pay under the name of actual expenses.

Plainfield Choral Society.

Only a few more subscriptions can be received for the series of concerts to be given by this Society. As the number of subscriptions is necessarily limited, those wishing to subscribe should send their names promptly to H. O. Newman, Treasurer.

Ten dollars payable Oct. 1, secures four seats to each of the three concerts.

THE DANCING PROCESSION.

Description of a Quaint Annual Religious Fete at Echsternach.

While the Passion Play is going on at Oberammergau there has been going on in the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg the annual dancing procession of St. Willibrord, says the Brussels correspondent of the New York Tribune. It occurred at the small town of Echsternach on May 27, the Tuesday after Whitsuntide. St. Willibrord, who lived in the seventh century, was to the Netherlands, Femish and Lower Countries what St. Patrick was to Ireland. He carried the Christian faith to those regions, civilized them as much as it was possible in those barbarian times, and finally sought rest for his last day at Echsternach, where he founded an abbey. The legend says that when the saint died the marble tomb prepared for receiving his body was found to be too short; but that it was miraculously lengthened so that the saintly corpse could be laid in it. Tradition claims that when St. Willibrord returned at last from his holy pilgrimage to Echsternach the villagers could not restrain their joy, and demonstrated it by the sacred dances, which are renewed every year, two days after Whitsuntide. Only during the French revolution was the custom interrupted. It is now more than ever kept up, and 20,000 people took part in the latest ceremony. The peasants believe in the legend, according to which the saint punishes the indifferent and incredulous by inflicting their cattle with an epidemic, the efforts of which are like epilepsy.

The pilgrims arrive from all places within a radius of forty miles. Most of them come on foot, camping wherever they can, in open air or in barns. All among them who possess and can play upon musical instruments bring them along, such as fifes, drums, cornets, etc., and play on them as an accompaniment to the dance. In the morning all this crowd forms itself on the German territory, beyond the bridge which crosses the Sure, the river frontier between the Grand Duchy and Germany. A priest, who must have been born at Echsternach, addresses the crowd, places himself at its head, and the pilgrims begin to tramp on the bridge in the direction of the old church. The advance guard; preceded by a sexton dressed in red clerical robes, sings praises or litanies of St. Willibrord in a calm, dignified religious tone which strangely contrasts with the clamor of the thousand instruments which accompany the extraordinary dances of the people forming the bulk of the procession. Those dances are nothing but repeated jumps; and the highest jumps are considered the greatest evidence of devotion. The pilgrims advance slowly in rows, blocking up entirely the streets, women holding children in their arms, old people being supported on both sides by friendly assistants, peasants with satchels on their backs, containing provisions to last during the pilgrimage. All these people never cease for a moment to dance or rather to jump as high as they can until they reach the old church, where the priests bless the many articles they want to place under St. Willibrord's invocation. The pilgrims spend the remainder of the day in the streets of Echsternach, where a regular fete, somewhat like a Flemish kermesse, is held. They then take up again their tramp to their homes.

CASHING FORGED CHECKS.

A Sharp Practice That Has Become Very Common in New York.

The most curious criminal trade in this country is that of certain moneylenders who advance cash at usurious rates of discount on paper which they know to be forged. There are several of these miscreants among the habitues of Delmonico's, where they are as well known as their victims themselves. They rely for security on the fact that his family will take the forged paper up rather than allow the young scapegrace to be criminally exposed and punished.

One of the most notorious is now threatened with the loss of part of his plunder at least. His victim in this case was the son of a retired merchant of large means and unblemished social record. He secured from the usurer an advance of nearly $10,000 on three checks, apparently drawn by the father of the negotiator to his son's order. The forgery was, I am told, so flagrant that it might have been detected by a child. The money was paid on the checks, less a savage rate of interest, and was lost in a couple of days at the race-track. Then the young scamp became alarmed and made a clean breast of it to his father. The latter promptly shipped him out of the country to either Africa or South America — exactly where, however, is not currently known.

Then the family lawyer was called in and the usurer was summoned. He boldly demanded payment of the checks in full, under thre at of sending them in to the bank and so bringing the forgeries to light and securing the indictment of the forger. He was notified to go ahead, with the assurance that he would also be arrested for entering into a criminal conspiracy. Then he proved more amendable to a compromise, and it is believed that he will be paid the actual amount of cash he disbursed, about sixty per cent. of the alleged face value of the checks, for their surrender.—N. Y. World.

—The Germans say that much of the leather sold in London and other English cities is manufactured in Germany—trunks and purses particularly. England is still recognized as the market in which to secure the best boots for men and boys, but the footwear manufactured for ladies is simply atrocious, being neither cheap nor comely nor durable. The French women have pretty feet and shapely ankles, and they insist upon hosiery and boots that fit and are pleasing to the eye. So it is in France that these articles are to be found in the choicest quality and styles —in fact, in Paris you find that objects de vertu are unique only among womankind.—Chicago News.

FOREIGN GOSSIP.

—The white rose is the favorite flower in France this summer.

—There are from 30,000 to 40,000 German colonists in South Australia, and the number of German-born residents of South Australia equals the native-born residents.

—Longevity is no uncommon thing in Russia. In one year the deaths were reported of 858 persons between 100 and 105 years old; 130 petween 115 and 120 years old; and 3 between 150 and 156.

—The most monotonous city in its buildings is Paris, the houses there being almost all alike. An attempt is now being made to vary this by building houses of the style of the Renaissance and Louis XI., and hope is expressed that the example will be followed generally.

—During a recent thunderstorm in Paris, three flashes of lightning are said to have reached the top of the conductor of the Eiffel Tower simultaneously, resulting in a remarkable display and considerable vibration on the part of the big iron frame, but no apparent damage was done.

—A woman has been arrested in Liverpool who makes a business of robbing the state-rooms of Atlantic steamers. Her name is Catherine Wood, and she has crossed the Atlantic twenty-five times. Every crossing has resulted in misfortune to some passenger, who has brought up at the end of the journey short in money or jewels.

—The clove tree was introduced into Zanzibar about the year 1830, and its cultivation now forms the chief industry of the islands of Zanzibar and Pemba. The chief supply of cloves is obtained from these islands. Consul Pratt, who has lately written a report on the clove-culture of Zanzibar, says that a ten-year-old plantation should produce an average of twenty pounds of cloves to a tree. Trees of twenty years frequently produce upwards of one hundred pounds each.

—In Southwestern France a great population is supported upon the once barren, drifting sands, now fixed by means of plantations of the maritime pine. This yields resin and a cheap illuminating oil distilled from it, besides railway ties, pit props, telegraph poles and fuel. The pit props go to England mainly, 175,000 being the annual shipment to that market. The ties and telegraph poles are mostly used in France. Considerable of the young pine is sent to England to be made into paper.

—A curious misdemeanor has lately developed at Manchester, England, that has been adjudged a crime by the courts. This new wrong-doing is called "scuttling," and consists in a body of young men, and even girls, lying in wait for obnoxious fellow-workmen or for "scabs," and hustling, beating and kicking them upon the public streets. It has become so common in that city that the magistrates have inflicted severe sentences upon several girls and young men, for the purpose of breaking up the practice.

—New American "buyers" in Paris are invariably astounded at the supremacy of the French woman in wholesale business. Monsieur may display the goods and descant on their virtues and beauty, but when the sale is finally to be negotiated he calls in madame. He would not dare to risk her certain displeasure by agreeing to a price on his own responsibility. Every wholesale millinery house in Paris and many other branches of the dry goods business are completely in the hands of women. They prove themselves the shrewdest of bargainers and build up colossal fortunes, like merchants of American cities.

THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

It Contains an Area Exceeding Eleven Millions of Square Miles.

Up to a few weeks ago the British empire comprised an area of a little more than 9,000,000 square miles, or a small fraction in excess of the dimensions of the domain over which is extended the sway of the Czar. To-day British territory reaches an area exceeding 11,000,000 square miles. The treaty with Germany, by which the British "sphere of influence" extends from the eastern coast of Africa at Zanzibar as far back as the great lakes and from the first degree of south latitude to the southern boundary of Egypt, exclusive of the Congo Free State and the region over which Italy presumes to exercise a sort of protectorate, adds about 2,000,000 square miles to the domain of the Queen of England and Empress of India, and puts that potentate well in advance of Alexander III. in the game of territorial acquisition.

It is only when a comparison is made with some of the great States of Europe and of the Western Hemisphere that the enormous dimensions of the British empire can be appreciated. The extent of European Russia is slightly in excess of 2,000,000 square miles, that of Brazil is about 3,000,000, while the United States, including Alaska, is about 3,600,000 square miles. China is still larger that any of the nations last mentioned, having an area exceeding that of the United States by nearly 500,000 square miles. But the British empire, within its new and enlarged boundaries, is three times as capacious as the United States. Out of that domain could be carved a territory as large as this country, Brazil and China combined leaving enough over to make up two or three little states like France, Germany or Austria. The empire of course is not as homogeneous as any of the nations mentioned, and the ties which bind its widely-separated branches together are far looser and more shadowy than those which hold the vast possessions of Russia in allegiance to the Muscovite. Yet the domain over which Victoria rules in theory at least is vastly broader than that over which Alexander exercises supremacy, and is more widely extended and diversified than the world of civilized, semi-civilized and barbarious states which in the days of Julius and Augustus acknowledged allegiance to Rome.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

PUTTING BABY TO SLEEP.

It's Very Easy Provided Papa Is a Patient Creature.

DID YOU ever try to get a baby to sleep? Not an ordinary, phlegmatic, spiritless baby, that will fasten itself to the perforated end of a rubber cap slipped over a quart-bottle of milk and vulgarly gorge itself into a gluttonish snooze; but a real, lively, rollicking rascal of a baby who doesn't intend snoozing away any more of his valuable time than he has to.

There have been evenings, I dare say, when the pleasure of putting baby to sleep has been yours. Your wife has had a sick headache, or she has wanted to "run over to mother's," or into one of the neighbor's houses for something, and you have said: "Oh, no, of course not," when she has asked if you would mind getting baby to sleep after she has undressed him.

Perhaps, if it is a first experience, you are rather glad of the chance to convince your wife that she has fallen into the habit of wasting a deal of time in getting that youngster to sleep evenings. You have always felt and said that you could get him to sleep in a fourth of the time your wife spends. All it requires is a little firmness. The baby wants to simply be made to understand that it is bed-time and that he must go to sleep. That is your theory, and now you'll put it into practice, particularly as there is a long editorial in the evening paper and an article in the magazine you brought home with you that you want to read this evening.

Well, mamma departs, and you take the baby, robed in his little white "nighty" — the nearest thing to an angel there is on this earth, no matter how he may cut up and tear around in the hour to come.

You pick him up and say fondly, but firmly:

"Now papa's little baby must go right to sleep."

"Goo, goo," he says, which is his way of saying "good-night," and also his way of saying forty other things.

"Now, baby, shut his little eyes," you say as you cuddle him up in your arms.

"Goo, goo," he says, with his eyes wide open and a sort of intimation in them that he will shut them when he gets ready to do so, and not before.

"Baby," you say a little more severely, "papa wants to read his paper and baby must go to sleep."

If ever a baby said "I won't do it" with his heels yours says it about this time for the way he lets his little pink heels fly into the air means nothing less than a distinct and positive "I won't."

ON THE ONE HUNDREDTH LAP.

You then hold him firmly in your arms, and he begins to squirm. He writhes and wriggles with unexpected strength and pluckily contends for freedom, until you let him go through sheer admiration of his grit.

"Goo, goo," he says, which this time means, "Ah, ha! I'll show you a thing or two."

"Baby, dear," you say plaintively, "won't papa's baby go to sleep now?—that's a good baby."

Then the good baby manifests his intention of getting down and crawling all over the floor. Foiled in this, he concludes to crawl all over you. His little fingers clutch your beard and you haven't the heart to shake him off, not even when he pulls so hard that your eyes are full of tears. Then he pokes his fingers into your nose, eyes and ears, giving the result of his investigations in a series of gurgling "goo-goos," indicating that he is as wide-awake as he ever was in his life, and he thinks he can hold out three or four hours yet. You haul him down into your arms and say:

"Now, if baby don't go right to sleep papa will have to whip. Shall papa whip baby?"

The "goo, goo" he now screeches out means: "Do so at your own risk." Whip him! There is more or less of the brute in every man, but you inwardly thank God that your brutal tendencies dont run in the direction of pounding babies. If they did your wife is deserving of a divorce free of charge and every thing you have on earth as alimony.

You simply cuddle him up in your arms and begin rocking him to and fro in such a manner that he couldn't go to sleep if he wanted to, no more than you could if lashed to a trip-hammer. Then you sing every thing you know, from "Rock of Ages" down to "Annie Rooney," all in one key, for, ten to one, you can't sing a note correctly to save your life.

This concert lasts an hour and a half and baby lives through it all and has vitality enough to pop up at the close of it with a cheery:

"Ya, ya! Goo, goo!"

Then you shake him a little and say:

"Now, young man, I've had just about enough of this. You're simply got to go to sleep! Go to sleep!"

Now you've made him cry. He slips limply down into your arms and opens his mouth in one prolonged yell, followed by another and another until he has emitted about a thousand of them. You walk the floor with him; you bounce him up and down; you coax and wheedle and scold and fume and, I dare say, swear a little.

By and by his cries grow weaker and fewer; you feel his little form relaxing in your arms, his little limbs hang limply, his curly head lies heavily on your shoulder, his eyelids droop slowly, and, with that most pitiful of sounds, the sobbing of a child in its sleep, the little fellow wanders into dreamland. You are free to lay him down now and take up your book or your paper, but you don't always do it. Sometimes you simply sit down gently with the baby still in your arms and your eyes fixed on his flushed little face. You are sorry you made him cry. Every one of those sleeping sobs goes right to your heart.

There you sit for an hour, may be, looking into his face with a sort of divine tenderness in your heart that makes the troublesome little bit of humanity in your arms a treasure for which you would lay down your life.

P. S.—I forgot to say that after you have very carefully laid him down and crawled away from his cradle on your hands and knees so as not to awaken him, you are paralyzed by a loud and distinct "Ya! ya! ya!" and you have to do it all over again.—Detroit Free Press.

SORRY SHE SPOKE.

HOOFNACKLE.

How Hot Weather Caused Hard Feelings Between Two Citizens.

[Translated for this paper from the St. Louis German Laterne, by Alex. E. Sweet.]

N my opinion, Mr. Editor, this has been an awful tough summer on fat people like myself, although I can stand it better than some others I know. I am used to having things made hot for all the year around. I have been married to Mrs. Hoofnackle now twenty-seven years. If it wasn't for that I would not be able to stand 100 degrees in the shade as well as I do.

The coolest place I have been able to find in St. Louis is Zweibeer's saloon, which is quite convenient to my place of residence. A few choice spirits hold a regular session there every day, and occasionally we have an extra session. Among them is Mr. Smiley, the undertaker, who has a studio on the next block; Mr. Yawper, an auctioneer, and several others. All of them suffer more or less from the heat and at times the conversation drifts into that channel. Such original remarks as "Is this hot enough for you?" "What do you think? It is 104 in the shade right now;" "I perspire very much in this weather—how is it with you?" Then they all say in chorus, "Fearfully! I'm just covered with prickly heat. I look like a boiled lobster." Perhaps another member of the little coterie comes in and says: "Gentlemen, it is 104 in the shade. Is this hot enough for you?" etc.

However, one day we had a little change in the programme. Zweibeer has had an enormous ice-box or refrigerator built in his back yard. It is almost as big as a freight-car. On one side he keeps his kegs of beer and in the other all his eatables. And may be he ain't proud of that refrigerator. He does not talk of much else. I believe he would rather lose his wife than that refrigerator. It is almost impossible for anybody to come near the saloon without his compelling them to inspect that refrigerator and listen to what he has to say about its many advantages.

Well, there happened to be a couple of elegantly-dressed Germans from Texas in Zweibeer's saloon. They were drinking bottled beer, and somebody suggested some lunch. One of the Texans remarked that he didn't care for lunch this hot weather, as meats were so liable to spoil; besides there were so many flies. This put a keen edge on Zweibeer, regarding it as a reflection on his ice-box, so he stretched forth his hand, like a prophet of old, and spoke:

"I vill concede, schentlemens, dot on de average mebbe you vas right, but in my case you vas mishtaken. I have at great exsphense had constructed a palace ice-box vich vas simply incomprehensible. Every ding vat is put in it remains choost so sweet and fresh ash it never vas pefore. I dells you schentlemens ven you chost shticks your nose refrigerator in you gets you will get an appetite choost de same ash ven you dakes a tonic. Kom mit me, schentlemen!" and he was not satisfied until he dragged them out into the yard and pulled open the door of the palace ice-box. Then Zweibeer started back, for sitting on a chair in the cool interior of the ice-box was Undertaker Smiley, taking a quiet snooze. Zweibeer reached in seizing the startled undertaker by the neck, jerked him into the yard, and shook him as a terrier does a rat, saying:

"Vot you means mit dot shabby trick. I'll preak every pone in your body. Vy don't you go into your own ice boxes mit your corpses ven you vants to schnooze?"

The exasperated saloon keeper and his former friend Smiley, the undertaker, were separated by the gentlemen from Texas who, for some reason or other, did not care for any lunch. The insulted undertaker subsequently took me aside and said:

"Mr. Hoofnackle, isn't it an outrage the way that animal treated me this morning? There is no trace of gentlemanly instinct, no refinement about the brute. If I didn't know that in a short time he is going to die from Bright's disease anyhow, and that he is liable to drop dead any minute from this heat and apoplexy, I'd never put my foot inside of his saloon again, but I don't propose to cut off my nose to spite my face. Sooner or later, I'll have him in my ice box, the low pitiful scoundrel. That will be my satisfaction for his brutality to me this morning." Your friend, JACKSON P. HOOFNACKLE.

Not His Boots.

A—Did you hear that the thief and desperado, Buckshot Jack, had been killed?

B—No. Died with his boots on, I suppose.

A—No, indeed. He died with another man's boots on. Robbed a shoe store.—Texas Siftings.

Praise Indeed.

Father—I tell you, young man, it is pretty hard for a father to see his daughter leave home and take up life's burdens with a young man.

Young Man—Well, Emily is an especially good girl.

Father—Good! Why, sir, she's worth her weight in ice.—Judge.

Overtopped.

"Am I still the dearest thing on earth to you, George?" asked the young wife, sentimentally.

"No," replied George, who was at that moment inspecting his ice bill.—Figaro.

A Paraphrased Order.

Toothless Guest—If you've got some extremely tender steak, you may bring me some.

Hardened Waiter—Slab 'f yearling fer a gummer.—Judge.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS.

HOW GRIZZLIES ARE TRAPPED.

A Very Dangerous Business—The Fiercest Wild Animal in the World.

It is safe to maintain that the grizzly bear is the fiercest wild animal in the world. The tiger has the advantage that it can climb a tree, but otherwise the grizzly is far superior in strength and ferocity. It has also greater tenacity of life, and the man who kills a full-grown grizzly in single-handed combat must have exceptional skill and daring, whereas thousands of tigers have been killed by ordinary sportsmen.

There is nothing the hunter, miner or prospector of the West dreads like the grizzly, and he kills or traps him at every opportunity. There is more danger in trapping the grizzly than there is in chasing him with the rifle.

The traps are ponderous iron things, weighing forty or fifty pounds. The jaws are worked with springs so stiff that it takes two good, strong men to set them. To the trap a long chain is firmly secured, which is in turn fastened to one end of a heavy piece of timber by driving an iron ring in the wood until it is six inches or so from the end, so it can not be pulled off.

This piece of timber serves as a hindrance to the bear when the trap is sprung on his foot and he retreats to, or tries to retreat to, his tangled haunts.

A great deal of cunning has to be used in setting a trap for a grizzly, for he is as suspicious as a fox, and will frequently pass by a tempting morsel that has been used for bait for a trap, because he has made up his mind that danger is lurking beneath it.

The grizzy never hesitates to risk danger that confronts him openly, like a hunter, dog or other enemy, but a suspicious-looking object, the nature of which he does not understand, will quickly start him off about some other business.

The men who make a business of trapping grizzlies set their traps miles back in the great, gloomy forests, where the animals like have their lairs among the fallen timbers, over which no one can pass except on foot, and then only with great difficulty.

To come upon an ugly grizzly in such a region, an animal weighing as much as an ox, and not only ready but anxious for a fight, is something that means business to the hunter. A grizzly bear will get out of a trap nine times out of ten, if he is not overtaken within three hours after he is caught.

It is to lessen the danger of this that the wooden clog is fastened to the trap, and always with the chain at one end of the stick. Thus it follows the bear endwise as he makes his way and clears obstructions that would catch and hold it if it were pulled along with the chain fastened at the middle. A grizzly is nearly always caught in the trap not far from the tip end of one of his fore paws.

On being caught he rushes with all the speed he can summon, and in a tremendous rage, for the nearest swamp, which is never far away in a region where successful grizzly trapping is to be expected.

The hold the trap has on him is not one that will withstand every resistance, and the bear's exertions to get away are great and persistent. He seems to know that his life depends on ridding himself of his incumbrance.

As he tears onward through the forest he mows great swaths in the underbrush. He drags the trap against trees, logs and rocks, and whenever it holds fast to them for a few seconds he jerks and tugs his imprisoned foot, trying to tear it loose. If the clog were tied in the middle it would soon catch crosswise between two trees, and then the bear would tear loose with one or two lunges forward of his great body and escape to the swamp.

The further a grizzly bear goes on his furious march without ridding himself of the trap, the greater his rage becomes. He will rush against obstructing trees and tear them with his teeth, sometimes biting the trunk half away.

A trapped grizzly's trail has been followed through the thick timber, revealing sapling after sapling chewed to the ground as completely as a chopper could have felled it, by these infuriated beasts. To come up with a half-ton grizzly bear while he is in such a temper is like standing on the edge of a cyclone.

The trail of a trapped grizzly generally leads the trapper a long way through the forest, and more than likely a mile or so into a swamp, where he can see but a few feet in any direction.

He is constantly expecting the bear to rise up somewhere about him and charge upon him like an avalanche. There have been times when trappers have come up with the bear at the very moment when it had succeeded in tearing loose from the trap, and in such cases the hunter's life is not worth a moment's purchase.—Basil Restern, in Golden Days.

CHIMNEYS, to be safe from fire and draw well, should be not less than sixteen inches square inside and built up from the cellar. Use good brick with clay, instead of mortar, up to the comb. Plaster it inside with clay mixed with salt. Top with the best brick well wet and laid in cement. Do not let wood come too close to the brick, and don't let the stovepipe come nearer than eighteen inches to the ceiling.

"No More Doctors for Me."

"They said I was consumptive, sent me to Florida, told me to keep quiet, no excitement, and no tennis. Just think of it. One day I found a little book called 'Guide to Health,' by Lydia E. Pinkham, and in it I found out what ailed me. So I wrote to her, got a lovely reply; she told me just what to do, and I am in splendid health now. She informed me that she likes to receive such letters of confidence, as they appeal to her as a mother, and how glad she is to have the records of her life's experience among women made available to all women. These records are the largest in the world, and contain facts that cannot be found elsewhere. Thus will her noble work be perpetuated."

"Why, Are You Sick?"

"I know precisely how you feel; it is that nervous, irritable feeling, your back troubles you, and when you try to read a little your head aches. Isn't that so? I knew it. Oh, bother the doctor! Get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and take it faithfully as I have done. I've been through this thing myself, but am never troubled now."

"I am Sure It Would Help Them."

Thousands of delicate young ladies, employed in fashionable dry goods, millinery, and other stores, others in mills, factories, workshops, etc., where through the long day they are constantly on their feet. Among this class some of the worst cases of female diseases occur, and when their ill-health becomes apparent they are at once discharged.

The society girls who are whirled along in the excitement of fashionable life, and who overlook those minor ailments, that if not checked are death to health and beauty.

Actresses, singers, and others of the profession, do not always think; they rush into the tide of popularity regardless of all save fame and fortune. How often we read of some favorite actress, "Ill in London, nervous prostration," etc.

Prudent women, who best understand their ailments, find in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a remedy for all those distressing ills that require prompt and effective treatment as a guaranty to good health.

TERRIBLE DISASTER

A Reading Express Train Plunges Into the River.

MANY PEOPLE WERE KILLED.

A Scene Never to be Forgotten by Those who Survived.

Two Carloads of Injured—Ghastly Search for the Dead and Wounded—Bodies Still in the Schuylkill—Workmen Hunting for Victims—Partial List of the Killed and Injured.

READING, Pa., Sept. 20.—The Williamsport express train left the main Philadelphia and Reading station in this city at 5:55 o'clock last evening, ten minutes late, with two baggage cars, one Pullman parlor car, four day coaches and one sleeper attached to the engine in the order named. The train was packed with people, every car being crowded.

The train was running at a high speed, thirty-eight or forty miles per hour, when, without a moment's warning, it dashed around a sharp curve into the rear of a coal train that had been wrecked but a few minutes before.

There was an awful crash, the passenger engine leaped high in the air and then toppled over and rolled fifty feet down the steep embankment in to the Schuylkill River, dragging with it four cars.

The collision of the trains was instantaneous. The engine was plunged beneath the surface of the rushing waters, and the engineer, John White, of Pottsville, Pa., and John Templin, his fireman, of the same place, were pinned beneath the frightful wreck. The cars turned over three times and two were submerged at the first crash.

Heartrending Shrieks.

The air was immediately filled with heartrending shrieks and pathetic cries, then in a moment all was silence. Not a passenger escaped from the first Pullman car.

The cars were crushed into splinters and do not bear a semblance of their original shape.

Very few, if any, of the ill-fated passengers escaped without some injury—the wreck was complete.

The doctors on duty at the wreck estimate that at least forty dead bodies are still under the wrecked cars in the river and that it will be impossible to get them out before this afternoon.

The Killed and Injured.

The following is a list of the dead that have been identified:

William D. Shomo, Reading; John White, engineer, Pottsville; James Templin, fireman, Pottsville; Harry Logan, conductor, Pottsville; David Augstadt, Mahanoy City, died after being taken from the wreck; E. W. Logan, baggage master, Shenandoah.

The injured are: Harrison Rimand, Philadelphia, leg broken and internally injured; Joseph Southwood, Centralia, badly cut and injured; James F. Merkel, Bethlehem, badly cut about head and internally injured; John Thornton, Leesport, badly cut about head and body seriously injured; Joseph Noll, Shenandoah, cut about head and left shoulder broken; Frank B. Holl, manager of Frank Mayo's dramatic company, cut about head and body and bruised about arms and legs; John Carroll, St. Clair, back hurt and internally injured; Joseph Ashfield, Mahanoy City, bruised about body and legs; William Glassmayer, Port Clinton, badly cut about breast; Thomas Cooney, Philadelphia, head and legs injured; Robert Cotton, Pottstown, injured internally; Samuel Shellengerger, Hamburg, legs injured; B. W. Cithler, Girardville, foot and leg mashed; John Doolick, Mt. Carmel, hurt internally and hand smashed; W. W. Johnston, Shenandoah, head badly cut and leg broken; George Sanders, Reading, badly hurt about back and neck; Benjamin Franklin Beecher, Shenandoah, left hip badly cut and leg hurt; James Bernhart, Shenandoah, left hip crushed and legs hurt; John Hess, Mahanoy City, legs badly hurt; David G. Young, Mahanoy City, head badly cut and legs sprained; Lyman Dick, Hamburg, both legs broken; Dr. B. F. Salade, New Ringgold, right arm badly hurt; Jacob Ulmer, Pottsville, both legs broken; Samuel Coomb, Mahanoy City, badly hurt about body and leg broken; William Simmers, Ashland.

Robbing the Dead.

Two Italian laborers working on a contract near by were detected in robbing the dead and dying, and they were arrested by Detective Wunch of this city.

The scene was one of great horror, and can be better imagined than described. The cries of the imprisoned passengers were heartrending. It was a scene never to be forgotten by those who participated and survived. Some of the passengers managed to crawl out of their prison and arouse the neighborhood.

Caring for the Injured.

The injured had their wounds dressed on the bank and those who live near were taken to their homes and those who reside in this section were brought to the Reading hospitals. The company put about 200 men at work in getting out the dead and dying.

Mr. Shome, who was killed, was worth over half a million dollars, being a large owner of real estate and one of the directors of the Citizen's Bank and one of the owners of the Academy of Music.

Engineer White took Engineer Lew Heller's run, the latter having been killed at the Tuckerton wreck a few months ago.

CONVICTS ON A SPREE.

They Find a Cask of Whiskey and Get Intoxicated.

SING SING, N. Y., Sept. 20.—A number of convicts in the prison were employed in unloading a carload of rags in the prison yard yesterday afternoon, and while they were taking the rags out they discovered a small cask filled with whiskey.

They kept the matter quiet and placed the keg at one side of the car. The prisoners one after another paid frequent visits to the interior of the car, and suddenly, to the surprise of the guards, the men became hilarious.

The guard investigated the matter, and entering the car found that the keg of whiskey had been opened and almost drained of its contents. The men were having a glorious spree.

They were immediately brought into line and despatched to their cells.

Michael Brown, a 10-year convict for burglary, was helplessly drunk and had to be carried to his cell. The remainder of the whiskey was poured into the Hudson River.

BELL BOYS CONFESS.

How the Bookmaker's Money Box was Spirited Away.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Nearly all the money taken from the box at the Vendome Hotel has been recovered. The bell boys, Oscar Matthews and Henry Cassen, have confessed. During the excitement caused by the loss of Helen Dauvray's dog the clerk placed the box on the counter. One of the bell boys took it, handed it over to the other and together they broke it open with a chisel and threw the empty box away.

The accused boys were brought to the Jefferson Market Police Court, where they were remanded back to police headquarters at the request of Inspector Byrnes, and who will probably make public the full confession of the boys. Just how much of the money or bonds have been recovered is known only to the police.

The Dempsey-Fitzsimmons Meeting.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Jack Dempsey is out with a statement that he will fight Fitzsimmons with skin gloves at either the Puritan Athletic Club of Long Island City or the Olympic Athletic Club of New Orleans, whichever offers the largest purse, or in a fist fight to a finish on neutral ground for $10,000 a side and whatever purse is made up. At present the Puritan purse, $11,500, is the largest one offered, but it is probable that the fight will be at the Olympic Club's house, as Fitzsimmons is under promise to fight nowhere except at the California Athletic Club or the Olympic.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 20.—Richard W. Goodchild, of Bayonne, a patient in the State Lunatic Asylum, committed suicide. An attendant had seven mild patients out walking. Goodchild being one of the number, and in the rear of the line. A hay wagon passing at the moment, he threw himself under the wheels and his neck was broken. He died instantly. Goodchild was a wealthy real estate broker, and had been in the institution eight months.

Poisoned at a Marriage Feast.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 20.—Forty guests were poisoned at the wedding supper of W. G. Berry Hill and Miss Margary McCarroll, near Monongahela City on Wednesday night. The repast was made up principally of canned goods, of which the guests ate heartily. Next day all were taken ill, and the physicians in the neighborhood were kept busy applying remedies. All are now out of danger.

Tried to Die in a Cell.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Sept. 20.—Lizzie Lee was arrested last night charged with being drunk. She was put in a cell in the Grove street station and attempted to commit suicide by choking herself to death by tying a belt around her neck. Death would have resulted in a short time had she not been discovered. She was sent to Snake Hill for thirty days.

Great Rejoicing at Galveston.

GALVESTON, Tex., Sept 20.—The receipt of the news that the President has signed the Deep Water bill, which practically gives Galveston $6,200,000 for the improvement of her harbor, has caused the wildest enthusiasm here. The city was illuminated last night with pyrotechnics, torchlight processions crowded the streets, and brass bands and tin horns added to the general din.

EXCITEMENT AT A FAIR.

Hot Chase for an Italian Who Assaulted a Little Girl.

NORTH ADAMS, Mass., Sept. 20.—Considerable excitement was occasioned at the Fair grounds here by the arrest of the Italian who made a criminal assault on a little girl near Blackington some two weeks ago. The girl saw him on the grounds and pointed him out to an officer. The man ran, but after a hot chase through the woods and wading the river he was captured.

A crowd attempted to take him from the officers in an attempt to lynch him, and a terrible struggle ensued, during which the Italian's clothing was torn from him. Finally the officers locked him up. He was thoroughly identified.

A merry-go-round on the grounds when in operation carrying a large crowd of women and children broke down, owing to the gearing giving way. One woman's leg was severely crushed and about twenty others were more or less injured.

A MINISTER'S WAYWARD SON.

He Steals into the Pastoral Residence and Escapes with Diamonds.

JERSEY CITY, N. J. Sept. 20.—Pastor Freund, of the German Lutheran Independent Church in Hoboken was awakened ae an early hour at his home on Hudson street by the presence of some one in his room.

He found his son Charles, twenty years old, who had been leading a wild life away from home for a year past, searching the room for valuables. The pastor grappled with the young man, who broke loose and made his escape.

The father found that about $500 worth of diamonds and valuables had been taken. The son had forced an entrance through a cellar window and had arranged a rope from the bedroom window to facilitate his exit. The police are looking for him.

Not Tasted Food for 173 Days.

WHITEHALL, Pa., Sept. 20.—Mrs. Adam Wuchter has passed her 173d day since she tasted food or drink in any form. This is vouched for by her physicians, who cannot account for her wonderful tenacity of life except that she is possessed of a phenomenally strong constitution. Her condition is gradually growing worse, her lower extremities are cold like those of a dead person, and her vitality is at an exceedingly low ebb.

Escaped from State Prison.

AUBURN, N. Y., Sept. 20.—Benjamin Muldoon of Syracuse, who was serving an eighteen years' sentence for burglary, escaped from the prison at 1:30 in the morning. Muldoon was assisting in repairing the engine in the hollow ware shop and on a pretence of going to the closet sneaked from the shop and by means of a ladder scaled the wall and let himself down outside by means of an iron hook and rope.

Cal Woods to Die by Electricity.

LAKE GEORGE, Sept. 20.—The jury in the case of Cal Woods, tried for the murder of Pasco, brought in a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree. The jury was out only fifteen minutes. The prisoner was immediately sentenced to be executed by electricity at Dannemora Prison during the week of November 3rd. Wood was totally unconcerned, but his wife wept and broke down upon hearing the sentence.

Approved by the President.

CRESSON, Pa., Sept. 20.—The President has approved the Anti-Lottery and River and Harbor Appropriation bills. He also attached his approval to the resolutions adopted by Congress in eulogy of Hon. Samuel J. Randall and David Wilbur and N. W. Nutting. The President has recognized Francisco Lambertinghi as Consul-General for Italy at San Francisco.

Superintendent Porter's Illness.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Superintendent of the Census Robert P. Porter, who has been suffering for several days with an attack of pleurisy, is better. While his illness was serious, it is thought that the critical point has been safely passed. He took some nourishment to-day for the first time in five days.

Birchall Indicted for Murder.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Sept. 20.—The Grand Jury rendered a true bill against J. Reginald Birchall for the murder of Fred C. Benwell at Niagara Falls. Unless something extraordinary happens, the case will be taken up Monday morning. Birchall's wife visited him in jail to-day. She is fast failing in health.

The Slavin-McAuliffe Fight.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Both Slavin and McAuliffe are in the finest trim. The committee last night examined the gloves brought by McAuliffe from America and voted them superior to any of English make. There is no doubt that the referee will pass them. The ring will be enlarged to nineteen feet.

Killed while Eating Supper.

THREE RIVERS, Que., Sept. 20.—Mrs. Gervais, of Pointe du Lac, nine miles from here, was shot and killed while sitting at the supper table with her husband, last evening. The shot was fired through the window. There is no clue to the party who did the shooting, and no cause can be ascertained for the act.

Large Barley Exports.

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 20.—In anticipation of the McKinley bill coming into force on October 1st, barley is being shipped from here to Oswego in great quantities. Several schooners have been chartered. The grain is being taken across for two cents a bushel, and some shippers would be willing to pay three cents.

DILLON AND O'BRIEN

The Irish Leaders Think Balfour Has Blundered.

SIR CHARLES RUSSELL'S VIEWS.

He Believes the Accused Will be Able to Have the Proceedings Quashed.

Two Other Members of Parliament Arrested—Five Hundred Turks Drowned—Osman Pasha Among the Lost—France Receives a Big Order for Rifles from Russia—Another Decoration for Caprivi.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—A study of the warrant upon which Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien were arrested shows that it fails to specify with any particularity the offences for which the arrests were ordered. The document is verbose and clumsy in style and matter.

Mr. Healy believes that it is fatally defective, and that if the accused are granted an appeal they will be able to have the proceedings quashed.

Sir Charles Russell, the eminent barrister, apparently takes the same view, for in a speech at Darlington last night he referred to the shadowy nature of the charges and said that similar writs had been set aside in the past. This being so, he asked, "Why might not a like fate await the present proceedings?"

The raising of this question by lawyers of repute has caused some uneasiness among the Conservatives. The Globe, for instance, expresses the hope that a step so certain to concentrate attention upon Irish affairs and to rekindle the flames of passion which were gradually expiring, has not been taken without ample legal evidence as a basis. A blunder in a matter of this importance would have deplorable results.

MORE IRISHMEN ARRESTED.

Dillon Says the American Mission Is What Bothered the Government.

DUBLIN, Sept. 20.—The proceedings against Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien were on warrants of arrest, but in the cases of the other accused Nationalists only summonses have been issued.

Mr. Dillon, in an interview dwells upon this fact as proving that the Government's object was to prevent Mr. O'Brien and himself from going to America.

Mr. Patrick O'Brien, Mr. Dalton, Members of Parliament, and Mr. John Cullinan were arrested last night at Kingstown on the warrants issued at the same time as those for William O'Brien and John Dillon.

Leading members of the Nationalist party are constantly calling at the office of the League and much satisfaction is expressed at the turn affairs have taken, and there is great rejoicing over the signal advantage the course pursued by the Government has given the cause.

The "Freeman's Journal" commenting on the arrests of Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien say: "If they were intended to stop the visit of those gentlemen to the United States they were a shameful confession of weakness and discomfiture and a piece of imbecility." "The arrests," the Freeman's Journal says, "will give the Irish campaign a most invigorating and exhilarating stimulus."

OVER 500 DROWNED.

A Turkish Man-of-War Sinks—Osman Pasha Perishes.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 20.—There is great excitement here over the foundering at sea of the Turkish man-of-war Ertzogroul and the drowning of the crew of 500.

Osman Pasha, whose victory over the Russians at Plevna gave him a high rank as a fighting general, was on board and was lost. He had been on an official visit to Japan, having been intrusted with a special mission from the Sultan to the Mikado.

The progress of the Ertzogroul since she left Constantinople for the East, many months ago, has been a most dignified and ludicrous one. Leaving Turkey short of money, it was understood that supplies were to be sent for her use to the ports at which she was to call, with the result that her sojourn in those countries was indefinitely prolonged, as the officers at home were not able to keep their promises.

In this way she lost some of her crew, and her officers were many times on the verge of rebellion, induced by starvation, while the governors of the cities visited refused to remit harbor dues and grant other privileges that were of right due her as a Turkish man-of-war, on the ground that she was not sailing in that character. There was not powder enough on board to enable her crew to fire the regulation salutes.

War Signs in Time of Peace.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—France has entered into a contract to supply the Russian Government with an enormous number of rifles. According to the terms of the contract 500,000 of the weapons will be delivered within eighteen months.

The Public Excluded at Buckingham.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The Queen has declined to allow the public admittance to the gardens of Buckingham Palace during the concerts of the Guards' band.

Another Decoration for Caprivi.

BERLIN, Sept. 20.—The Emperor of Austria has personally conferred upon Chancellor von Caprivi the decoration of the Grand Cross of St. Stephen.

Two Families Evicted.

DUBLIN, Sept. 20.—Four families were evicted from the Glensharrold estates last evening. There was no resistance.

MILLIONS PAID OUT.

Largest Balance Ever Received by the New York Clearing House.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Assistant Manager Sherer, of the Clearing House, received from the Sub-Treasury, in balance of the regular daily accounts, the extraordinary sum of $11,500,000.

This balance was in payment of checks drawn on the United States for interest, bonds, pensions and other liabilities of the Government, paid into or deposited at the various city banks. This money will go into circulation through the banks and will help to relieve the monetary stringency.

The bureau of the Deputy Assistant Treasurer of the United States, stationed in this city, was crowded to-day with persons desirous of disposing of their 4½ and 4 per cent. bonds at the rates offered by the Government.

LOUISE MICHEL RESTING.

The Noted Agitator Glad of an Opportunity to Recuperate.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Louis Michel, the noted Anarchist agitator, who is residing in a quiet southern suburb of London, is in very poor health and her friends are anxious over her condition.

Her prolonged imprisonment seriously impaired her energies, and she is glad of the opportunity to recuperate afforded by her present retirement. She has no desire to return to France for some time to come, and is very emphatic in her denunciation of the French Government, which she says is less liberal than a monarchy. In fact, she declares that she would throw her influence on the side of the Monarchists if they should openly enter the field against the Republicans.

Conferrees Cannot Agree.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—The Tariff bill conferees continued in conference until noon and then adjourned. A number of minor points of disagreement in the House and Senate bill were adjusted, but when the conference broke up they were evidently no nearer an agreement on the three main points of difference—on binding twine, the extension of the bonded period and the sugar schedule than when they met.

Action on Pension Bills.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 20.—The House postponed until Wednesday next the bill granting pensions to the widows of Generals McClellan, Fremont and Crook. Seventy-two private pension bills were passed.

The General Director was Benj. F. Crane, and the Floor Managers were James T. Mullen and Edward C. Searing. The order of dance, twenty-eight numbers long, was highly appreciated throughout, but the number calling for especial frolic was the schottische "Leave me Shake the Hand that Shook the Hand of Sullivan."

—The public meeting of the Hope Chapel Temperance Club last night was well attended. W. G. Gray presided in the absence of the Rev. G. K. Newell, the pastor. Messrs Gray, Martin and Fountain made interesting addresses. Mr. Fountain gave graphic illustrations of the way the liquor habit impoverishes its victims. He said that at the homes where he went to collect rent many object lessons would be given; there the occupants will stand and tell him they have no money, but there on the table stands the beer.

—The feast of Yom Ha Kippur, a Hebraic celebration, will occur next week Wednesday, Sept. 24. It is a musical feast of expiation and penance in the Jewish synagogues and at the hearthstones of the people. It is the success of the New Year period and Day of Atonement. During Atonement Day a rigid fast is kept from sunset to sunset. The services of the day following the evening of the Atonement are solemn in the extreme. Prayers by the rabbis and the chazan will be interchanged with orchestral music in the synagogues, and appropriate hymns and the reading from the scroll of the law will be portions of the service. The concluding feast of the month, five days later, is the feast of Succoth, or the thanksgiving day.

HER SECOND CENTURY OF LIFE.

The Happy 100-Years of Mrs. Nancy Baker, the Oldest Woman in Union County.

Not often has a community the opportunity of rejoicing in the fact that one of its residents has attained the honorable distinction of being a centenarian; and it was a noteworthy assemblage which gathered at the home of George A. Moore, 45 East Front street, Sunday afternoon, as the cause of the gathering was the presence of Mrs. Nancy Baker, the oldest woman, in years, in Union county, who is now advancing on her second century of human life.

The event was more of a pleasant family re-union than a centennial celebration, and it was correspondingly an esteemed privilege for an outsider to be admitted to the circle. Four generations were represented by those who kept the parlors sparkling with mirth and joyousness, yet all graciously yielded the seat of honor to the especially invited guest, a PRESS reporter.

The glow of an open fire shone around the room, its genial heat drawing attention to the old-fashioned fire-place, with its spice of antiquity; and with the back logs snapping and crackling not far from his left elbow the writer found it no difficult task to fall into the dreaming mood with which old story-books and twilight fireside tales invest one's mind, especially as the pleasantly talkative centenarian seated at his right recounted just such incidents as one never hears of except in connection with that Past whose misty individuality is so remote that its veil partakes of the distant hue of the far-off sky.

This bright little old lady, whose mind as well as frame has outlasted a century of joys and cares, and whose laughing eye and cheerful smile still defy the stern old Time on whose territory she is so bold a trespasser, had scarcely a flaw in her memory, and her talk dwelt complacently and accurately on events from one end of her century to the other. She could tell, in her peaceful, quiet way, of incidents of the days when Washington's name was preeminently on everyone's lips, as precisely as she could of the present era of Benjamin Harrison and Baby McKee. Born within twelve months after Washington became President of the United States, her life comprises almost the entire history of the organized form of this government, and she has witnessed its growth in population from less than four millions to more than sixty-four millions. As the first census of the country was not ordered until five months after she was born, her name was recorded in the first enumeration made of the population of the United States, and she is one of the very few whose names have never left that national roll-call. What the period of her life has comprised in history would be difficult to enumerate in the space at command, and what it has seen in human and material progress would be still more hard to compass. She was a girl of nearly ten years when Washington died, the wife of several years before the war of 1812 broke out, and the mother of a growing family long before steamboats and railroads were known. Events of importance that are now considered as belonging to days of long ago were enacted after she had passed a half-century of life; the Mexican War, for example, which in these progressive days is scarcely a modern recollection, occurred when she was nearly three-score years of age.

Her own life has been one of domestic tranquillity, unmarked by events of public concern, but its record is one of usefulness and goodness that must be as pleasant for her own contemplation as it is gratifying to her descendants. Amid home scenes, and in the church and social affairs of the community where her life has been spent, she has exerted a moral force beyond that of many women, and the number of her years is only proportionate to the amount of good she has been able to accomplish. This force, it may be added, has been extended far beyond the period when most of human kind are incapacitated by the infirmities of old age.

Mrs. Baker's maiden name was Nancy Williams. Her father's name was John, and her mother's Phœbe. One year after her birth, which took place March 10, 1790, her father died, leaving her neither brother nor sister. Under the nurture and admonition of her widowed mother she grew to be a thriving little miss of seven Summers, when, at the second marriage of Mrs. Williams, she was adopted into the home of John Roll, a Springfield Mountain farmer, where she learned all such old-time household duties as spinning and weaving flax, cheese-making, butter-making, and fashioning homespun garments. In those times boys went barefoot to "meeting;" schools were taught in Winter by stern masters, but in Summer, when the unruly boys had to hoe corn, women teachers taught the girls. A spirit of harmless prankishness prevailed. Jack-o-lantern parties and apple-parin' bees were the ruling diversions. That she thoroughly enjoyed this life the sparkle of her eye and the ring of her laugh as she tells of the many merry moments of those years unquestionably indicate.

Eighty-three years ago, when only seventeen years of age, Nancy Williams became Mrs. Stewart Mills. She had six children—four daughters and two sons. The eldest daughter died at the age of sixty-one, and one of the sons at seven. Those still living—the oldest 74 years, and the youngest 56—are Joseph Mills, of Decatur, Ills.; Mrs. Phœbe Fowler, of Liberty street, Plainfield; Mrs. Hannah Williams, of Westfield; and Mrs. Electa Lyon, of Westfield, with whom she now lives. Two of her fourteen grandchildren are Miss Mabel Fowler, of Liberty street, and Mrs. Geo. A. Moore, of East Front street. She has eighteen great-grandchildren, some of whom have reached the age of maturity. Among them are the two children of James and Annie Connors at South Plainfield.

Stewart Mills died in 1858, leaving Mrs. Mills a widow in her sixty-eighth year. Six years after her first husband's death she re-married, and became Mrs. Wm. Baker. Her second husband died in 1871.

Mrs. Baker is as hale and hearty as many a younger woman. Judging from her features one would think her about eighty. She can walk a mile quite confidently; she can see and hear as well as ever in her life, and she has never used glasses. She has been toothless twenty years, but now declares that her third set of teeth are showing themselves. She drinks tea or coffee at her pleasure, and is a hearty eater. She still insists on doing some of the smaller household employments, and up to two years ago milked her owned cows and attended to various farming duties. Only last Summer she showed a "green" farm hand how to swing a scythe properly. She is a staunch Presbyterian, and can tell the names of all the ministers who have had charge of the church where she has for seventy-five years been a member. She has never been forty miles away from her Springfield birthplace, and has never lived more than four miles distant from the home of her nativity. Her eyes have never feasted on the ocean, but she can hold the seaside Summer visitor spellbound with tales of the period of the War of 1812. One of the best of her stories concerns an old time mowing frolic—a species of amusements which resulted in the harvesting of aged farmers' grass crops and gave country people no end of fun. The favorite dish of these events was a great pot-roast. Whole sheep would be cooked over gypsy fires in tremendous caldrons, and a sumptuous feast would result. At one of these frolics, while the whites were merrymaking, with no thought of hostility, an Indian crept out of the woods and up to the huge kettle and upset the contents into the fire. Before he could hide he was caught, and killed on the spot, and the festivities went on as before. The man who killed the copper-colored chieftain was pursued for months by a revengeful tribe, and had many hair-breadth escapes, but finally purchased pardon with a barrel of hard cider, an incident which speaks volumes for the comparative worth of redskin and applejack.

Although Mrs. Baker's one-hundredth birthday anniversary was celebrated appropriately last March, her descendants could not forego the pleasure of a reunion celebration when opportunity afforded last week. Hence the felicitous gathering of Sunday afternoon, which will be long and happily remembered by those who were present. The attendance was limited almost strictly to family members because it was not deemed prudent to expose one whose life, especially of late years, has been of such a quiet character, to the unusual excitement that would naturally attend the visits of any considerable number of those with whom she has not been familiar.

A New Church Building in Prospect.

At the meeting of the First Church of Christ, last evening, a brother offered to contribute the stone to build a meeting house, and Mr. Cleaver, the pastor, said he knew of another who would present a lot.

—Plainfield Council, Royal Arcanum, will have an "informal clam chowder," Monday evening next.

Temperance Wine for Invalids.

It is well known that there are cases when the most strict advocates of temperance are obliged to use some sort of wine, especially those who are old and infirm. Many weakly females as well as invalids and debilitated persons in warm weather need a little strengthening wine. The great difficulty has been in procuring a rich wine that is reliable. There are many cases where wine would be used to great advantage in place of alcoholic drinks, if only a genuine article could be had, and upon which physicians could rely as being strictly pure. The Wine of Alfred Speer, of Passaic, New Jersey, and his Unfermented Grape Juice have been analyzed by chemists in nearly every State, and have always been proved strictly pure and beneficial. These wines are now being used in hospitals and by families for medical purposes, also by churches for communion service. It is principally sold by druggists. Mr. Speer's mode of preserving is such as to retain the rich flavor and sweetness of the fruit.—Transcript.

Dion Boucicault's Funeral.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—No arrangements have yet been made for Mr. Dion Boucicault's funeral, but it is probable that it will take place to-morrow. The pall-bearers will be selected from the members of the Actor's Fund.

Designed the Modern Grain Elevator.

BUFFALO, Sept. 20.—Robt. Dunbar died here yesterday, aged 77 years. He was an expert mechanical engineer, proprietor of the Eagle Iron Works, and was the father of the present system of grain elevators.

Return of Consul General New.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—General John C. New, the Consul General of the United States at London, arrived here on the Inland line steamship City of Berlin. A number of notable persons were on hand to receive the general, and many were the hearty congratulations extended him.

Director-General of the World's Fair.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—George R. Davis, of this city, was elected Director-General of the World's Fair. On an informal ballot he received 50 votes; only 47 being necessary to choice. On motion of a Pennsylvania member the ballot was made formal and Mr. Davis declared the unanimous choice of the commission.

Fiendish Attempt to Wreck a Train.

SPRINGFIELD, O., Sept. 20.—A fiendish attempt was made last night to wreck the C., S. & C. passenger train of twelve cars returning from the State Fair and laden with passengers. Ten ties were piled on the track between London and Lilly Chapel. The engine struck them and was badly damaged, but kept the track.

A Steamer Burned at Her Wharf.

CHESTER, Pa., Sept. 20.—The passenger steamboat Norwood, owned largely by Mr. Hogan of Philadelphia, was burned early in the morning while lying at her wharf in this city. No one was injured.

Cholera Raging in an Ohio Town.

HARLEM SPRINGS, O., Sept. 20.—Cholera has become epidemic in the village of Bergholz, six miles east of here. The people are leaving the place to avoid the dread disease. W. S. Loeper, the resident physician, is taxed to his utmost.

Recently when two hundred or more drunkards were gathered in a meeting by the Breakfast Association, a speaker asked that all who had begun to drink after the age of twenty-one would raise their hands. A sea of hands were raised. By saving the boys from the saloon we can go far to save the next generation. It is not the drunkards who sustain the saloons. The real drunkard earns nothing, and has nothing to spend. The saloon is sustained by the moderate drinker, the man who works six days that, between Saturday night and Monday, he may pour his earnings into the gorged till of the saloon. It is sustained by the young man, just beginning to drink, who, in his new-found enjoyment, is eager to treat all his friends, and to be in turn treated by them. It is these that sustain the saloons.—National Baptist.

The Folly of Some Girls.

There is no more infatuated folly in the world than the idea that a woman can reform a man by marrying him. The only case we ever heard of where it worked well was one in which a sensible and resolute girl did actually cure a man of drinking by not marrying him—until he had broken off the habit and stood a probation of five years without a lapse. If more women would have the pluck and patience to take that course, there would be fewer drunkards' wives and families. And yet how many people encourage the notion that a man who won't stay sober in order to win a life will keep sober after he gets her! That was a sound, if homely, philosopher who said that he "didn't believe in usin' up gals for the salvation of fellers."—N. Y. Examiner.

The Home of THE UNION COUNTY COUNTRY CLUB Now Building.

Eventually No Club House Will Equal It.

In addition to the complete and exclusive description already given in these columns of the rise, progress and intentions of the Union County Country Club, THE PRESS today presents a picture of the club's home and Casino as it will all appear when completed at the corner of West Seventh street and Arlington avenue. The work is rapidly progressing and the contractors have agreed to have the building ready for occupancy by November 1.

The building committee includes—Chairman Pliny Fisk, and Messrs Rowland Cox, D. C. Ivins, W. P. Smith, W. Bloodgood, H. M. Stockton and H. P. Talmage. To them is due much credit for the good taste of the building without and within. The architect Alfred E. Barlow, of New York, is renowned for the beauty and appropriateness of his work. The Berkeley Lyceum, N. Y. city, of which he is the architect, is one of the most admired buildings in that metropolis. To him is due also the praise so universally expressed, for the artistic remodeling of the Pliny Fisk residence on West Seventh street.

The exterior of the club house is described above by THE PRESS' artist. The description of its interior is as follows, written by Architect Barlow himself:

The purposes of this Club are to promote social intercourse among its members and to provide them with the conveniences of a club house and casino.

With this object in view the Governors have purchased the Arnold property, situated on the northwest corner of Seventh street and Arlington avenue, being 140 feet on the front and 288 feet deep.

Extending across the front and rear of the house are verandas 12 feet wide, the former being extended at an angle to provide ample carriage entrance.

The Reception Hall is 23 feet long by 15 feet wide, with heavy beam ceiling, with a large fireplace at west end. Beyond is the Reading Room, 15 feet square, which with rear veranda overlooks the tennis courts.

To the right on entering is the Parlor, 15 feet square, opening into the Dining Room, 19 by 15 feet. These rooms, with offices for service and staircase, constitute the ground floor. Above, on the second story, are to be found the billiard room, three card rooms, toilet, service room, and private dining and committee rooms, with large balcony in rear commanding the outdoor games.

Accommodation for servants is provided in the third story, and in the basement are the baths, toilet, coat room and ample store rooms and kitchen facilities. The buildings throughout will be heated by steam in the most approved manner. The decorative treatment is to be simple and appropriate.

Attached to the northeast angle of the club house and extending parallel with Arlington avenue, is the Casino. With the intent of a sufficiently convenient connection with the club house by temporary means when needed, no direct communication between the two has been provided, and the connecting lines are the open terrace on the front and covered veranda on the side.

The main entrance is by the Arlington avenue porch to foyer, 19 feet long by 9 feet wide, to Hall and to the ladies' room, 19 by 14 feet.

Over these rooms is a balcony, seating 200, communicating with second story of club house.

The Hall is 78 by 40 feet, provision being made at the north end for stage and dressing rooms. Total seating capacity will be about 900. The ceiling is semi-circular in outline, with especial reference to the best acoustic effects, and with the three easterly bay windows and large hooded fireplace at the south end, will doubtless afford for the higher class of entertainments, the quietly picturesque and comfortable room so long needed in Plainfield.

The Casino will be heated by steam and effectually ventilated in the best manner.

In the basement four of the best planned bowling alleys are to be built for the convenience of club members and their families.

In the angle formed by the junction of Club House and Casino are to be placed one double and two single tennis courts, with sufficient remaining space for croquet games. On the rear line of lot provisions will be made for ladies' dressing rooms and lockers, and for wagon sheds.

In the course of time other desirable features will be added as the resources of the association justify, and eventually no similar organization will possess a more completely equipped Club House and grounds.

John Chandler has the contract for the carpenter work, Isaac Pangborn the masonry, and A. M. Griffen the plumbing. Contracts for the steam heating and electric lighting are not yet awarded. Additional particulars of all this were published in THE PRESS of August 9.

The membership of the club is limited to 100. That number is almost filled. Besides the assembly balls and the club's own receptions, the Melopoia will give its musicales in the new Casino, and possibly the Monday Afternoon women will lease it for their lectures on art, social ethics, etc.

The Board of Governors consists of the following officers and members:

President—Harry G. Runkle.
Vice President—William Bloodgood.
Secretary—William T. Kaufman.
Treasurer—Pliny Fisk.
DeWitte Clinton Ivins, William Palmer Smith, W. B. Post, Charles E. Brooks, Henry P. Talmage, Harry M. Stockton, H. S. Mason, and Charles J. Fisk.

How Jimmy McKee Got His Horse Back.

Some days ago James McKee, the well-known trainer and driver of trotting horses, so long a resident of this city, sold his fast gray gelding John M. to a swell resident of Asbury Park at figures not far from $2,500.

The buyer posed as a rich fancier of trotting stock, and McKee unhesitatingly accepted a check on a New York city bank for the purchase money. The check was dishonored by the bank. McKee interviewed the buyer, who was profuse in apologies and explanations and promises. McKee secured a small payment and another check fortified by a chattel mortgage on the horse. The second check likewise failed to materialize in money. Thereupon McKee started into Jersey on a still hunt for his horse. He found it in a stable at Mount Holly, and pounced upon it by virtue of the chattel mortgage, and made a forced march with his property back to his stables at Goshen. Now "Jimmy" brags to his friends how nicely he worked his way out of a bad scrape.

Dixons Tourists at the Amphion.

The Company comprising Dixons Tourists, which appear at the new Amphion Theatre on next Monday evening for one week, are experienced people. The names of Carl Anderson, last season with the "Spider and Fly Co.;" Edwin Burt, of "Master and Man Co.;" Lawrence Vaughn, of "King of Knights Co.;" Eugene Adamson, of "Dark Secret Co.;" Genevieve Howard, of "Charlotte Thompson Co.;" Jessie Wallack, of "King of Knights Co.," are the leading members.

The pieces selected are well-known favorites; and the prices, within the reach of all. The opening piece will be the romantic Irish drama of "Kathleen"; on Tuesday, the ever welcome "East Lynne"; Wednesday evening, "Ticket of Leave Man"; Thursday, "Ten Nights In a Bar Room"; Friday, "Uncle Tom's Cabin"; Saturday matinee, "East Lynne"; Saturday evening, "Wild Rose." Popular prices will prevail—15, 25 and 35 cents.

Our Bilious Neighbor.

(From the Westfield Standard.)

The directors of the Westfield Athletic Club have decided not to play the Crescents again. A game could not be played until after the tennis tournament in October and it would necessitate keeping the base ball team in practice for two weeks or more and this could only be done by playing away from home which involves considerable expense and trouble and then perhaps the Crescents might back out again.

It was a delightful treat to the Westfield base ball cranks, who were at Somerville on the 13th, to see the West Ends play with the Crescents and finally win the game from them. It is our private opinion that the Crescents are not in it with Harkins and his ball-tossers when the latter players settle down to earnest work, and there was no occasion for the West Ends to hurt themselves last Saturday—that is sure.

Attorney Ridley a Winner.

Two cases came before Justice Hardy yesterday. Mrs. Pawson and Mrs. Fox, Grove street neighbors, had been calling each other names, and Mrs. Fox had Mrs. Pawson arrested. Mrs. Pawson was found guilty, but sentence was suspended, and all parties were sent home with a reprimand.

Strumenti and Blumenti, two Italians, sued George Walton, for whom they worked in a quarry, for wages. They secured judgment. John Ridley distinguished himself as counsel in both cases.

Endorsed by the Metropolitan Press.

The New York Daily News in speaking of the talented lecturer who will speak at Reform Hall, Monday evening, says:

Donald Downie, B. C. L., in his illustrated lecture on "Napoleon" at the Union Square Theatre last evening was instructive and entertaining, and held his audience from beginning to close. He held the scales well balanced, and summed up the career of the great man without prejudice or favor. The effort was scholarly and gives assurance that all of his lectures will be equally of interest. The colored views were very fine.

A Home for the Boys' Club.

The managers of the Boys' Club, have leased Central Hall, corner of North and Park avenues, and will take possession in about ten days. A public meeting will subsequently be held, and reports of the proposed work and expenditures will be given. About $1,500 has been raised.

For sturdy oak whose branches wide
Boldly the storm and wind defy,
Not long ago an acorn, small,
Lay dormant 'neath the Summer sky.

Not unlike the thrifty oak in its germ, development and growth, is consumption. But even this mighty foe of mankind, positively yields to the wonderful curative properties of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Don't be blind to your own interests and think yours a hopeless case. That remarkable remedy has rescued thousands. It is the only medicine of its class, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee that it will benefit or cure in all cases of disease for which it is recommended, or money paid for it will be promptly refunded.

To Bowl for a Medal Next Month.

The Dunellen Bowling Club had a very fine game on the Dunellen court, Thursday, at which nearly all the members were present. Today the Middlesex club held a practice game preparatory to the contest for the medal, which will take place Saturday, Oct. 20.

A WEAKNESS SOMEWHERE.

The investigation showed that this terribly fatal accident was caused by the weakened and overstrained condition of a single vital strand of the otherwise strong bridge.

So it often is in the human system. How many people there are who have a weakness somewhere. They appear to be in fair health, but they have malaria, a stomach trouble, a kidney or liver disease, a weakness in the back, a nervousness or trembling, strange sensations, depression of the mind, a sense of anxiety, accompanied by a weak, tired or languid feeling. Others become sleepless and wake more tired mornings than when they retired; their head feels dull and heavy, they have little or no appetite for breakfast, and their old-time energy and ambition appear to have deserted them. Thousands are troubled by indigestion, gas in the stomach, accompanied by a nervous and irritable condition.

These are all apparently slight weaknesses. A person may have, at first, only one or two of these symptoms; but they are to the body what the weakened strand is to the bridge, and any overstrain of the brain, nerves or physical system may precipitate the unfortunate person into utter mental, nervous or physical prostration and exhaustion.

It behooves all, therefore, when they detect even the slightest weakness in the system, to procure immediately that great strengthener and invigorator, Dr. Greene's Nervura. Nothing will so quickly and surely restore the tired and overworked brain, and strengthen and invigorate the weak, worn out and shattered nerves. No other remedy in the world so rapidly regulates the system and restores the vital strength, both nervous and physical, and hundreds of thousands of people, when weaknesses of the system were detected, have, by the timely use of this wonderful remedy, Dr. Greene's Nervura, warded off serious diseases, and been restored to sound and vigorous health.

It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless, and may be obtained at any druggist's for $1 per bottle.

Saver of Life and Health.

I was broken down with nervous and physical prostration before using Dr. Greene's Nervura, and life was a burden. Now life is a joy and sleep is a luxury compared to it before taking Nervura. I relish my food and my nervousness has left me, so has the numbness. I wish I could shout loud enough so that all the world could hear, and tell them the good Dr. Greene's Nervura has done me. It has made me from a weak, trembling, nervous, irritable man to one who feels he is on the highway to long years of health and happiness through Dr. Greene's Nervura and the blessing of God.

FOR SUNDAY READING

A LIFE-LONG PRAYER.

A mother, tender, young and fair,
With gentle face and sweetest air,
Bent o'er the cradle where was laid
Her infant boy, and softly prayed:

"Our Father which art in Heaven, guide
Uphold, and keep, whate'er betide;
Hallowed Thy name be; Thou dost care,
And heed'st a mother's tearful prayer."

A child knelt by the mother's knee;
She taught the prayer to him; and he Scarce knowing, repeated half in fun:
"Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done."

A mischief-loving urchin see,
By bed side on his bended knee,
He prays in careless, sleepy way:
"Give us our bread from day to day."

The head of youth with floating dreams,
To whom the world an Eden seems,
Now bows and asks God how to live,
And begs: "Our trespasses forgive."

And now behold a manly bow
And form and face; still asking how His debtors to forgive, and that he "Guarded from temptation be."

Then middle age with many cares,
The way beset with thorns and snares,
Raised a petition ere he slept:
"That he from evil might be kept."

Now comes an aged, trembling saint,
With all these earthly cares acquaint,
Calmly waiting his Heavenly dower:
"For Thine is the kingdom, glory, power."

The funeral bells are tolling to-day,
The good man has passed from earth away.
Over the coffin's tight-closed lid,
And over the form the rough box hid,

Was repeated and caught by the silent air,
The precious, pleading, sweet Lord's prayer,
And borne to Heaven with the spirit then,
Which entering cried: "Forever, Amen."
—Housekeeper.

STORIES OF GOOD MEN.

The Works of Great English Noblemen and Preachers.

Real wisdom is always simple," says one, "and true greatness always humble."

A luminous illustration of this truth appears in the life of the Earl of Shaftesbury, recently given to the public. The biographer says that one night the Earl would be in his place at the House of Lords, making the walls ring with his appeals, and the next night at the vagrants' hiding-places, rousing the poor sleepers from their bed of rotten straw, filthy with vermin, and leading them to the Ragged Schools, there to sit by their side, and by loving counsel stir in them hopes and longings for a true life. To have seen him at St. Gile's Refuge, talking to ragged, barefoot, homeless boys, drawing from them frank confessions as to their vicious and criminal habits, kindling in them new hopes of an honest and industrious life, and planning how they might reach such a goal, was an impressive lesson. For many consecutive years he presided at the meetings of the Ragged School Union, and when, in 1860, he was presented with a testimonial, he replied that he would rather preside over the Ragged School Union than command armies or sway empires. The boot-blacks and donkey-drivers called him "our Earl." These donkey-drives, called costermongers, were a community by themselves, and interested him greatly. They were poor and improvident, and gave the best places in their houses to the donkey. Lord Shaftesbury saw that to reach them he, too, must become a coster. He purchased a donkey and cart, which he loaned to those who had none. In his communications he always signed himself, in addition to his royal title, Knight of the Garter, Coster! He was greatly beloved by the costers, who on one occasion presented him with a fine donkey. With all the grace of a courtier he arose, and with his arm around the donkey's neck, said: "I ask no epitaph beyond this—that with a patience as great and a resignation as unmurmuring as that of this donkey, I may do my duty." As the donkey was led from the stage, he turned to the reporters and begged them to state that the donkey having vacated the chair, his place was taken by Lord Shaftesbury.

When this English nobleman was on his way to receive military honors as Lord Lieutenant of his county, he stopped his carriage, and gave his place to a lame old woman hobbling along the road, while he mounted the box beside the coachman. It is said that it was no uncommon sight to see him walking along the worst streets of the city with pockets full of toys for poor children. At a humble flower-show, where a poor little girl had won a prize for the care of a tiny plant, he who was the greatest of illustrious men, and a Knight of England's most famous military order, stooped to kiss the wondering child, whose little life had never known caresses. When his bier stood in Westminster Abbey, there lay side by side on his coffin the flowers sent by a Crown Princess and by London's flower-girls.

Along this line an incident is told of England's greatest statesman. For many years an old man used to sweep the street-crossings near the Houses of Parliament in return for pennies given by passers-by. One day he was absent. Upon inquiry he was found by a missionary, ill in a little attic chamber, furnished only with cot and stool.

"You are lonely here," the missionary said. "Has any one called upon you?"

"O yes," he replied, "several persons have called—Mr. Gladstone for one. He called and read to me."

"Mr. Gladstone called? And what did he read?"

"He sat on the stool there, and read the Bible to me."

What a lesson! The greatest statesman in the world, sitting on a stool in an attic, reading the word of God to a street-sweeper!

Mr. John B. Gough used to describe a scene in which London's great preacher was the central figure.

"The best sermon I ever heard Mr. Spurgeon preach," says Mr. Gough, "was in the Boys' Orphanage. There was an infirmary connected with the orphanage, and in it was a dying boy. Mr. Spurgeon sat down by the little cot, and, in a voice full of tenderness, said to him:

"'My dear, you have a great many precious promises all around this room, and do you know you are not going to stay with us long? Do you love Jesus?'

"Yes."

"'Jesus loves you better than you love him, and He is going to take you to Himself. There will be no suffering there. Did you have a good night?"

"'No, sir; I coughed all night.'

"'Ah, my child, coughing all night and weary all day. Here, outside are the boys overflowing with health, and you coughing all night, weary all night—but Jesus loves you; and He is going to take you to Him, and then He will tell you all about it, and then you will be glad you waited here so patiently.'

"And without any formality he said:

"'Jesus, Master, this little child is coming; give him a warm grasp of Thy hand. Love him, and guide him through the dark waters. Lift him up as a mother lifts and comforts her child.'

"Turning to the boy, he said: 'Are you quite happy here? Nurse, can we not get something to please him? Something that will gratify him? My dear, would you not like to have a bird in a little cage? We will hang it up by the bedside, and in the morning you shall hear the bird sing. Good-bye. You will be in Heaven before I see you again.'

"In such simplicity as this," says Mr. Gough, "did Spurgeon preach the Gospel."—Jennie M. Bingham, in Golden Rule.

EVERY MAN A KING.

Be a Lover of Veracity and Make it the Guide of Your Life.

The kingliest office ever held by one of human birth is that of witness-bearing to the truth. The man who is faithful in this comes nearest to the King of the nations. "Art thou a King, then?" asked the haughty Roman of One who had spoken of His kingdom. The answer is a study for a lifetime. "I am King. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth." The kingly office and witnessing to the truth are here held to be synonymous. There is a world of encouragement in this for every man of humble birth, of lowly estate, of scanty means. No matter how poor his home, how meager his fare, how circumscribed his influence, how desolate his lot, he may assume the royal prerogative and exercise the kingly functions. He need not have a throne, or a jeweled crown and glittering robes, nor even a scepter, but if he bears witness to the truth he has come to a regal estate. The question of the Roman: "What is truth?" was asked in contempt and was left unswered. But the witnesses all know enough of it to qualify them for their high calling. Every one who hears the voice of Him whose "kingdom is not of this world" is "of the truth," and all who follow Him in their testimony come into the royal likeness. The witness to the truth is not, as many seem to suppose, a partisan authorized to assume the reins of power, to collect armies, to enlist a host of followers and put them in martial array, to engage in sanguinary battles, to dominate wrong and error by the use of the gun, the sword and the bayonet, and to drive all forms of evil out of the world by a superior force skilled in strategy and the machinery of war. Truth is a reformer, truth is a liberator, truth is an elevator, truth is a purifier, but as an armed warrior it is utterly powerless before the defiant will of man. Those who go forth to war in its name may assail with keenest blades the victims of falsehood, but they will make no impression on the strongholds of error. Omnipotence itself can not lead an unwilling captive to embrace the truth. He stands intrenched beyond the utmost stretch of the mightiest power that would coerce his resisting choice. To witness for the truth, therefore, is not to engage after this fashion in a hostile assault upon the evil that is prevalent in human hearts and manifested in human life. This is the hardest lesson the world has yet to learn. It is so easy to denounce, to scourge, to assail with reproaches and bitter scorn, the follies, the heresies, the evil devices, the short-comings of those who cling to falsehood and error, that every champion of the truth is anxious to get up into the chariot with Jehu and imitate his exterminating zeal. We do not now refer to those who make their pronunciation of shibboleth the sole test of righteousness, and would slay with the sword of their vengeance, as the Gibeonites did, all who can not sound the letters after the same fashion. But the real friends of truth are far more prone to show their love of it by fighting for it than by witness-bearing. If it were an earthly monarchy this might be excused, as the first King said: "If my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight." The kingdom is "not from hence," and therefore it needs witnesses and not frantic zealots to war in its behalf with sword and spear. If we study the character of Him who came from a throne loftier than is found in any human court to bear witness to the truth, we can see in a concrete form the lesson which those who seek this kingly office must learn, each for himself, before he assays to practice in the high vocation. The witness must be a lover of the truth for its own sake, and make it the guide of his life.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

ELECTRIC FITTINGS.

Fine Work Done in Metal Fixtures for Electric Light.

The Popularity of French Work—American Manufacturers Coming to the Front — Styles in Fittings — Rothschild's Celebrated Electrolier.

[COPYRIGHT, 1890.]

[Special Correspondence.]

With the progress of interior electric lighting and the gradual disappearance of gas illumination in theaters, hotels and private dwellings has come a new industry. It might almost be called an art, or at least an ally of an art; for it has engaged the attention of architects and has called forth some of the best efforts of artistic designers.

This new industry is the manufacture of electric light fixtures. Only two or three years ago it was in its infancy. To-day it has reached an importance almost as great as electric lighting itself, and has attracted millions in investment. The gas chandelier is daily receding to give place to the electrolier, and if the rate of progress of the last two years is maintained, the electrolier may be seen in the dwellings of persons of very moderate means.

It may be the climax in the advance which made the candle and the coal-oil lamp give way to the gas chandelier.

Until 1888 all the finer class of electric light fixtures was imported chiefly from France. American companies manufactured a class of plain goods which failed to satisfy the wealthy and were too costly for others. All this is changed now. The American architect and the American artist have taken up the matter of interior electric lighting and the electric light fittings have become a part and parcel of architecture. The fittings are designed to suit the style of the architecture, and they cover many periods. Some of these are the Romanesque, the Renaissance (French and Italian), Louis XIV., Louis XV., Louis XVI., the Empire, Adams (English style), Colonial (American) and the nineteenth century revival of the Renaissance in the floral period. The materials in the fittings are chiefly wrought iron, brass and copper hammered.

Three or four million dollars are invested in the business. The American companies which used to manufacture goods inferior to the French article are now consolidated, and many of the best French designers are employed by them. It appears just now that the Americans are a little ahead of the French and English in this new art. But the American people are far from being convinced of this yet. The Vanderbilts and many other of the wealthy Fifth avenue families have imported electric light fittings and will have no others. But it seems to be only a matter of a few years more when American art and American enterprise will have overcome French and English ascendency.

The fittings made to-day are as varied in style and far more artistic than the gas fixtures. They are considerably more costly, too. The costliest ever made was an electrolier, which now hangs in the drawing-room of James Rothschild, of London. It cost six thousand dollars. It is twenty-eight inches in diameter and about five feet high and is made of gilt bronze and rock crystal. The design is of the Louis XVI. period. Sixty-eight electric lights hang from the bronze leaves and the mellow diffusion of light is as remarkable as the beautiful design.

The cost of nearly all the finer fittings mount high up into the hundreds. One of the prettiest is a wrought-iron lamp with a dragon twisting himself around it and flames in the form of electric lights pouring from his mouth. There is one of these lamps in the residence of William C. Whitney, ex-Secretary of the Navy. Another is a cupid holding a lamp made of hammered copper. Ten of these are in Mr. Whitney's house.

A sample of Adams' style is seen in many fine residences: it is made of wrought iron. The chandelier, which contains four lamps, is held by a bronze boy, who is peering down into the lights. The bracket lamps are mostly in the Louis XVI. style and are made to look as if they had been stored away for a hundred years and had just been taken from a dusty closet. The highest artistic efforts are spent on these brackets.

An immense electrolier was recently made in this city for a Roman Catholic church in Montreal. It has four hundred lights, is twelve feet high and sixty-seven feet wide. It is made principally of bronze and cost a number of thousands which the manufacturers do not care to name.

The same company, a few weeks ago, put up in the capitol at Austin, Tex., an electrolier fourteen feet high and eight feet in diameter. The lights are arranged to spell T-e-x-a-s and are in the form of a star, the "Lone Star of Texas."

One of the prettiest of the smaller fittings is a bronze fly from the mouth of which a light is pendant. These flies are placed at irregular intervals on the walls and make a curious and pretty effect. Cupids holding cut-glass balls, with drooping lamps of bronze and containing twenty-four lights, are among the finest of recent productions. One recently made for a Chicago millionaire cost four thousand dollars.

One of the latest fixtures designed and now in process of manufacture is a nine-light oak-leaf electrolier of pierced china with colored metal. It will adorn an up-town hotel.

To fit up a large private house in the latest styles of electric lighting costs from fifteen thousand to twenty thousand dollars, exclusive of the plant. Of course handsome fittings can be had for one-fourth of that amount, but those who want "the latest" have to pay extremely fancy prices.

Some of the finest fittings have lately been put into steamboats. The Puritan, of the Fall River line, has a thirteen-thousand-dollar set of lamps. The pillars in the grand saloon are adorned with floral hammered leaves, from which hundreds of lights jut out. The Pilgrim, of the same line, is to be fitted up in the same way.

NO FLIES ON THEM—Flying machines.

ROCKY HELIGOLAND.

The Little Island Ceded to Germany by the British Government.

Heligoland, or the Holy Island, so called from having been a missionary station in early Middle Ages, which Lord Salisbury has agreed, subject to the consent of Parliament, to cede to Germany, is a little mass of rocks thirty-six miles from the mouth of the Elbe and 100 from Hamburg. Heligoland proper, throwing out of consideration the sand dune which extends it at a low tide, but which is cut off from it at high water, is little more than a mile in length, while its greatest breadth is but 1,845 feet. Its 2,000 inhabitants live on the summer boarders who resort to it for sea bathing. Though every inhabitant of the island is a British subject, they are to all intents and purposes Frieslanders or Germans. The only genuine English people are the members of the little administration that England keeps there, a Governor and a few subordinates. When the summer boarders go away, a great many of the islanders depart for Hamburg, where they pass the winter, taking with them the few cows that glean pasturage from the scant grass of the island, and which are kept to supply milk for the visiting British babies.

Heligoland came into England's possession in 1807, having previously belonged to the Danes, as one of the fiefs of the old Duke of Holstein. England took it by a force, and found it a very convenient place whence to smuggle goods into countries that Napoleon had terrorized into adherence to his "continental policy" of boycotting England. After the general peace England kept Heligoland, it being of some importance while Hanover retained its independence, and was regarded as in a measure under England's moral protection. England would not fight for Hanover in 1866 and Prussia made short work of it. Then conquering Prussia, after waiting a decorous time, asked for Heligoland, but England refused to give it up. Since then Germany has improved in the art of asking and English statesmen have made corresponding progress in yielding. Stanley says Germany knows how to ask, and he probably means that she knows when and whom to ask. At all events, in evening up African possessions, Germany and England have come to an agreement about Heligoland, too, and Germany gets it. The desire of the Germans to see Heligoland under the German flag is very natural. Americans would be restive if a foreign power held an island within thirty-six miles of New York harbor, or one commanding the mouth of the Mississippi, or threatening any one of our great commercial cities as Heligoland might menace Hamburg. Germany, once securely in possession of the rock of Heligoland, it will soon bristle with guns and be a formidable watcher over the entrance to the Elbe.

Some of the English papers say that now that the process of yielding has begun, possibly Lord Salisbury will heed the request of Spain for Gibraltar or of Italy for Malta. There is little danger that he will do so. Independent of the glorious traditions that make the rock of Gibraltar dear to Englishmen, there is another consideration that will govern Lord Salisbury—Spain is not a first-class power; and Italy is not as strong as the nation that has asked for Heligoland and has got it. Besides, Gibraltar, Malta and Cyprus command England's short cut to the East, and will not be given up. The least of them is a thousand times more important than the rock in the North Sea.—Boston Transcript.

MEDIOCRITY IN PARIS.

It Has Less Chance There Than Anywhere Else in the World.

Paris is the chief receptacle of the veriest scum of the whole earth. All the villians who can no longer remain in their own countries, for they would have to pay the penalty of their misdeeds, come here destitute and desperate, ready for any uproar, hoping for some profit by fishing in troubled waters. With these, less dangerous at the outset, but finally corrupted to any degree, are the discontented provincials; men who, through the want of brains or want of energy or want of steadiness, have failed in all they have undertaken; who consider themselves persecuted geniuses, only to be appreciated in Paris, where they come with a large stock of delusions. Any real and striking talent will make its way in Paris, but mediocrity has less chance here than elsewhere. The standard is high, those who rise above it are quickly noticed and pushed on; those who remain below (of course the vast majority) can not even get an opportunity of showing what they might do—they are swallowed up in the vortex of the struggle for life.

Consciousness of mediocrity is a rare virtue; people always imagine that they excel in all that they undertake, and ascribe their defeat to any cause but the real one; the more so as they have probably possessed some superiority over their local surroundings. Hence bitterness, fury against all who have succeeded and who enjoy the fruits of their efforts. Then, the example, still more perniciously exciting, of the dishonest prosperity attained by so many, the luxury of swindlers, great gains by bad means. The last restraints of home principles—early education, perhaps the religious teaching of childhood—are broken through one by one, and we find men, not bad men originally, but now frenzied with the desire of holding a prominent position and enjoying the good things of this world. These are the men who become the gilded Generals of the Commune, wearing smart uniforms and imagining themselves heroes; who eat, drink and are merry; living in palaces and dreaming they are Princes, till when suddenly awakened to the stern reality, they turn into wild beasts, with the one surviving instinct of general destruction, that others may not have what they have not.—Murray's Magazine.

BENTON, LAV. CO., WIS., Dec., '88.

Rev. J. C. Bergen vouches for the following: James Rooney who was suffering from VITUS Dance in its worst form for about 14 years was treated by several physicians without effect, two bottles of Pastor Koenigs Nerve Tonic cured him.

Prejudiced, yet Convinced.

So. Norwalk, Con., May, 1890.

Although I took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic with a certain prejudice, it has done me so much good that I must speak for it, because now I can sleep again. Since the terrible catastrophe of the Johnstown flood, where I lost five members of my family, terrible fictions occupied my mind, so that I was since quite despondent. But now I come to myself again, and attribute this to the good effect of the Tonic.

KILLED IN A WRECK

A Chicago Excursion Train Run Down by an Express.

TEN DEAD AND MANY INJURED.

Men, Women and Children Pinned Beneath Seats and Window Sashes.

A Mother and Daughter Horribly Mangled—The Engineer and Fireman Arrested—Removing the Injured in the Reading Wreck to Their Homes—Wreck on the Baltimore & Ohio.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—Shortly before 8 o'clock last evening a Burlington switch engine crashed into an Illinois Central excursion train at La Vergne, ten miles out of Chicago, both roads coming from that point into this city as far as Sixteenth street on the same track.

The police first stated that forty people had been killed, while the railroad officials insisted that there were but three fatalities. In half an hour after the wreckers reached the scene of the collision seven mangled bodies had been dragged from the heap of broken timbers and twisted iron in which the heavy switch engine was imbedded. Three other people were seriously injured and six slightly.

The excursion train was returning filled with passengers who had been spending the day in the country.

The Burlington trainmen assert that they passed Millard avenue, a short distance from the scene of the smashup, under a clear signal, and that the red lights on the rear of the passenger train were burning with extreme dimness.

The train in the collision consisted of fifteen cars, the three rear cars being telescoped by the force of the engine of the Downers' Grove express, which was running to make up ten minutes lost time before reaching the city limits.

List of the Killed.

Three of the killed were young men who have not been identified. The others are:

Otto Schloept, Lottie Dinnan, Martha Dinnan, Miss Pilgrim, Mrs. Brennan and daughter, and Mr. Nehman.

The wreck presented a fearful sight, the engine being piled on top of the rear coach, and men, women and children were seen to make their way from the windows and other means of escape, while others were pinned beneath seats and window sashes.

The number of injured is now estimated at fifteen, all of whom were taken to the hospital. It is believed that six of this number will die.

Engineer Dickinson, together with his fireman, who manned the Downer's Grove express, were arrested and locked up in the Central Police Station.

THE READING HORROR.

All But Six of the Injured Removed to Their Homes.

READING, Pa., Sept. 22.—The persons injured in the wreck at Shoemakerville on the Reading Railroad who were transferred to the Reading hospital are being taken to their homes as rapidly as their condition will permit, and to-day there are only six remaining in the hospital. The damage to the tracks has been repaired and trains are running as usual. Those whose curiosity prompted them to visit the spot yesterday were rewarded by seeing the locomotive moved from its resting place in the river to a point near the bank, while the debris of the broken cars which had been dragged out of the water is still lying along the bank.

This afternoon the coroner will begin his inquest. It is not probable that anything new will be elicited. The disaster is regarded here as having been purely accidental.

The name of David Amgstadt, a barber of Mahanoy City, should be added to the list of the dead. This brings the number of victims up to 22.

Killed in a Freight Wreck.

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 22.—One of the biggest freight wrecks in the history of the Pittsburg division of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad happened about 2 a. m. at Benning's Station, twelve miles west of here. Engineer James Shields was killed and Fireman Harry Cyphers probably fatally injured. Three other train men were injured.

The Cincinnati Club Sold.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 21.—F. H. Brunell, secretary of the Players' League, has completed negotiations for the purchase of a half interest in the Cincinnati Baseball Club. He will to-morrow meet the owner of the other half interest and probably purchase.

The King of Portugal a Sick Man.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—King Charles of Portugal has suffered several sudden attacks of illness lately, and it is feared that he cannot permanently recover.

ARTHUR COMMENDED.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The grand union meeting of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, which is in the nature of a national convention, was held at Lyric Hall, in this city, yesterday.

Two sessions were held, both of which were addressed by Grand Chief Engineer Arthur. At the morning session 1,000 were present, and in the afternoon 1,350, and divisions were represented from Maine to California and Canada to Panama. Chief Arthur was received enthusiastically.

The following resolution was passed: "That it is the sentiment of this union that we approve the instruction given by our Grand Chief Engineer to the engineers during the late trouble and we have full confidence in his integrity. We also honor the engineers on the New York Central Railroad in following the instruction given by our Grand Chief and in keeping so close to the laws and rules of our Brotherhood."

LAST DAYS AT CRESSON.

The President May Return to Washington on Wednesday.

CRESSON SPRINGS, Sept. 22.—Cresson is decidedly lonesome. President Harrison and members of his family were the only persons to be seen moving about the extensive grounds surrounding the Mountain House.

Mr. J. R. McKee, the President's son-in-law, has decided to take his family to Indianapolis to-morrow night. The party at the Park cottage will then consist of but four persons, the President and Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. Dimmick and Miss Sanger. The President does not expect to remain here but a few days longer, and may return to Washington on Wednesday morning.

Reformers Combining.

BOSTON, Sept. 22.—At an adjourned conference of Trade Unionists, Nationalists, Knights of Labor, Socialists and Single Tax advocates a report favoring the concentration of these interests to secure success in matters needing reform was adopted and ordered sent to the various reform organizations of the State inviting co-operation. The report concludes: "This is no mere partisan political movement, but seeks to unite all these heretofore divided forces on several measures to the end that they be made laws.

The Sovereign Grand Lodge Adjourns.

TOPEKA, Kan., Sept. 22.—The Sovereign Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., concluded its business and adjourned to meet in St. Louis next September. Before adjourning, the new officers of the Sovereign Grand Lodge, both elective and appointive, were installed. Allen Jencks, of Rhode Island, was appointed assistant grand secretary, and A. C. Cable, of Ohio, grand marshall, J. W. Venable, of Kentucky, grand chieftain, E. A. Kelly, of Washington, grand messenger.

Several Persons Stabbed.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 22.—A stabbing affray occurred on Charles street, this city, last night, in which Dominick Boscari was stabbed in the heart and instantly killed. Antonio Fagio was stabbed under the left armpit, and another Italian, whose name cannot be learned, was cut in the groin so that his bowels protruded. Josephi Newell was also cut in the neck, and has been arrested on suspicion of killing Roscari. Four other participants in the affray have been arrested.

Died in the Pulpit.

ALBION, N. Y., Sept. 22.—G. T. Cain, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of this place, went into the pulpit yesterday in his usual health and had proceeded through about half of his sermon when he paused and without warning fell to the floor. He never regained consciousness and expired in about ten minutes. Heart disease was given as the cause. He successively held charges at Erie, Pa., Philadelphia, Williamsport, Pa., and Mansfield, Ohio.

Lay It to American Lobsters.

BERLIN, Sept. 22.—Forty delegates of the Beekeepers' Congress now being held at Fulda have been stricken with typhoid fever and four of them are already dead. The doctors allege that the disease is to be traced to their eating canned American lobsters.

Ex-Congressman Scott Very Ill.

ERIE, Pa., Sept. 22.—William L. Scott is lying at his home in this city very ill. He came home from New York a month ago and has been confined to his house ever since. His ailment is of the stomach and bowels. While he is a very sick man, his family physician is hopeful. His family were called home two weeks ago.

IN CONGRESS TO-DAY

Several Important Bills Before the Senate.

TIME FOR ADJOURNMENT NEAR.

The Balance of the Session Bids Fair to Become Exciting.

The Langston-Venable Case to be Settled in the House—The Conference Report on the Tariff Bill Expected To-Morrow—To Be Disposed of Quickly and Sent to the President.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—The Senate will continue to work on the unfinished programme outlined by the Republican caucus, and finish consideration of Senator Evarts' bill for the relief of the Supreme Court, which came up as unfinished business to-day. This and Senator Edmunds' private land claims court bill, which was laid aside temporarily last week, will probably engage the attention of the Senate most of the week, and the bill to transfer the revenue marine from the Treasury to the Navy department and the several labor bills next on the programme will be more than enough to keep the Senate busy during the entire week.

Conference reports on the General Deficiency bill and the Tariff bill, likely to come in by the middle of the week, may displace the labor bills until next week. The work of the Senate during the week, as the time for adjournment approaches, bids fair to become interesting if not exciting.

The Republicans in the House have determined that the Langston-Venable contested election case shall be put through and Mr. Langston seated before any other business comes before the House. They expected to accomplish this last week, but the absence of a quorum of Republican members prevented action.

A number of prominent members, both Republicans and Democrats, think that the conferees on the Tariff bill will be able to submit their report to-morrow, but less sanguine persons think that it will not be presented until Wednesday, and several members who are familiar with the progress being made by the conference committee think that the report will not be presented until next week. Should the report be presented this week it will be quickly disposed of, and the completed bill rushed to the President for his approval.

The General Deficiency bill, with the report of the Committee on Appropriations recommending the non-concurrence in the Senate amendments and the appointment of a conference committee, will probably be presented during the week.

DILLON MAKES A SPEECH.

He Denounces the Goverment at a Nationalist Mass Meeting.

DUBLIN, Sept. 22.—The Nationalist mass meeting at Swineford passed off quietly. It had been expected that trouble would occur, and the authorities took precautions accordingly. There were 200 police and 150 soldiers on guard.

The gathering was a very large one in spite of rainy weather. John Dillon was the principal orator. He freely denounced the Government for its arbitrary persecution of the Nationalists, but was not interfered with by the police.

Patrick O'Brien, one of the arrested Nationalists, will return to Dublin Wednesday from Kingston. Several public meetings to protest against the Government's action are being organized. An important meeting of Irish leaders will be held to-morrow at the League's central offices in Dublin. The personnel of the American mission will then be decided upon.

Speculation is rife as to the result of the trial of Dillon and O'Brien. The universal opinion is that if they should be unlucky enough to be found guilty, they will, without doubt, receive a very heavy sentence, and in that case will not be able to fulfil their American engagements. But even in that event, the visit of the Nationalist party to the United States and Canada will not be given up, for it has already been stated that Mr. Charles Stewart Parnell himself will take their place, if his health will permit, as he attaches the greatest importance to the new movement for obtaining funds. He does not believe that it will be possible for Lord Salisbury's Government to remain in power much longer, and confidently expects that the general election will not be delayed beyond next summer.

Great Swimming Feat.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—Mr. T. C. Easton, honorary secretary of the Professional Swimming Association, commenced this morning a feat that has never before been attempted, a six days' swim in open water. He started from the Folly Bridge, Oxford, about 8 o'clock, and will swim eight hours a day for six days in the attempt to reach Teddington, a distance of ninety-two miles and two furlongs. Mr. Easton, who is 37 years of age, has during the last two seasons accomplished a number of notable performances in the way of long distance swimming.

Young Robbers.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Sept. 22.—William Dodge, who claims to be 18 years old but who looks older, and Frank Taylor, who gave his age as 16, are locked up in the county jail, on a charge of robbery. They were arrested for breaking into a railroad station, and are believed to have been connected with numerous robberies that have occurred near Hackensack recently.

THE BELL BOY'S PLOT.

Cassin's Partner Turns State's Evidence and Tells About the Robbery.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—A striking story of cool criminal logic was told at the Jefferson Market Police Court during the examination of Henry Cassin and Oscar Matthews, the two bell boys of the Hotel Vendome arrested for stealing the $12,800 contained in the strong box of the bookmakers Carlin and Saunders.

Matthews turned State's evidence, and told how Cassin secured possession of the money. He said Cassin approached him several times with a plan to take the box from the safe. Cassin said he would be willing to serve ten years to have the money, which he could hide and use when his term expired, as the sum was more than he would be able to earn in that time. Cassin said he could easily get the box, as he knew the combination of the safe, but Matthews declares he refused to have anything to do with the scheme.

Cassin was held in $10,000 bail, and Matthews was sent to the House of Detention.

WILL BATTLE TO-NIGHT.

Great Excitement in London Over the McAuliffe-Slavin Fight.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—If nothing happens to interfere with the plans of the managers of the Ormonde Club it will be known all over the civilized world by to-morrow morning whether Joe McAuliffe or Frank Slavin is the better man.

It was specified in the articles of agreement that the fight should take place during the first week in October, but it is pretty certain that the affair will occur to-night.

McAuliffe is in the pink of condition, weighs 210 pounds and looks like a 2-year-old. Slavin is a stone lighter and is in perfect fix.

Betting on the McAuliffe-Slavin contest is 5 to 4 in favor of McAuliffe. Interest in the approaching event is at fever heat.

Killed Himself in a Butcher Shop.

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 22.—Timothy Corbett rushed into a butcher shop and grasping two large knives he plunged one into his body and with the other hacked at his throat until he severed the jugular vein. He then sank to the sidewalk dead. Corbett belonged to a good family and a cause for his act is not known. He was chatting pleasantly with his mother when he suddenly picked up a knife and jabbed it into his throat. The knife being dull and ineffective he dashed down the street into the butcher's store where he completed his self-destruction.

The Bodies Cremated.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The bodies of the young German actress, Emilie Rossi, and her young artist lover, Gustave Koch, who committed suicide in a sensational manner on Thursday last, were cremated at Fresh Pond, L. I., yesterday afternoon. A number of friends of each of the dead accompanied the remains from their late residence in this city to the crematory, where short addresses were delivered by Manager Amberg and Mr. C. A. Frisse. No religious exercises were held.

Miss Beecher's Body Found.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 22.—The body of Miss Ella Beecher, of Ballston, Saratoga County, N. Y., was found in the Farmington River last evening. Miss Beecher, who, with her mother and nurse have been spending the summer at Farmington, disappeared from her boarding house at noon on Friday, and it is presumed that she committed suicide through despondency, she having been in poor health. She was a member of one of the most prominent families in Ballston.

Odd Fellows' National Encampment.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 22.—General Woodward with his staff came here from Albany, and after consultation with the committee in charge of the matter, arrangements were made to have the national encampment of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows held in this city during the second week of July next. It is said that at least 30,000 members will attend.

LaBlanche Says He Will Fight Dempsey.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 22.—Ross Jackson, ex-president of the Occidental Athletic Club, is in receipt of a letter from Geo. LaBlanche, in which he says: "I intend to give Mr. Dempsey one more chance, and that very soon. I will meet him any place with the same gloves, or at least gloves similar to those we fought with last winter."

Soldiers Protect a Prisoner.

JACKSON Miss., Sept. 22.—Sheriff Brennan of Warren County telegraphed Gov. Stone from Vicksburg last night to order the volunteer soldiers to aid him in protecting a prisoner from violence. Gov. Stone responded ordering the soldiers to the sheriff. The prisoner threatened is Murray, the alleged train wrecker.

Albany Bank Officials Indicted.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 22.—The grand jury reported two indictments against George P. Whitney, of Albany, one for embezzling funds of the City Bank, one for false entries in bank books, and two against Anthony Gould, of Albany, one for aiding and abetting Whitney in embezzling, one for aiding Whitney in falsifying the entries.

A Wealthy Man Commits Suicide.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Sept. 22.—William D. Gilbert, nephew and heir apparent of T. D. Gilbert, the millionaire, and a wealthy man himself, committed suicide yesterday by putting a bullet through his head. Ill health is thought to have unbalanced his mind. He leaves a wife and three children.

CONFLICTING VIEWS

The Alleged Confession Bothering the Knights.

IT MAY INJURE THE ORDER.

Master Workman Lee Denies that He Assisted the Wreckers.

Mr. Powderly Is Silent—A Member of the General Executive Board Says the Order Will Help the Road Prosecute the Fiends—Denials by Both Cordial and Kiernan.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The authoritative statements frequently made recently that some of the men arrested for wrecking New York Central trains had confessed what share they had in the nefarious work in a measure prepared people for the details of those confessions which were made public yesterday. But they furnished the theme of conversation wherever Knights of Labor gathered together in this city.

The evidence implicating Master Workman Lee as an at least accessory after the fact aroused the keenest interest. While the Knights are loath to believe him guilty and will not believe him guilty on the mere testimony of the men who have confessed, the feeling is general that unless he meets the accusations promptly and squarely and disproves the allegations, the Knights will have to repudiate him.

DISCREDITED BY A CHIEF.

A Member of the General Executive Board Speaks for the Order.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22.—General Master Workman Powderly of the Knights of Labor left the city before a reporter could get a talk with him about the confession of the three Knights of Labor implicating Master Workman Lee of D. A. 246 in the wreck on the New York Central Railroad. In his absence Mr. Wright of the General Executive Board spoke for the general officers of the order. He said:

"Until these confessions were published we believed that Reed, Cordial, Cain, Buett and Kiernan were innocent of the charges preferred against them. We intended to defend them, but since they swear that they took part in the wrecking of trains we will make a thorough investigation and lend every assistance to the authorities to bring the guilty party to justice."

"I cannot believe that Master Workman Lee had any knowledge of the guilt of these men. Their claim that he gave them money to leave the country with I do not credit. I know that Lee had very little money, and that the money that was given the Executive Committee of the district did not pass through his hands. The first instalment that was given the district was some days after the wreck, and it was a very small amount. It was given by General Secretary Hayes to the district treasurer. I have thought that perhaps these men had drawn the names of officials into this matter in the hope of discrediting the order. If that is their idea they will not succeed. The order will live, and the general officers will come out of this with clean skirts."

"What about the statement that men high in the councils of the order and who have the confidence of the general officers, had been hired as agents by the railroad company?"

"I do not believe that there is any truth in it. Every man who holds an important office is an old member of the order, and will remain loyal to it under all circumstances. I think that is merely another lie thrown out to hoodwink people. A day or two after the strike was ordered we knew that the Central was trying to get its agents into our locals in order that they might know what we were doing. To prevent this we issued an order that no new men should be mustered in the whole State for a certain period, and in that way I am quite sure we blocked their game."

"Did Mr. Powderly tell you what he thought of the affair before he left?"

"We had a short talk about the matter, but I cannot talk for Mr. Powderly.

Cordial's and Kiernan's Denials.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 22.—John Kiernan said to-day that he had no idea his name was connected with any such attempts until the time of his arrest. He had received no intimation from any one that he had better leave town, nor had he received money from any source to defray the expenses of such a trip. He did not see Cain or Buett on either of the nights mentioned, when they claim he sought them and asked for their help to do the different "jobs."

John Cordial said the first intimation he had of his being suspected as one of the wreckers was when he was dragged out of his house in the early hours of the morning and told he was wanted for participation in the Castleton wrecking. He had never been told it would be wise for him to leave town. He had received no money in order to enable him to get out of town.

Mr. Cordial emphatically denied every allegation in the "confessions" which seek to connect him with the wrecking, even as regards having any knowledge beforehand of the intention of any one to place obstructions on the track. Kiernan had never approached him asking for his aid in trying to wreck a train.

Master Workman Lee's Denial.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 22.—Master Workman E. J. Lee, of Division 246 denies the charge of having aided Cain or Buett with funds to escape. He also denies having any personal acquaintance with either of the above named parties. He denounces his connection with the crime as charged in the published statements as being utterly false.

PENNANT WINNERS.

Kelly's Brotherhood Club and the Brooklyn League Team Hold the Lead.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The fact that the championship is virtually over is not robbing the present series of baseball games in the West of any interest.

It looks now as though Brooklyn, Chicago and Boston would end the League season in the order mentioned, but the men of culture are far from the condition they were in on their previous western trips. The crippling of some of Boston's best players may just about enable the Philadelphias to take third place if Anson's men conclude in second. Cincinnati and New York will then become important factors only so far as their ability is exercised for upsetting the pennant aspirants.

In the Players' League Boston's margin is sufficient to carry it through. It will nevertheless make a great finish without taking any risks. Radbourne and Gumbert will do all the pitching and are in fine condition for the work. In the box Brooklyn and New York are not strong enough to overtake the leader. The Bostons well deserve the pennant, as from the beginning they were in the lead and have held that lofty position continually throughout the season with the exception of a few short periods.

The team is such as the Hub deserves to have. It is second to none as a baseball center in every respect. It has supported two clubs with fifty cent ball this season, and had not the League and Players' clashed in dates so often the profits of both would have been great. As it is they are ahead of expenses.

Ward is entitled to a good place in the race. He has displayed remarkable pluck and shrewd managerial powers in getting such fine work out of a disorganized team.

Carnegie's Liverpool Speech.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—Mr. Andrew Carnegie the Scotch-American iron-king, has partially made amends for his recent Dundee speech in which he offended the English people by denouncing their aristocracy. In an address at a banquet in Liverpool he took occasion to ridicule the notion that Great Britain was in danger of declining in wealth or power. He declared it a fallacy to suppose that if the United States adopted free trade they could sweep English trade from the face of the earth, as had been claimed by some recent writers, Great Britain's trade with America was bound to continue, and no hostile Government could lessen it.

Stabbed by a Jealous Boarder.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 22.—George W. Ogilvie fatally stabbed James Doherty at a house in Somerset street last night. Both were boarders in the house and it is believed that Ogilvie was jealous because Mrs. Westland, the keeper of the house, was going to marry Doherty. Ogilvie started a dispute with Doherty and without any apparent cause plunged a knife into his abdomen. Ogilvie was arrested.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. Charles W. Opdyke, of Broadway, has returned from Europe

Mrs. Clinton VanVliet is very ill at her home on Prospect avenue.

The condition of Councilman Dunham is considered as very serious. There are fears of pneumonia setting in.

Ernest R. Ackerman, of West Seventh street, sailed for Europe on the steamer "City of New York," last week.

Geo. Watts formerly of this city but who for the past seven months has been preaching the gospel in the City of Brooklyn, has received and accepted a call from Troy, N. Y. He commences his labors today.

The Hon. John Ulrich of Plainfield, Vice Chancellor of the Knights of Pythias of New Jersey, has been enjoying life at Seabright, with Grand Chancellor DeWitt C. Bolton and Grand Keeper of Records and Seals, Leslie S. Messenger, of Paterson.

Engineer Dunham Gets Less Than His Head Inspector.

The amount of money received by Engineer F. A. Dunham, up to and including the last warrant ordered drawn by the Board of Freeholders, is $10,603.72. The amount paid out by him in the same time according to vouchers passed upon by the Board, is $9,608.65. He has therefore received for his own services $995.07, which is even less than the pay of his head inspector who receives a salary of $1,000.

The misuse of a title in a recent interview with Mr. Dunham, has given cause for more unjust criticism. It is not true that he has a separate engineer for each of his contracts. He has an inspector for each, but only the three or four underengineers that are legally allowed.

For Sick or Bilious Headache, use Dr. Pierce's Pellets, or Anti-bilious Granules; Purely Vegetable and perfectly harmless. One a dose.

(SPECIAL TO THE PRESS.)

FREEHOLD, Sept. 22—At the Third District Republican Congressional Convention, held here today, the Hon John Kean, Jr., was nominated by acclamation.

TWO INTERESTING ADDRESSES.

Mrs. Opdyke and Mr. Fountaine Speak on Temperance, and Gain New Signers to the Pledge.

After devotional services conducted by Mr. Fountaine, and the usual choir singing under the leadership of Mr. Vanderbeek, President Harper in Reform Hall last evening introduced as the first speaker Mrs. George F. Opdyke, who in a most pleasing manner, and basing her remarks upon Scripture verses, urged greater individual and associated efforts to protect our homes from the desolation of liquor, and to save the boys and girls of our country by ordaining prohibition. Mrs. Opdyke narrated an instance of liquor drinking in this Christian city of Plainfield, a case coming under her own personal notice, and which showed the awful effects of the drink habit.

The next speaker was George H. Fountaine. His remarks were also founded upon the Bible, through the teachings of which he drew a comparison of our country at the present day, and declared that "woe to them who decree unrighteously" still existed as a penalty for wrong doing. Mr. Fountaine argued strongly against the liquor traffic and cited several instances of its committed ravages.

The pledge was offered by the President, and three young men came forward and signed it.

Councilman Rushmore One of the New Trustees.

The first semi-annual meeting of the new Board of Officers of the New Jersey Division of the League of American Wheelmen was held at Plainfield, Thursday evening. The meeting was one of the most important held in years. Delegates were present from all parts of New Jersey, including Vice Consul H. E. Bendeck, of the Hudson County Wheelmen; Secretary-Treasurer George C. Pennell, Elizabeth Wheelmen; F. C. Gilbert Elizabeth Wheelmen; G. T. Thomlar, Hudson County Wheelmen; A. Dodd, Atlantic Wheelmen; S. Bennett, Bergen County Wheelmen; Townsend Rushmore, Plainfield Bicycle Club; F. L. C. Martin, Plainfield Bicycle Club; W. H. Stafford, Atlantic Wheelmen; W. S. Fulper, Orange Wanderers. A committee composed of Messrs G. T. Thomlar, G. C. Pennell and S. Bennett, was appointed to revise the State by-laws to conform with the constitutional rules and consider the allowing of the Secretary-Treasurer the sum of $100 per annum for his services rendered the division. In lieu of the much work done by him it is most likely the provision will be included in the revised rules, as is done in other divisions. It was decided to incorporate the organization under the title of the New Jersey Division of the League of American Wheelmen, with the following trustees: G. C. Brown, H. Benedict, G. H. Kane, B. O. Miller, L. C. Hunt, G. T. Thomlar, C. Todd, T. Rushmore, H. S. Fulper and G. C. Pennell.

A committee of four, consisting of T. N. Gray, G. H. Kane, A. Dodd and F. G. Weise were appointed to act as representatives to the National Assembly with the Consul, Vice Consul and Secretary-Treasurer.

Somerville's Cause for Elation.

One of Somerville's leading citizens has written to President Reed of the Crescent League, asking if the West Ends may be allowed to bring a brass band with them next Saturday. If the Crescents will provide seats, the West Ends will bring a band and give the people a concert.

It must be confessed that the Somervillians have every reason for their elation. They had no right to the game, and did not expect it. The Crescents batted out ten bases, stole five, went to first twice on West End errors, and twice on balls. A total of 19 bases with only two runs.

On the other hand the West Ends only had six bases on hits and a base on balls four times, but did not steal one nor get to first on an error. A total of 10 bases, yet they got five runs.

—Subpœnas were served this morning on witnesses to appear in the libel suit of Shotwell vs. Rice.

When you have that tired feeling of exhaustion, and you have little ambition, your blood is thin and poor. There is nothing that will enrich your blood, bring back life and activity, like Hires' Root Beer. Nothing so nutritious and strengthening. Ask your druggist or grocer for a package. ## CAUGHT WITH HER FAITHLESS LOVER.

The Bliss and Romance of a June Elopement Faded—A Young Girl's Happiness Shattered for Life.

Laura Robinson, the fifteen-year-old school-girl, who eloped last June with coachman William McQuay, a colored man twice her age, as told exclusively in THE PRESS at the time, has been found with her paramour in Boston, where for the past three months the two have been hiding.

When the elopers reached Boston, Mc Quay had not money enough to purchase a license and to pay the other necessary marriage expenses, and the ill-assorted lovers have had a hard time of it. The romantic glamour of the adventure was not lasting, and the fascination which held the girl spell-bound soon vanished. After the first fleeting days McQuay avoided even a reference to the marriage tie, and at last refused point-blank to consent to a wedding. As the full realization of her shame dawned on her, Laura sought to escape from her betrayer, but he menaced her into obedience, and would not let her leave his sight. The urgent need of money prompted Mc Quay to look for work, and after a bitter struggle succeeded in finding a place in a hotel. The proprietor of the house wrote, at McQuay's suggestion, to E. L. Finch, of Park avenue, Plainfield, where Mc Quay was formerly employed, for references. Mr. Finch at once communicated with the Robinson family, and Mrs. Robinson, Laura's mother, left for B ston last week. Saturday afternoon she telegraphed that she was with Laura and that McQuay was under arrest. Yesterday Mr. Robinson also went to Boston, to make arrangements to bring all the parties back to this city today. Laura is very penitent, and is glad to be received home again. She bewails her folly and her lover's treachery, and says that the happiness of her entire life-time has been blighted.

Since McQuay's perfidy came to light his record has been traced, and it is said that he is an escaped prisoner from the State Prison at Baltimore. Laura's elder sister, Emma, to whom McQuay was considered engaged, is reported as saying that she can never forgive William for his duplicity, and wants him punished to the full extent of the law.

Laura was one of Plainfield's most promising colored girls, the daughter of Mansfield Robinson of East Second street, and was an advanced pupil at the Stillman High School. It is probable that McQuay will be tried on various charges.

This race is between four-year-old colts owned by Mr. Quinn, Woodbrook Farm and Mr. Fosher, for the best time made until the season closes, for a suit of horse-clothes valued at $25. Kitty Pilot made the best time, so far, Saturday, when her record was 3:01; Senator two weeks ago scored 3:06.

Point-Lace and Orange Blossoms.

Isaac Schwed, of this city, was married to Miss Florence Frank, of New York, at five o'clock yesterday afternoon, in Victoria Hall, 641 Lexington avenue. The ceremony was performed by Dr. Jacobs, and was an impressive as well as joyful occasion.

The bride was attired in white faille, heavily trimmed with point-lace, and wore a veil and orange blossoms. The groom was in full evening dress, as were the other members of the bridal party.

The happy couple left today for a two weeks tip through Canada.

The Crescents Have Their Hands Full Now.

(From the Railway Advocate.)

The Plainfield Crescents still decline to make a date with the Railways. We are informed that their friends give the excuse that they are afraid to come to Railway for fear they will be mobbed, etc., because there has been so much said in the papers about them. They need have no fear on that score. We are not barbarians. They would be received as gentlemen by gentleman.

A MERRY WARFARE THREATENED.

A Telephone Company Ready to Put Up Poles, and the People Ready to Chop 'Em Down.

A lively telephone pole war is expected to agitate Plainfield and North Plainfield in the very near future. Men have been at work, the past few days, digging holes for poles on Plainfield avenue, Duer street, Craig place, Somerset street, and other thoroughfares, without the consent of the property-owners, and the citizens are beginning to get angry. The men are reported to be working for the new New Jersey Postal Telegraph Company, of which ex Councilman B. O. Bowers is a Director. This concern has, it is said, a State charter giving them the privilege to put up poles and run their wires through Plainfield, as well as other places, but the opinion is expressed that they ought to have the local Common Councils designate what throughfares they shall follow. Injunctions, law-suits and the chopping down of the offending poles as soon as they are erected may be confidently looked for —Doran will pitch for the Crescents again, in next Saturday's game. Jones will be given a trial meanwhile to see if he can hold him.

—Visitors from the Fanwood and Fireside Councils will be entertained at a chowder party in the banquet rooms of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, this evening.

Sydney's Labor Trouble.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Sept. 22.—The labor conference cabled John Burns at London, urging the English unions to prevent the engagement of foreign labor in England. It was also proposed that Cardinal Moran, the Chief Justice of Victoria and the Premier of Queensland be selected as arbitrators of the present labor disputes. The conference pledged the strikers to abide by the decision of such a board.

Two Duels in France.

PARIS, Sept. 22.—M. Millevoye, a deputy, was wounded in a duel with a Paris journalist. Another indecisive duel was fought at Bordeaux between two journalists. Both affairs grew out of the Boulangist expose.

Pumice Stone.

A mine of pumice stone exists on the Teneriffe peak, of which the working was only started in 1888. The stone is found in that part of the peak called the "Canadas," at about 2,000 feet above sea level, which has an area of some 6,000 hectares, out of the middle of which rises the highest part of the peak. The Russian Consul of St. Croix bought this property from the Spanish Government in consideration of an annual payment for the pumice stone working. The Russian Consul has associated himself with a Belgian, and they, under the firm styled Aguilar & Valcke, commenced operations in 1888, but it was only last year exportation was really started. At the Paris Exposition, the Consul-General states that this stone obtained a silver medal, and in view of the requirements of England, France and America, he believes it will develop a trade of great importance before many years. So far, the Lipari Islands have practically furnished the world's supply of this product, exporting about 100,000 tons per annum. The Teneriffe stone being recognized as of excellent quality, and its extraction being a much more simple matter than in the Lipari Islands, it follows that the price is much less.—Scientific American.

The Manufacture of Celluloid.

The manner in which celluloid is made in France is as follows: A huge roll of paper is unwound slowly, and while unwinding is saturated with a mixture of five parts of sulphuric and two parts of nitric acid, which is carefully sprayed upon the paper. The effect of this bath is to change the cellulose in the paper into pyroxyline. The next process is the expelling of the excess of acid in the paper by pressure and its washing with plenty of water. It is then reduced to a pulp and bleached, after which it is strained, and then mixed with twenty to forty per cent. of its weight in water. Then follows another mixing and grinding, after which the pulp is spread in thin sheets, which are put under enormous hydraulic pressure and squeezed until it is as dry as tinder. Those sheets are then put between heated rollers and come out in quite elastic strips, which are worked up into the various forms in which celluloid is made.—Scientific American.

HERE ENDETH THE SECOND LESSON.

Though the Women of the Tribe of the Crescents Were Present in Great Numbers, and in the Beginning Waxed Proud and Cheered With a Mighty Noise, Yet the Maidens of Somerville Who Were but Few Yelled Last and Yelled Longest.

1. And it cometh to pass that there was much excitement within the camps of the warriors even before the dawn of the day when they would meet again in battle.

2. And he that was called Chuck, and he that was called Tee Kay, traveled into a far off country and there found one with a south paw who for much silver promised to lead the Crescents forth to victory. And there was much rejoicing among them thereat.

3. But in the camp of the enemy there was lamentation. For during the night, he that holdeth down the base so many seek in vain, had gone forth to don the mask and the mammoth mitten of the tribe of the Crescents. And though he, the son of O'Rourke, had been once called Tommy by his brethren of the West Ends, henceforth they nameth him Dennis.

4. And when the day cometh that the two tribes meet again upon the field, verily a great crowd of people had assembled. The hosts of the Crescents gathered in mighty numbers, yea in hundreds and thousands. And the aged were there, and the priests of the synagogue, and the youth of all kinds.

5. And the noise that went up was a mighty noise when the tribe of the Crescents saw what looketh like victory. For of those who had assembled but few cometh from the far off country of the West Ends. Yet though they were few, in the end they getteth there with all their feet and they cheereth yet, while the Crescent hosts are silent.

6. As the battle progresseth it was seen that although the Crescents hitteth the ball and getteth the most bases, yet were they like unto children in running them. The battle was often there's, yet they giveth it up. The Chiefs of the tribe banished not he who is called sometime Wiegand but most times Slow Freight. Yet out the hands and feet of him came forth defeat.

7. At one time he of the south paw who was called Doran, throweth the ball into the hands of he on the first base, but he droppeth it; and thereupon he of the enemy who playeth so well, called Al, sneaketh to third base and anon cometh home.

8. And again Doran throweth the ball to Wiegand, and again he droppeth it, and again one of the enemy stealeth a base.

9. But when it cometh to pass that twice he reacheth the end of the journey to home, twice he getteth touched out because he knoweth not how to save himself. Neither knoweth he how to save others; and in that inning called the fourth when there is no man out, and he that knocketh the ball over the fence, who is called McIndoe, maketh a two-bagger, and the bases are full with a mighty Lever at the bat, then it cometh to pass that the slow freight side-tracketh them all. Not content that he getteth himself out, he chaseth the others back from their bases and dumpeth the victory right there.

10. Verily those who longeth for victory, and those who staketh their silver and gold nigh unto all they possesseth upon the warriors who weareth upon their breasts the crescent embroidered by the women of their tribe, wax wroth and curseth him of the chief of the tribe whom they say keepeth this man on purposely to cast out victory. They sayeth that Jones should have been in his stead, and they cry aloud take him away, and that he is a wagon of ice, and a cart of coal.

11. So when the eight inning cometh, the tribe of the Crescents had not the four runs that would have been made had he who was thus derided sat upon the bench instead of he who is called Freddie the son of Jones. Therefore they were but one ahead of the enemy and had cause to tremble. For there was a West Ends on every base, and the mighty Gore from the league of the great Metropolis, with his name in his eye, stepped forth to meet the sling shots of the wizard Doran.

12. Then the scribes of the country of Somerville, from whence cometh the West Ends, spoke forth and they said unto him who is called Tee Kay—which being translated meaneth, the boss manager of the boss team—"What thinkest thou?" And he answered and said: "I liketh it not." Then verily as he speaketh, the New Yorker sticketh forth the bat, and the ball smiteth it, and they whom the fair woman call Bergy and Carby, cometh home. Then another of the enemy adds one more to the victory when the ball is thrown in past the catcher, and Gore cometh in on a wild pitch.

13. Thus ended the second lesson. The victory is not to him who batteth the best or getteth the base oftener, but to him who knoweth what to do when he gets there. Selah!

First base on Errors—Crescents, 2. Base on balls—Crescents, 2; West Ends, 4. Hit by ball—McIndoe. Two-base hits—McIndoe (2), Gore. Double plays—Farrell to Bergen. Passed balls—O'Rourke, (2). Bowes, (3). Wild pitch—Doran, Harkins. Flies caught—By Crescents, 6; by West Ends, 10. Umpire—Mr. Quinn. Time of game—1:55. Attendance, 2,160.

The above score shows what a hard game it was to lose, and how much reason the West Ends had to yell over their victory. Those who staid in Plainfield for supper, hired a colored fifer and drummers, bought all the brooms in town, and headed by Carbonell marched to the station.

The Crescents had eight safe hits with a total of ten bases, and stole five more. The West Ends had only five hits and could not steal a base. Yet the Crescents were badly coached from third home, and in a general way ran the bases like school boys. There were more Crescents put out on the other bases, than on first. Four of the Crescents were put out between third base and the home plate, and six were left on bases.

Doran pitched the greatest game most of those present had ever witnessed. He struck out Harkins, Williams and Galligan twice each, and also struck out George Gore, the New York League's celebrated hitter, Farrell and Bowes. He even puzzled Quinn, who gave Farrell his base on balls in the eighth, when in fact four strikes were pitched.

THE GILA MONSTER'S DEADLY BITE.

Walter Vail's Own Story of His Miraculous Recovery.

A few months ago, the news that Walter L. Vail, a cattle dealer, from Plainfield, and son of Mahlon Vail of Park avenue, had been bitten by a gila monster in Arizona, and miraculously survived the accident, was exclusively published in THE PRESS, subsequently telegraphed all over the country, and much discussed at the time. Mr. Vail has just been interviewed at San Francisco by a reporter of The Chronicle, who describes him as a middle-aged man with every appearance of a tried frontiersman with iron nerves and indomitable courage.

"Yes, I guess I am about the only man who had such an experience with the gila monster who has lived to tell the tale," said Mr. Vail, when asked to tell his story.

"Some months ago," said he, "I was riding on horseback over a cattle range about twenty-three miles from Panetella Station, in Arizona, in company with three other gentlemen, when I saw one of these ugly looking monsters crawling along. I dismounted, determined to kill the brute, and clubbed it over the head with a stick until I was convinced that life must have become extinct. I then tied it with a string to my saddle and rode on. Pretty soon I wanted to make sure that the string had not broken and that the monster was still where I had tied him, and for that purpose reached back to feel for him. I became at once convienced that he was there, for he was still alive and took hold of one of my fingers with his jaws. Of course, having lived many years on the frontier, I knew well that the bite of a gila monster was considered deadly, and to tell the truth was badly frightened. I called my companions, and when they learned what had happened they were even more frightened than I was. All that time the hideous brute held on to my finger, and it took fully three minutes before we could pry his jaws open with a wedge so that I became liberated.

"One in the party tied a string around my finger and another around my wrist to stop the circulation of the poisoned blood, and I took a big swallow of whiskey, not as an antidote, but as a stimulant. Everybody in the party expected to see me die right there, but I made up my mind to live, if possible. I mounted my horse and started on a twenty-three mile ride to Panetella Station, and I tell you it was a ride for life. I made those twenty-three miles in just one hour and twenty-five minutes. By the time I reached Panetella my back and my legs began to pain. I felt like a man who was under the influence of a strong current of electricity, and suffered greatly. An engine for which I had telegraphed on my arrival arrived at the station about an hour after I had reached it, and I was conveyed to Tuscon, a distance of twenty-eight miles. Medical science saved my life, but not until I had passed through ten days of intense suffering."

Mr. Vail stated that he had received communications from all over the world since the publication of his adventure, and that scientists, specialists, and physicians have repeatedly requested full particulars of his case.

No Doubt of Fowler's Re-Election.

(From the New York Times.)

Fowler, the Democratic Congressman in the Fourth District—Hunterdon, Warren, Sussex and Somerset—has been renominated. The Republicans have placed Editor Goodman in the field against him. There are no signs of the bitter personal contest that marked Fowler's first canvass being renewed, and he will doubtless be re-elected without much trouble.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

OF NO EARTHLY USE.

The Action of Alcohol is That of a Disturber and a Destroyer.

True science is the voice of nature. What nature says must be right. If alcohol is really a poison, nature will not alter her laws because we are ignorant or prejudiced, and regard it as a food. What does nature say as to the relation of alcohol to the human body?

Food is required to supply two great wants of the body. The first great want of the body is material for its structure; the second is fuel to maintain its temperature. The simplest action we can perform, even a thought passing through the mind, occasions the wearing away of some tissue of the body. The body is being constantly worn down and must be constantly built up. This process can go on only when the body is kept at its natural temperature of about 98 degrees. Nature supplies the two wants by providing two kinds of food. The one kind is called nitrogenous, and supplies all the substances of which the body is composed. The other kind is called non-nitrogenous or respiratory foods, which are burnt up in the body to maintain its temperature. The egg is a type of all the food in nature. The white, or albumen, is the material for building; the yelk is the fuel for warmth. The body has one other want. It requires a solvent by which the food can be liquefied and carried to every part of the body. For this purpose nature supplies but one fluid, and that is water.

Now, nature having supplied these two kinds of food for the two great wants how can they be made available for the body's use? The answer is: "They must all be converted into blood." No food can be used in the body, either for building up its structure or maintaining its temperature until it has been converted into blood. Bearing this fact in mind, we shall be prepared to judge whether alcohol can be of use in sustaining the human body.

Carbonate of lime and chloride of sodium (common salt) are constituent parts of the blood, and become part of the substance of the body. They are, therefore, foods. Arsenic is not a constituent of the blood, and can never become part of the body. Therefore it is not food. Alcohol is just as truly as arsenic a foreign substance which can never be changed into blood nor become part of the body. In support of this the highest medical authorities may be quoted:

Dr. Edward Smith, F. R. S., England: "Alcohol is not true food, and it neither warms nor sustains the body by the elements of which it is composed."

Liebig: "Beer, wine, spirits, etc., furnish no element capable of entering into the composition of the blood, muscular fiber or any part which is the seat of vital principle."

Dr. T. K. Chambers: "It is clear that we must cease to regard alcohol as in any sense an element, inasmuch as it goes out as it goes in, and does not, so far as we know, leave any of its substance behind it."

Many such testimonies from high scientific authorities may be quoted to prove that alcohol is a substance entirely foreign to the human body, and can never become a constituent part of it. Therefore, the idea of nourishing or building up the body with alcohol is a pure delusion. Various parts of the body require starch, sugar, lime or iron, but no part ever requires alcohol. To dream of building up the body with alcohol is as irrational as to attempt to build a brick house with smoke. A further revelation of science, the result of most careful observation and experiment, is the following: The action of alcohol in the human system is invariably that of a disturber and a destroyer.

There is no part of the body that it does not injure. It influences every membrane, it irritates every tissue, and deadens every nerve. It also affects the chemical composition of the blood and other fluids—a most serious matter. It precipitates the pepsin of the gastric juice, and it injures the corpuscles in the blood. Unlike food, which builds up, alcohol always pulls down. It burns and destroys every structure with which it comes in contact. It also interferes with the healthy performance of every function, its presence everywhere in the body causing excitement, and necessitating extra work in every organ for its expulsion. It passes out of the system as it went in; but its passage through the system calls for increased action of the heart and other organs, and this increased action to expel the poison is fatally mistaken for increased strength.

While it irritates and destroys, alcohol also prevents the creation of new blood and the proper assimilation of food. It also retains in the system the waste matter that nature would expel, thus preventing those changes on which the health and life of the body depend.

In support of every one of these statements the opinions of the highest medical and scientific authorities may be quoted. Let me briefly present the contrast which science establishes between food and alcohol.

Food is changed into blood and used to build up the body; alcohol never is. Foods such as oils and sugars warm the body; alcohol never does. For the circulation by which the prepared food is carried to every part of the system, water is absolutely necessary; alcohol for this purpose is not only injurious but positively fatal. Healthy elimination of effete matter is promoted by exercise; it is retarded by alcohol. And alcohol never restores, like rest or sleep. On entering the stomach it undergoes none of the processes to which food is subjected, but flies immediately to the nervous centers and the brain, and by deadening the nervous sensations induces those delusive feelings of warmth and strength that are really lessened sensations of cold and fatigue.

The supposed beneficial results of alcohol are matters of guess-work. That it is a substance foreign to the human body, and always acts as a disturber and a destroyer, are matters of scientific demonstration.—S. Brazier, in Golden Rule.

A STRONG COMBINATION.

Church and School Hand in Hand in the Temperance Cause.

It is safe to assert that the churches ought to rise to the Temperance level of the public schools. Mandatory instruction in the schools of twenty-seven States and all the Territories of the American Union has recently set up in the name of science a new, unassailable and alluring standard. Below that standard the voluntary Temperance inculcations, directly or indirectly given by the precept and example of the churches, ought not to be allowed to fall. This does not necessarily mean that the churches should devote as much time as the schools do to scientific Temperance instruction, nor that they should employ the methods of the schools. But it does mean that they should not be satisfied with inferior results. The standard enforced by voluntary Christian action in the religious training of the family in the matter of Temperance, ought not to be lower than the standard made mandatory by public law in their secular training. This principle of reform in the relation of the churches to the Temperance cause is as fair and safe as it is comprehensive and radical. It means that the Sunday-schools should be taught as sound Temperance doctrine as the secular schools. It means that preachers should all lift their precept and example in the pulpit and parlor to the level which secular teachers are now required to attain at the school desk. It means that the church members everywhere should rise to the Temperance level of compulsory instruction in the common schools.

What is the level? The mandatory Temperance instruction now given in the public schools requires everywhere total abstinence from all narcotics; that is, from both alcohol and tobacco. A majority of the future citizens of the Nation are now in schools which teach total abstinence. Such instruction is mandatory in all the schools, naval and military, as well as Territorial, now under the care of our Federal Government. It has been necessary to achieve a great victory over apathetic, corrupt or hostile State Legislatures in order to secure this advanced Temperance instruction by authority of public law. It has been necessary to achieve a greater victory over the foremost publishers of text-books to induce them to issue sound Temperance doctrines in volumes on physiology and hygiene. Both these victories, by the blessing of Heaven on the labors of Mrs. Hunt and her assistants in the Woman's National Christian Temperance Union, have been achieved, and so a new era dawns. Great publishing houses, such as the Appletons, A. S. Barnes & Co., Ivison, Blakeman & Co. and Van Antwerp, Bragg & Co., or such as the syndicate of text-book publishers lately organized, now issue approved Temperance text-books all keyed up to the level of total abstinence.

If standard and approved Temperance text-books are used, nothing less than total abstinence can be taught in the secular schools. It is highly important that a school-teacher should bring his personal example up to the level of his official precept, but in twenty-seven States and Territories of the American Union every teacher must now bring his official precept up to the level of total abstinence. If a teacher should be a total abstainer, then, for yet stronger reasons, every preacher should be, and every church member.

As to the methods by which the Temperance instruction of the young is to be brought up in the churches to at least the level it has attained in the schools, each church must of course decide for itself. I venture to suggest only that by pulpit hints or by special addresses or lectures, by Sabbath-school instruction, by the use of pledges, and by the circulation of sound Temperance literature, and especially by personal example, the standard of total abstinence should be everywhere reached in the churches. Mr. Spurgeon was many years a wine-drinker, but now he says: "More men have been killed by grape-juice than by grape-shot."

The new, approved Temperance text-books, which are now molding the secular schools of the Nation, ought to be in all Sunday-school libraries. Once a month at least, instruction in harmony with these standard books should in some way be effectually given in all Sunday-schools. Lift the youth, the adult membership and all the preachers of our churches to the level of total abstinence, which is now the level, not only of the secular schools, but even of the life assurance societies, and immense results must sooner or later follow. The new heights and uplands of scientific Temperance instruction and religious precept and example will form a vast water-shed, down which will flow new rivers of Temperance sentiment with resistless currents and unflinching cataracts that will cleanse the land.—Joseph Cook, in Chicago Advance.

Ruin of a Poor-House.

"Eli Perkins," who was lately making observations in Iowa, was "interviewed" as he was passing through Sioux City. He had been at Ackley the day before for the first time in nine years. Nine years ago it had seventeen saloons, and the banks and farmers sent $25,000 to the East annually to pay interest on farm mortgages. Now he found no saloon or sign of a saloon, and a banker told him that they only sent $2,500 East during the past year to pay interest on farm mortgages. Not a policeman there now, and not a pauper in the poor-house nor criminal in the jail. The only bankruptcy there has been in Ackley is the bankruptcy of the poor-house. Poor old poor-house, it had to give up business, and the jail is full of cobwebs! "Yes," declared Eli, "Temperance has hurt the poor-house and jail in Ackley. It has ruined these institutions."—N. Y. Witness.

EXPERIENCE has undermined one main prop of the stimulant delusion: The cold climate argument. The logic of practical experiments, in Siberian journeys and arctic voyages, has convinced many Russian travelers that frost can be fought with better weapons than brandy-bottles; and that in polar winters Temperance may become a primary condition of survival.—Union Signal.

FOR GIRLS AND BOYS.

RODERICK, JAMES, AND ME.

Papa and mamma went out to row,
And left us all alone at home, you know—
Roderick, James, and me.
"Now, dears," they said, "just play with your toys,
Like dear little, good little, sweet little boys,
And we will come home to tea."

We played with our toys the longest while!
We built up our blocks for nearly a mile,
Roderick, James, and I.
But when they came tumbling down, alas!
They fell right against the looking-glass;
Oh! how the pieces did fly!

Then we found a pillow that had a rip,
And all the feathers we out did slip,
Roderick, James, and I.
And we made a snow-storm, a glorious one,
All over the room. Oh! wasn't it fun,
As the feathery flakes did fly!

But just as the storm was raging around,
Papa and mamma came in, and found
Roderick, James, and me.
Oh! terrible, terrible things they said.
And they put us all three right straight to bed,
With the empty pillow-case under my head,
And none of us had any tea.
—Laura E. Richards, in St. Nicholas.

MAMMA'S TRAMPS.

Little Boys That Run Away and Came Back Sorry.

Little Tod stood on the steps, rubbing his knuckles into his eyes. His breast heaved, and he was muttering to himself.

"Mamma's jus' too cross for any thin'," he said. "May be I'm bad, but she needn't scold me so much, if I am bad."

He debated a moment, pushed open the door, and called out:

"Mamma, I's goin' away."

"Well, good-bye, then," mamma said.

"But, won't oo tiss me 'fore I go?" asked Tod, his voice shaking.

"I only kiss boys when they come and tell me they are sorry," mamma said.

"But, 'spose I never come back?" Tod asked, with a little gasp.

"Oh, you'll be back soon enough," declared mamma, a cloud of dust from her broom almost hiding Tod.

He stepped back, coughed and then closed the door. Poor Tod was in disgrace, and he knew it. He had been cross, contrary, willful; he felt that he had deserved a scolding, but was not ready to say so. He walked down the garden path, where he met his brother, only a year older, and nick-named "Bud," though he did not bear any resemblance to a bud.

"What's the matter?" asked Bud.

"Mamma 'bused me," declared Tod, with very little regard for the truth.

"That's a shame," Bud sympathizingly said. "She sent me away, too. I'm glad 'sweepin' day doesn't come every day."

Bud had blossomed into pantaloons, but Tod still wore a frock, which added roundness to a figure already rather stumpy.

"Bud, let's run away," Tod said.

The older brother thrust his hands into his pockets, a thoughtful look creeping into his face. The proposal had startled him somewhat.

"Mamma'll hunt us, an' bring us back, an' be kind to us," suggested Tod.

"Oh, she's not a bad sort of a mamma," replied Bud, under a qualm of conscience. "I 'spect we ain't as good as we might be. But, Tod, what if she doesn't bring us back?"

That question rather upset Tod's calculations.

"Well, she needn't," he perversely said. He gave his straw-hat a half vicious pull, and then kept on his way.

"Hold on!" cried Bud. "I'm going with you."

Out of the garden, through the orchard, and across the meadows they went. Bud was beginning to enjoy the adventure, and proposed various plans, finding a willing listener in contrary little Tod.

"There's an old bark hut in the woods," said Bud. "We'll stay one night in that."

"No!" cried Tod, in alarm. "A big bear might——"

"Nonsense!" interrupted Bud. "There ain't no bears around here."

"Isn't this jus' sp'endid!" Tom cried, as they entered the woods.

The shadows were cool, the moss was like a velvet carpet, and leaves fluttered sleepily, and bright flowers relieved duskiness here and there. A rabbitt sprang out of the underwood, a squirrel chattered on a withered limb, and a jaybird dropped a blue feather right in front of Tod, who clapped his hands and stuck it in the ribbon of his hat. Soon they were busy cleaning out the bark hut. Bud discussing projects that almost took away Tod's breath, they were so stupendous.

By noon the boys began to feel hungry. Suddenly their hunger increased, probably because they heard the farm-house bell ring for dinner.

"Tod, could you find your way back?" Bud asked.

"I 'spec' I could" replied Tod.

"Then go bring a lunch," Bud suggested.

"But we've runned away," protested Tod, feeling called upon to be consistent.

"But we're awful hungry," reminded Bud.

There was logic in that, and finally Tod set out for the house. Mamma was on the porch and pretended not to know Tod.

"What do you want?" she sharply asked.

"Something to eat," Tod said. "Let me have it in a basket."

"Oh, my!" cried mamma. "Enough for a whole week, eh? That's kind of pudent, don't you think? Well, I never give any thing to tramps."

"But, mamma——" began Tod.

"I might give you some dinner if you unload those chips from the cart," mamma said.

"I-I-can't," stammered Tod.

"You mean you won't," mamma said. "Well, good-day. A tramp who won't work can't get any thing to eat here."

Tod's heart fell within him, but he was a plucky little fellow, and pulled himself together with a jerk.

When he reported the failure of his errand to Bud the latter felt a little chop-fallen.

"She'd have given the basket of things to me," he said.

"Well, Bud, you go try," suggested Tod, banteringly. "It is the big ox-cart, Bud, and—"

"Let the hired man unload the chips," was Bud's reply. "We can get plenty of berries to eat."

Berries satisfied their hunger for a time. They played in the woods, and the afternoon wore away. Tod lost a shoe in the quagmire, Bud was stung by a hornet, and both the boys were scared by a wild hog, which might as well have been a bear, from the way in which they ran for the hut. Suddenly the woods darkened, and then a low, rumbling, deepening sound was heard.

"Tod, there's a storm coming up," Bud cried, as he caught Tod by the hand. "Let's dig for home!"

If digging meant long forward strides they dug to some purpose. Two tired, drenched, draggled boys they were, as they stepped upon the porch. It was dark outside, and the light from the kitchen window streamed upon them.

"Bless me, there's that tramp again!" mamma cried. "And he's brought another tramp with him."

"We're no tramps," Tod said. "We're Tod and Bud. We want to come in."

"Oh, I've no doubt of that," mamma cried.

"We runned away," Tod said, tearfully, repentantly. "We're sorry. Anyhow, I'm sorry. I'm very sorry, and I'll be ever so good."

"Well, that's something else," mamma said. "Come in. I've always a kiss for a little boy who tells me he is sorry."

She picked up Tod and kissed him, wet, and draggled and berry-stained though he was. Tears came into her eyes, and her heart beat faster, for she had become alarmed about them.

"I'm sorry, too," confessed Bud, and so mamma stooped and kissed him.

They washed themselves, dried their clothes, ate a hearty supper, and then went to bed.

"It's nicer here than in the old bark hut," commented Tod.

"There's no place so nice as home," sagely added Bud."—Frank H. Stauffer, in Interior.

STORY OF THE FAN.

From the Oriental Palm-Leaf to the Modern Marabout.

The nineteenth century belle, who, after casting a last look of satisfaction into the mirror which reflects her charms, takes her marabout fan, probably has no idea that the original of her graceful toy was the exclusive prerogative of sovereigns and ecclesiastical dignitaries. The Egyptians and Mesopotamians, who kindly bequeathed to posterity wall pictures whose clear and solid outlines show us the most minute details of their civilization, display magnificent specimens of feather fans, which, borne on long poles by the attendants surrounding royal personages, served the practical purpose of protecting them from the scorching rays of a tropical sun and at the same time contributing to the pomp and splendor of the pageant.

The pictures on Greek vases show us the ladies of Athens and Corinth in various graceful poses, holding fans which, though still retaining the form of the palm-leaf, appear to have been, like the hand-mirror, an important and artistically ornamented adjunct of the toilet. The Roman women were by no means behind their Hellenic sisters in appreciation of these dainty trifles, as is proven by the numerous passages in the writings of the classic poets and historians; nay, in the degenerate days of the later Emperors the fan was part of the equipment of the elaborately-attired dandies who strolled through the marble halls of the baths.

The middle ages held it in no less esteem, and the most superb decorations were lavished upon it, but it still retained the original form of the palm-leaf, and usually consisted of bright-hued feathers fastened to a handle.

Not until the period of the rennaissance do we find a change in shape, and this, too, was doubtless introduced into Europe from the East by way of the greatest emporium of commerce during the middle ages—Venice. These new fans were little banners, either square or circular in form and made of silk or parchment, ornamented with painting or embroidery and often finished with a border of feathers fastened loosely on one side to a staff, around which they swung. But this shape, specially designated as Venetian, superb specimens of which are contained in a collection made by the Prince of Wales, was soon supplanted by the folding fan, which has reigned alone throughout Western countries ever since the sixteenth century. This, too, was ordinarily a gift from Eastern Asia, imitated in Italy—nay, it is probably the first example of the influence Japan has exerted upon Western art and which of late has made itself so distinctly felt in France.

The original folding-fan, according to the modern ideas, was enormous, and not until the seventeenth century did it shrink to moderate dimensions. The broad top has always afforded an admirable field for decoration by painting, embroidery, and lace of every description. The extremes of luxury attained by this article of dress are evinced by the statement that toward the close of the sixteenth century a fan valued at $9,000 was given to Margaret of Lorraine by Queen Margaret of Navarre. This beautiful toy was composed of mother of pearl set with precious stones. During the eighteenth century the material value of fans was greatly enhanced by art. Besides a number of nameless painters, whose grace and skill would secure them a conspicuous place among the artists of the present time, men of eminence, like Watteau and Boucher, did not distain to employ their genius in decorating fans.—Washington Star.

—Police—"What are you waiting around here for?" Sad Young Man—"I'm waiting to see a fellow get thrown down the steps. It's the fellow who beat me out of my girl. He has just gone in there to see about getting his consent. I knew he was coming, and have sent four peddlers and a book agent in there within the last half hour."

FLOATING HOSPITAL.

A Refuge That New Yorkers Have Built for the Poor.

Weekly Excursion of the Barge to New Dorp—Scenes at Starting and on the Way—How the Little Ones Enjoy Themselves.

[COPYRIGHT, 1890.]
[Special Correspondence.]

We had stopped at Fifth street. Our barge had floated, early that morning, from under the shadow of Bellevue Hospital to where the second landing is made. We had taken on at Twenty-sixth street, babies without number, smileless babies, so wizened and wan, so pale and weak, and so silent too, most of them, that one's heart ached. Not babies at all, one began to believe after looking into their faces. Old with an age that had known no youth, drawn with a suffering always mute, withered, inscrutable. No, verily, not babies, but incarnations of a misery centuries old—the aggregates of all man's sin to man, his sorrow, his unrelieved despair.

It was in vain, that, during that first half hour, the breezes came fresh from the river, and the flags floated freely against the blue sky above. The weight of that mystery—man's willingness to out-wit his brother, and so suffer such creatures as these babies to exist—bore too heavily. Not even when a gradual understanding of this philanthropy at work began to dawn on the mind could one throw off the gloom. For just then there came the landing at Fifth street, and more babies, more misery, more squalor, more wretchedness.

"Enteritis," "Meningitis," "Gastritis," called the doctors to each other in low tones, with quick flashes of the eye and wise nods over the heads of the people, while some of the babies are passed on board, and others, with contagious maladies, are sent back on shore. And the band plays above, and the crowds surge below, and the low tones of the doctors fall full on the ear. It all makes a drama of human life, haunting the memory like a cry.

The holiday-barge, to be sure, is not invariably there. The landing is almost always made in quiet, the doctors needing no policeman, the mothers undistracted by any rush. And after the barge has swung into the stream and the breezes have begun to stir faint color in some of the cheeks, one begins to realize the wonder of it all, the greatness of the charity, the marvel of its organization. One looks with a sort of glad surprise at those mothers who have come swarming from every dark and noisome alley, from out of damp cellars, down narrow, crooked stairs, bring their pinched and white-faced babies for a breath of this sweet, pure air. One forgets the woes in delight at the remedy.

It is about twenty-three years since "St. John's Guild" first began sending the sick children of tenement houses on free, fresh air excursions, and not only the sick children, but the worn and weary mothers as well. For it is one of the wise provisions of this organization that no sick child need be separated from its mother. So that in this way the child and the parent are both spared the nervous strain of parting; both are benefited, and above all, the mother has an opportunity to imbibe a little wisdom in regard to the care of her baby. The trained nurses are there every moment to direct her. The doctors are in and out among the patients all day long.

Four times a week the barge sails, and this barge, by the by, has a history, having once been burned when it was the "River Belle." Now she has been made over, and so changed as to be unrecognizable by the most ardent of her old admirers. There are two great decks. On one are the bath-rooms, the children's ward, the doctor's office, and on both benches and seats without number. In the hold is the dining room where every day all the mothers sit down to a freshly cooked hot dinner. From every available mast and pole above flags float, and as much of a holiday air as possible pervades every thing.

There are always two doctors in attendance, one the regular physician to whom this work has been appointed for the season, the other a physician sent for the day by the board of health. The doctors examine each mother and child who arrives at the gang plank, receiving from them their passes. This examination is made in order that none of the passengers may be exposed to any contagious disease, and the passes are filed in order that the physicians may be consulted in regard to any mistake in judgment they may have made. The number of passengers carried on any one trip is now limited to fourteen hundred, although until this regulation was put into effect some hundreds over this number were sometimes carried. The average cost a day for each passenger is twenty-four and one-half cents.

No patient, however, has any thing to pay for herself, neither on the barge, nor yet at the Seaside hospital. She is a guest, from the time she starts until she lands again.

At about 10:30 o'clock in the morning there is a stir and a movement on deck, and up the steps comes a man with a milk-can, holding a hundred quarts. Then there is a hurried rush, and the calm and ubiquitous policeman steps forward, and the tumult ceases, and as if by magic the crowd melts away into a long line of eager women and children, each one with a cup, or tin pail or its cover, held out to be filled with the warm sweet milk. No one is limited as to quantity, neither mothers nor children. Some of the wannest of the babies open their eyes gratefully, and one sees the suspicion of a color coming into their cheeks. A more cheerful atmosphere is felt everywhere. Some of the Italian babies, wrapped tightly in colored cloths, begin to play on the floor, their long earrings making a jingling sound. The Italian mothers begin to smile, flashing their white teeth at us over their shoulders. The old Irish woman in her clean white frilled cap has settled down with a placid smile, having found the neighbor's children that she brought on board and lost. The bundles that have lain about on the benches begin to unroll. Out of some come crusts and stale bananas, out of others come babies. Some of these begin to cry. But we are glad of the cry, for dead children do not cry, and every now and then some one says that that baby is dead. You look with startled, pitying glance, and the mother shakes her head and says: "Not yet."

"Not yet," why, of course "not yet," thinks the doctor, stooping to touch the child. And "not yet" echoes a sweet-voiced nurse, daintily draped, a lady one knows in a moment, bending and lifting the little one and carrying it to a white, clean bed in the ward. For into this ward all the very sick children are brought, and those that grow no better during this day's sail are taken with their mothers to the seaside hospital and kept there until they are well, or beyond our care forever.

Off at the other end of the boat is the bath-room, with another nurse and great heaps of clean towels. Into the tubs both hot and cold sea water is pumped, and any child may, with the doctor's permission, have a bath. And how they tumble about and splash in the water! And how droll some of them are! One is there, eight years old only, her face cumbered with great shining white spectacles. Down into the tub she goes, spectacles and all, coming out white, glistening and dripping, her long wet hair in lank lines over her face and those huge spectacles gleaming at the intruder with a sort of defiant wonder.

After dinner comes the stop for the patients destined for the seaside hospital. The barge anchors in mid-stream and the patients are carried ashore in boats, so long and so many-oared that one thinks of the early pilgrim fathers being rowed to some new strange home. And the doctor waits on shore with a flag of hope like a joyous pioneer.

This seaside hospital at New Dorp, Staten Island, arouses renewed enthusiasm. Built on piles, so giving a draught underneath, and within a hundred feet of high-water mark, with the sea on one side and the stretch of pine woods on the other, with wide verandahs and cool wards, it would be hard to find anywhere a place better adapted to its needs. None of the glaring white of the town hospitals is here. The wood is dark and restful to the eye. The glare of the ocean does not penetrate beyond the wide shade of the verandahs, and from the pine groves on the other side comes only a well-tempered, softened light. Two permanent physicians live here with trained nurses and matrons. When a sick baby is brought to the hospital the mother remains with it, and both are cared for in that same generous spirit which characterizes all that is done by president and managers for the sick and helpless of New York.

BOLTING-CLOTH FAN.

This Makes a Pretty and Useful Article.

The foundation of this lovely and peculiarly delicate fan is the common Japanese paper fan, not the kind which opens and shuts, but that having a bamboo handle, the upper end of which is split into fibres, forming the supports for the paper covering.

As a large handle is rather clumsy, select a smooth, unsoiled one of medium size.

First unfasten from each end of the curving, bow-like base of the fan, the ends of the strings that are interwoven with the ribs, then, just above the string and parallel with it, cut the ribs with sharp scissors, taking care to leave whatever paper comes below the cut, as that helps to keep the ribs in place. This is illustrated in Fig. 1.

Pull out of the handle the curving base from which the sirings were removed.

The next thing needed is a strip of rattan one-eighth of an inch in diameter. It can be bought at a harness shop, and comes in pieces about a yard long. This is to be the circumference of the fan, and the bolting-cloth is fastened to it. Decide how large you want it by bending the rattan into circles of different sizes until one in good proportion to the handle is found. It is well to have it correspond in size with a plate, as that can be used afterward in making it perfectly round, and also in marking the exact size of the fan on the bolting-cloth. Measure the circumference and add to it about four inches extra for splicing.

The splicing is very simple. Make a long, slanting cut on the upper side of one end of the rattan, and a corresponding cut on the lower side of the other end, as shown in Fig. 1. Pass one end through the hole in the handle and bend the other over to meet it. Fit the ends nicely together, wind the joint with thread, and shape the whole into a circle, using the plate as a gauge. Then tie the loose ends of the string to each side. As the rattan is much smaller than the curved base removed from the hole in the handle, the remaining space in the hole must be plugged with a very short wedge on each side. One long wedge will make the whole thing "skew" in a way that is very difficult to manage.

The bolting-cloth cover is the next thing in hand. Nearly every one knows that this cloth is the same as that used in flour-mills. It is literally bolting-cloth, but in spite of its utilitarian name it is an exquisite fabric, extremely delicate and yet quite strong. It is always white, but there are at least two qualities, and the coarser woven should be used for the fan, as it is easier to paint on, and for this purpose oil paints are considered the best.

The design being a matter of individual taste, it is only suggested that pink or white flowers are particularly well adapted for this work. A branch of pine and cones have also been used with good effect.

As the fan is covered only down even with the strings, cut the cloth accordingly and press it smooth with a warm flat-iron. The design may be traced in pencil as the cloth is almost transparent.

In painting always keep a piece of writing paper behind the cloth, and touching it. Use plenty of turpentine in the paint, for the meshes of the cloth must not be clogged with it; only the threads should be colored. The paper behind absorbs most of the paint, but an unglazed paper absorbs too much. The paper should be changed frequently. If the cloth begins to "fill up" with the paint, go over it with the turpentine alone.

Pin the painted cloth firmly and smoothly to a board and having smeared one side of the rattan with glue, press it to the cloth, taking care to preserve the circular form. Keep it in place with needles pushed slanting into the board. They are longer than pins, and do not make perceptible holes in the cloth. The gluing is only to get the cloth on smoothly, and when dry it must be sewed over and over.

The rattan is then bound with silver braid, beginning at the point where the strings are tied, and ending at the opposite point. The binding requires some care as the edges of the braid are sewed through the cloth and pulled together tight.

A strip of narrower braid is used to cover the strings and tops of the ribs. It is placed on both sides of the fan and sewed on through the cloth. The fan is finished, as shown in Fig. 2, by a bow of ribbon at the handle.

The braid can be bought of a silversmith or a manufacturer of regalias, and comes just the right width to cover the rattan.—Youth's Companion.

Mortuary Gold.

The French scientist, Mr. Victor Mennier, as the result of careful inquiries, asserts that the American dentists insert in American teeth, each year, the enormous amount of 800 kilogrammes (about 1,800 pounds) of the precious metal, which represents nearly $450,000. This gold is never recovered, of course, but is buried with the person in whose mouth it is placed. Making allowance for the rapid increase of the population of the United States and for the continued deterioration of American teeth, it appears that in less than one hundred years the American cemeteries will contain a larger amount of gold than now exists in France.—Scientific American.

THE FIGHT STOPPED

McAuliffe and Slavin Arrested in London.

SPORTING MEN DISAPPOINTED.

An English Magistrate Will Examine the Gloves This Afternoon.

In Case the Men Are Prohibited from Meeting the Battle Will Take Place on the Continent—Richard K. Fox and Lord Lonsdale Ready to Put Up the Required Money.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—There was intense excitement in Fleet street and at the various sporting clubs over the arrest of McAuliffe and Slavin, which has been received with a general feeling of disappointment throughout the city.

The offices of the sporting papers were besieged by people. Bulletins were placed in the shop windows and crowds filled the streets. Then the excitement shifted to the district in which the Ormonde Club is situated.

Both men were put under $10,000 bonds on their own recognizances to appear in court again this afternoon, with an additional caution from the justice that they had better not fight. They were not absolutely forbidden to fight or even to keep the peace. They were simply put under bonds for their appearance in court to-day dead or alive, but they did not fight last night. They will appear in court and will undoubtedly be bound over to keep the peace, which will drive them to the other side of the English Channel to fight if they mean to fight at all.

McAuliffe's backers declare that Slavin, knowing that he was not in proper training to fight last night, allowed the time of the proposed contest to become known to the police.

It is suspected by many, however, that the Pelican Club set the machinery of the law in motion, in revenge for Slavin's refusal to fight in the club's rooms. The postponement of the affair has profoundly disgusted the sporting fraternity.

Lord Lonsdale and Richard K. Fox met at the Pelican Club and decided that should Slavin and McAuliffe fail, by the interference of the authorities, to bring off the fight in the Ormonde Club, rather than see the match fall through they will put up the original purse offered by the Ormonde Club, £500 each, and bring the fight off on the Continent with a limited number of spectators on each side.

No proposed fight since the memorable battle between Sullivan and Kilrain has excited so much attention as the Slavin-McAuliffe contest has done. Throughout England, America and Australia it has been the subject of talk and speculation since the men signed articles.

The men have trained carefully and conscientiously for their battle. Slavin trained with Billy McCarthy, the antipodean, who is preparing for his go with Ted Pritchard, which will soon take place at the Pelican Club. Siavin trained under the mentorship of Jack Lewis at the Cliff Hotel, Dovercourt. Dovercourt is one of the prettiest and quietest seaside resorts on the east coast of England, and excellent judgment was shown by Slavin and his trainer in their selection.

McAuliffe reduced his surplus avoirdupois about forty pounds at Wells-by-the-Sea, under the personal supervision of his trainer and manager, Billy Madden. Joe has worked hard and well, and despite the great reduction in weight, which was in all probability the greatest contract of its kind ever accomplished by a pugilist, the Mission Boy is lithe and active as a young kitten.

Suicide of a Wealthy Manufacturer.

SANFORD, Me., Sept. 23.—Sylvester Cummings, a wealthy retired manufacturer at Springvale, committed suicide during the morning by taking laudanum and strychnine. Cummings was indicted by the grand jury last week for burning a barn at Shoyleigh two weeks ago, and was arrested and put under $5,000 bonds on Saturday. He left a letter admitting the poisoning, but denying the barn burning.

New York Democrats Meet.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—The Democratic State Committee are holding a meeting tod-ay at the Hoffman House, the Hon. Edward Murphy of Troy presiding. The Hon. Robert Earle will be renominated as Judge of the Court of Appeals, and an address may be issued to the voters of the State defining the issues now before the people.

German Catholic Congress.

IN SECRET SESSION.

Street Railroad Knights Holding Their Annual Convention.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—National Trades District No. 226, Knights of Labor, composed of horse car employes of this city, Lynn, Chicago, Rochester, Buffalo, Detroit, Indianapolis, Cleveland, Albany, Omaha and other cities, is holding its annual convention in this city.

Ever since the last tie-up in this city efforts have been made to reorganize the local assemblies, and the railroad companies have had spotters engaged to watch the men to find out what was being done.

In consequence of this a very secret meeting is being held in an uptown hall, over which Master Workman James H. Magee presides. Delegates are present from the various cities, representing about 20,000 Knights.

Master Workman Magee spoke of the attacks made upon the order, and of how local assemblies in this city had been disrupted and men black-listed. He advised that all business be transacted in the closest secrecy, as the railroad companies agents were wide awake and were anxious to find out what they had done.

A committee was appointed on credentials, and reports were made from all parts of the country showing that in some cities the organization was perfect. Officers will be elected to-day. The Master Workman will probably be selected from Chicago and the Secretary from Lynn.

THE READING DISASTER.

The Coroner's Jury Blame the Signalman of Engine 347.

READING, Pa., Sept. 23.—Testimony was taken at Shoemakersville by the jury empanelled by Coroner Hoffman concerning the disaster at that place, by which 21 persons were killed and 30 odd injured. The evidence of the crews of the coal train was heard and the jury rendered the following verdict:

"In our opinion, the cause of the accident was due to the negligence of the signalman of Engine 347, who remained in his caboose while the train was slowing up, instead of getting off and placing the proper signals in such a manner as to enable the engineer of the train following, Engine 921, sufficient time to bring his train to a stop. As a result Engine 921 crashed into the rear of the train drawn by Engine 347, throwing the caboose and two eight-wheeled coal cars on the northbound track, resulting in this great loss of life."

The testimony showed that the collision of the coal trains and that of the express train with the wrecked cars occurred at about the same moment.

Burial of the Reading Victims.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 23.—This city has never before witnessed so sorrowful a scene as the burials of the victims of the Reading Railroad disaster. All places of business were closed from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. The funeral of Engineer John White took place at 10 a. m., and that of Solomon Hoover at 4 p. m. The obsequies of General Solicitor George R. Kaercher, of the Reading Railroad Company, took place at 2:30 o'clock. A special train was run from Philadelphia to accommodate those wishing to attend the funeral.

He Was Fond of a Joke.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 23.—Mr. John B. Clements, 58 years old, a member of the printing firm of Plumly & Clements, of this city, committed suicide at his place of business in the morning by shooting himself through the head. He left a note saying: "I am fond of a joke, but this is the last one I will try to crack." His body was found, cold in death, by one of his employes whose duty it was to open the establishment. Dull business is thought to have been the cause of the act.

Jack Dempsey Leaves for Portland.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Jack Dempsey with his manager left here for Portland, Ore., at 10 o'clock this morning. He will return about Christmas. It is understood that the Puritan Club will offer a good purse for LaBlanche and Dempsey if the marine will come here. Dempsey expressed disappointment at not being able to arrange a match with Fitzsimmons, and said he was willing to do anything fair to meet the New Zealander.

Eloped with a Chinaman.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Sept. 23.—An other sensational elopement is the talk of the town. Wing Ching, a Chinese laundryman, has run off with Miss Lottie Dickinson, a comely American girl, who was employed at a boarding house near Ching's laundry. Ching is a well educated Chinaman and speaks the English language very fluently. The trunks of both Ching and Miss Dickinson were sent to Pell street.

Anson's Chicago Team in Second Place in the League.

Ward's Wonders Defeated by the Clevelands—The Giants Win at Pittsburg—New York's National League Team Play the Pittsburgs a Fine Game at Wheeling—Standing of the Clubs.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 23.—The only reason for the mystery surrounding the sale of the Cincinnati Club is that it would be impolite for either party in the transaction to come out and say at this time that the sale has been completed. The deal contemplates the dropping of the Buffalo club. Mack, one of its catchers, will come to Pittsburg, as will two others.

The other startling feature of this movement of the Players' League is the statement that Byrne is no longer connected with the ownership of the Brooklyn National League Club, and that Doyle and Bell, the owners, have gone into partnership with John M. Ward, the players to be divided among the other League clubs and Ward's team remaining in Brooklyn.

Later dispatches from the West tell a different kind of a story. In an interview President Byrnes says that the story is the veriest bosh, while an interview with Ward implies the same thing. Ward also says that the proposed deal between the Brotherhood and the Cincinnati Club is off.

CLERGYMEN IN POLITICS.

A Heated Discussion About Joining With Labor Organizations.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—The call of the Municipal Reform League for a meeting of clergymen to consider the local political situation was responded to by a large number of clericals, who met in Hardman's Hall.

Father Ducey, of St. Leo's Catholic Church called the meeting to order, and in his introductory remarks denounced the government of this city as a disgrace and a reproach to its pastors.

When Father Ducey had concluded his remarks, the Rev. Mr. McChesney was introduced as the chairman of the meeting. The chairman, on taking charge of the meeting, said: "Courageous, honest and capable men were needed more than Democrats, Republicans or Prohibitionists. No political party had a monopoly of good men."

Dr. Howard Crosby, who followed Chairman McChesney, enlivened the meeting with a characteristic address, in which he humorously depicted the monstrous corruption of New York municipal government.

Father Huntington offered a resolution that the league support no candidate for mayor not "receipted" for by a majority of the labor organizations of the city.

Dr. Crosby opposed Father Huntington's resolution, saying that he was opposed to anything in the nature of entangling alliances. A heated and somewhat acrimonious discussion followed.

Finally, the coil was untangled by the passage of a resolution inviting the co-operation of all labor organizations.

KILLED BY HIGHWAYMEN.

A Laborer Choked to Death and Robbed of $600.

DOYLESTOWN, Pa., Sept. 23.—Joseph Hefner, a laborer on the railroad being constructed from Hartsville to Newhope, Bucks County, was murdered about 1 a. m.

He was on his way home with his wife from a visit to his brother, who keeps a boarding shanty at Rush Valley, and the couple were walking on the railroad track when they were accosted by two men, who told his wife to go home and tend her babies, as they had business with her husband.

One of the men seized Joseph and the other pushed his wife to one side. Mrs. Hefner ran back to the shanty at Rush Valley and informed her brother-in-law of the circumstance.

He then accompanied the woman to where she had left her husband and found his dead body lying on the track. He had been choked to death. Upon examination of the body it was found that his clothing had been ripped open and a belt, which he wore about his body, and which contained about $600, had been taken. The murderers escaped, and up to noon to-day have eluded arrest.

Postponed by Order of the Queen.

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 23.—The case of Correspondent O'Brien, arrested for sending broadcast the story about Prince George and a street fight, was called again and another adjournment taken. It is learned on good authority that the case will be discontinued and that the Governor-General has received instructions from the Queen to see that it is done. It is said Her Majesty disapproves of proceedings taken against a subject for a private offence against a member of the Royal family, holding that their dignity is beyond peradventure and cannot be affected by a scurrilous story.

Chicago Switchmen Quit Work.

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—Switching at the stock yards is once more at a standstill. All of the engineers employed by the new Stock Yards Switching Association left their posts and refused to do another stroke of work. Fifteen engines were left idle and the yards were completely tied up. This action on the part of the engineers was brought about by the refusal of the association to discharge a couple of non-union men in their employ.

The Site Question Settled.

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—A committee from the Local World's Fair Directory waited on the South Park Commissioners and laid before them the request of the National Commission that Washington Park be included in the site for the fair. After some discussion, the South Park Commissioners decided to accede to the request of the National Commission. So the vexed question of a satisfactory sight is at last settled.

Cal Wood Taken to Dannemora Prison.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., Sept. 23.—Cal Wood, the murderer of Pasco, who was sentenced to death by electricity, has been taken to Dannemora prison, there to await the execution of his sentence, which event is set for some time during the week of Nov. 3. The condemned man preserves the air of stoicism and indifference which characterized his demeanor at the time sentence was rendered.

Order of American Mechanics.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Sept. 23.—The United Order of American Mechanics are holding their annual meeting here to-day. Councils and commanderies in the States of California, Ohio, Michigan, Kansas and Minnesota are represented. This afternoon officers will be elected. TROY, N. Y., Sept. 23.—John Kiernan was arraigned before Justice Grogan of West Troy, charged with placing obstructions on the track of the Central Hudson road at Karners on August 25. His examination was postponed for a day. Buett and Cain, who are under indictment for interfering with a switch near East Albany, were in court as witnesses.

WASHINGTON TOPICS

The House Not Likely to Adjourn Before October 3.

MUCH WORK STILL TO BE DONE

Republicans Decide in Caucus Not to Drop the Venable-Langston Case.

A Report That the Conference Committee Cannot Agree on the Tariff Bill—A Number of Business Firms Withdraw Their Protest and Ask for the Passage of the Bankruptcy Bill.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Those who are making prophecies of an adjournment of Congress by next Saturday or the following Monday, lose sight of the vast amount of clerical labor which is yet to be performed upon the Tariff bill after it comes from the conference committee, and which will be an important factor in closing the business of Congress at the time named. Thus, in the event that the bill is finished by the conference committee to-morrow, is agreed to in the House and Senate, and reaches the enrolling clerks by Saturday, it will be Wednesday noon of next week before the bill is ready to go to the President.

The Deficiency Appropriation bill comprises 130 pages of matter, and will require much labor to get it into condition. The labor bills which it is proposed to pass will consume some time, and the employes of the House who know how much time is required to finish the work, say it will be at least a week from Saturday before the House is ready for adjournment. If other legislation is enacted this time will be extended.

WAITING FOR A QUORUM.

The Republicans Decide in Caucus Not to Drop the Venable-Langston Case.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—The ineffectual efforts of the managers of the House to secure a quorum of Republican members in order that the deadlock on the Langston-Venable contested election case could be broken, was the cause of another Republican caucus—the second held for the same purpose within a week.

The caucus was called to order immediately after the adjournment of the House, and lasted nearly two hours.

Discussion on the subject of plans for securing the attendance of absent Republicans was general, and Mr. Moore, of New Hampshire, proposed that absentees should be fined $500 each. Severe condemnation of absent Republicans was indulged in.

A count of absentees brought forth promises from a number of members that a sufficient number of the absentees to make a quorum would be present to-morrow. Some members urged the abandonment of the Langston case, but this action was opposed by most of the leaders, and it was determined, without taking a vote, that the case should not be dropped, and that adjournment should be postponed until Langston is seated. With this understanding the caucus adjourned, leaving it to the several State delegations to undertake the task of securing the attendance of absent colleagues.

Campaign Work in the West.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—A dispatch from Des Moines, Ia., says it is definitely announced that Speaker Reed will go to Iowa immediately after the adjournment of Congress and assist the Republicans to canvass in Gear's, Henderson's and Lacey's districts, which are believed to be doubtful. The active Republican compaign will begin the first week in October. All possible efforts were made to have Secretary Blaine visit Iowa, but he telegraphed Chairman Mack that it would be impossible for him to leave Washington.

Cannot Agree on the Tariff Bill.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—The Republican members of the Tariff Conference Committees got together at the Capitol but made little progress. It is now thought possible that a report on the Tariff bill will be ready by to-morrow, but that it will be a disagreeing report, as the Senate and House Republicans cannot reach an agreement on the Sugar schedule.

The Bankruptcy Bill.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Twenty-five Chicago business firms, headed by Henry W. King & Co., who heretofore protested against the passage of the Torrey Bankruptcy bill, have withdrawn their names from the protest and requested the immediate enactment of the bill. Senator Cullom today presented the petitions in the Senate.

Shot Himself in His Wife's Presence.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Sept. 23.—John McGill, a carpenter of this place, attempted suicide by firing a pistol shot at his head, in the presence of his wife and children. "You think I don't dare blow my brains out," he said to them, then pulled the trigger. He was taken to the Memorial Hospital, where, in explanation of his conduct, he said, "A poor man has no right to live."

Thirteen Rioters Killed.

BOMBAY, Sept. 23.—A revolt has occurred at Cambay, province of Guzerat against the imposition of certain taxes. The troops charged the mob, and in the conflict thirteen of the rioters were killed and twenty injured. Two hundred prisoners were made.

Matterson Defeats Neilson.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Sept. 23.—In a sculling match on the Paramatta river for $1,000 a side, Matterson defeated Neilson.

BIRCHALL ON TRIAL.

Taking Testimony in the Famous Benwell Murder Case.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Sept. 23.—John Reginald Birchall boldly faced judge and jury in the Oxford County Court of Assizes here and pleaded not guilty to the indictment charging him with the murder of Frederick C. Benwell, in a dismal swamp, near the village of Princeton on February 17th last.

His bearing was in keeping with the circumstances surrounding the crime, which almost outrival the wildest work of fiction, and which was planned and executed with a consummate coolness that is personified in the man himself.

There is intense interest in the case and the town is full of strangers. The court room cannot accommodate one-tenth of the people who desire admittance. The ablest legal talent in the country is engaged on the case—for the prosecution Mr. Cartright, Crown Attorney, with a great reputation, assisted by Benjamin B. Osler. For the defense Mr. Blackstock, who is reputed to be one of the ablest criminal lawyers in Canada, is leader, assisted by Isidore Hellmuth and Mr. Finkle.

The trial promises to be one of the most interesting since that of Maxwell, in St. Louis, a few years ago.

Mr. McDonald, a retired farmer, was the first witness called for the Crown. He testified that he first saw the prisoner in 1888, when he was sent to him as a farm pupil. He then knew the prisoner as F. A. Somerset. He was placed on the farm of Mr. Wilcox, but returned to Mr. McDonald in the morning and said he did not come out to work on a farm. The prisoner subsequently boarded with Mrs. McCabe, and occupied his time driving about. Upon cross-examination the witness stated that Birchall had written to the London firm which he represented, and accused him of defrauding the farm pupils. He had an unpleasantness with Birchall and had loaned him money. The witness contradicted himself on some minor points.

Mrs. Birchall was not in court. All witnesses, except the one testifying, are excluded.

Michael Roell, who was clerk at the Stafford House, Buffalo, at the time Birchell stopped there, died during the morning at Suspension Bridge. His testimony had been taken by a commission.

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. FORCE, Publishers and Proprietors.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—Further developments concerning the telephone pole war in the Borough will appear in THE PRESS in due time.

—Ruffles are being revived this Fall for women's wear in many materials, of which feathers seem to be the favorite.

—Members of the Young Men's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A., are reminded of their meeting at the Association rooms this evening.

—Jeremiah Manning and wife and Wm. M. Sandford and wife have sold to John B. Mills, land on Sandford avenue, Plainfield, 50x198 feet for $1,250.

—The Crescent managers should most certainly grant the West Ends the privilege of bringing a brass band with them next Saturday, and should provide seats for them.

—Edward Warren, of East Front street, was run into by another bicyclist, while riding his wheel, Saturday evening, and his right arm was so severely sprained that he still has to carry it in a sling.

—Dixon's Tourists in the ever popular society play of "East Lynne, or The Elopement," at the Amphion Theatre, to-night. To-morrow evening Tom Taylor's masterpiece, "Ticket of Leave Man."

—The first peace dance of Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, Improved Order of Red Men, will be held in The Crescent "on the sleep of the Ninth Sun of Traveling Moon, G. S. D. 399," Thursday evening, Oct. 9.

—The suit of Shotwell vs Rice for libel, was called today at Somerville, but subsequently adjourned until the December term because of the unavoidable absence of certain important witnesses for the defence.

—The rage for cane and umbrella heads of remarkable shape and size, or conspicuous, grotesque and costly mountings, has gone so far that a reaction is expected this Winter, and a modest cane will be the correct thing.

—A new material called rubber velvet is made by sprinkling powdered felt of any color over rubber cloth while the latter is hot and soft. The result looks like felt cloth, but is elastic, waterproof and exceedingly light.

—The third anniversary and lunch box sociable of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O.U.A. M., will be held in Amphion Hall, instead of Central Hall, as was mentioned heretofore in these columns, on October 6, at eight o'clock.

—At last night's meeting of the Hope Chapel Temperance Club it was decided to change the meeting night from Monday to Tuesday. One young man signed the Club pledge, and five juveniles became associate members.

—Thomas Keller won the silver cake basket yesterday, by killing 17 out of 20 birds at Campbell's grounds. It has now been won consecutively by S. G. Smith, E. Teeple and T. H. Keller. It must be won twice to be owned.

—Messrs Doud and Rice, who are the foreman of construction for the Water Works Company of Plainfield, have been awarded a contract for laying about five miles of water mains in South Orange, and expect to begin work to-morrow.

—Amateur photographers who have passed the apprenticeship period find scope for artistic taste in making complex photographs. A sky taken at one time, a landscape at another, and a figure somewhere else, are combined in one picture, with splendid effect in some cases.

—Quite a large audience greeted the Dixon Tourist company upon the occasion of their first night, at Amphion Theatre, last evening. The play was "Kathleen," well acted by a versatile cast. Tonight will be given "East Lynne." The prices are low, but the company includes many high grade people.

—An officer of the Reading Railroad makes the important point that up to the accident of last week no passenger on that road had ever been injured who kept his seat. The moral is clear. If you are a passenger on the Reading Railroad, no matter if the train rolls down an embankment, retain your presence of mind and your seat.

—"Fair time," says the Flemington Democrat, "brings many of our old friends to Flemington. A pleasant call last Thursday from our former fellow-townsman, Wilson F. Culper, who has located in Plainfield, reminds us that he is engaged in the grocery business in that city. He is fully competent in that line, as he has had a large experience in this town Success to him."

—The Bible class for ladies which has been carried on for the last two years, will begin its third year of study Friday afternoon, Sept, 26, at 4:30 o'clock, in the Y. M. C. A. rooms, East Front street. A short meeting will be held for organization purposes, and for the consideration of plans of study. All ladies who would like to become members of this class are invited to be present at that time.

Two Boys and a Runaway Horse.

A horse owned by P. J. Zeglio, from over the mountain, ran away on West Fifth street yesterday afternoon, overturned the buggy to which it was attached and dragged the buggy, with two boys underneath it, several blocks. The boys had their garments soiled, and were somewhat bruised, but when the horse broke away from the torn harness and broken buggy and they were given a chance to crawl out they had life enough left to give the horse a vigorous chase. They were gleeful when it was caught.

A CUP OF POISON FOR TWO.

An Inhuman Father Seeks to Kill Himself and Offspring.

The charge of attempted murder has been made against Henry Hess, of North Plainfield, by his wife, who has promised to swear to her complaint this afternoon.

The statement of Mrs. Hess, in which she is corroborated by her daughters, is that Hess went home a day or two ago, infuriated because his wife had testified against him for drunkenness and abuse, and deliberately announced that he intended putting himself out of the way. Then, she continues, he poured a quantity of wine into a glass, filled up the vial with rat poison, grinned sardonically, and prepared to execute his threat. Just as his hand clutched at the fatal draught his terrified wife sprang forward, threw herself on the floor before him, and pleaded with him to desist.

Gloating over the woman's misery, the monster bethought himself of a way to add still further to her poignant anguish. The four children of the family were all at hand. Three were the offspring of the first husband of Mrs. Hess. The fourth was a young child by her present marriage, and the one she calls her dearest.

Hess caught the little one up from the floor, his wife alleges, and forced the cup of poison to its lips. The child clinched its teeth, and turned its head aside. Some of the liquid was spilled. The father grew furious, and tried hard to make his baby daughter drink. The mother, who had been spell-bound with affright, recovered her energies, leaped frantically upon the man, and with superhuman strength tore the child from his grasp. She and the children then fled from the room, leaving him alone.

Last night Hess was arrested for nonpayment of a fine of $10 inflicted last week. He is still in the borough lock-up, and will be served with a warrant on the charge of attempted murder as soon as his wife signs the complaint.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Minnie L. Force, of North avenue, is visiting Miss Jennie Voorhees, of Brooklyn.

Miss Grosscup, of Pennsylvania, has recently been appointed operator at the Fanwood station.

Mrs. Francis C. Agans, of Three Bridges, is visiting friends in this city and Dunellen, for a few days.

George Wharton Edwards, of Plainfield, has a delightful story, charmingly illustrated by himself, in The Cosmopolitan for October. The title is "A Brabantian Happening."

A. R. Randolph, aged 71, died at Summit Sunday. Funeral services will be held at the Summit Baptist church tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. Interment will follow in Plainfield.

Dr. Edward Rushmore and Carman Panse are at "The Antlers," Raquette Lake, N. Y. The former writes that the latter has improved greatly in all respects even beyond his expectation.

Chief Doane, J. E. Turrill, J. B. Gable and August Saltzman, are delegates from this city to the State Convention of Firemen's Relief Associations, held at Trenton, to-morrow. They left Plainfield this afternoon.

An Evening of Art and Eloquence at Reform Hall.

Those who failed to attend Professor Donald Downie's illustrated lecture on Napoleon Bonaparte, last evening, missed a rare treat. From his last Winter's season at the Union Square Theatre, New York, he had brought the highest encomiums of the press, but no one was prepared for anything quite so finished as his effort of last evening.

About 100 superbly colored views that passed during the course of an hour and a half, which seemed too short, and an eloquent discourse that ran without a moment's flagging through a subject in which he is thoroughly posted; then, a series of wonderful dissolving views, moving figures, sailing ships, dancing skeletons, magic hands writing mysterious characters on the great screen, and closing with a display of the masterpieces from the art galleries of Europe and the Paris Exposition. This was what they missed who staid away and what was thoroughly enjoyed by a large audience who interrupted the lecturer by frequent rounds of applause.

Prof. Downie has been requested to remain one more evening in Reform Hall, and to-night will give his hearers a tour through the picturesque scenes of Ireland and Scotland. On Thursday evening he closes with a benefit to the Warren Union Mission in their chapel, with his trip to Japan.

Put Up to be Knocked Down.

After the publication in these columns yesterday of the nomination of John Kean, Jr., the following telegram was received by City Clerk Coward of this city, who was appointed by the convention to notify Mr. Kean:

J. B. Coward, Esq.—I appreciate the honor, but cannot give the time necessary for a proper canvass, so must decline.

JOHN KEAN, JR.

The declination of Mr. Kean was announced to the convention. After a short recess Hon. Amos Clark, of Elizabeth, was nominated by acclamation and accepted.

The news, however, acknowledges that there is no hope for Clark. This following is from the news of yesterday:

GRISSENHEIMER UNANIMOUSLY ELECTED.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Sept. 23d. (Special)—At the Congressional election to-day Geissenheimer was unanimously elected!

Some Prominent Plainsfielders on the Juries.

The following are the names of those from this city selected to serve on the struck juries to try the race track associations and bookmakers. There are nine indictments. Two against the associations for keeping disorderly houses, and the others are against the bookmakers. John Nathan, one of the defendants, has died since the indictment was found.

The State vs. The New Jersey Jockey Club. William Sterling, Daniel W. Littell, Dorsey W. Hyde, Ephraim Miller, Howard L. Emerson, Joseph W. Sandford.

The State vs. the Linden Park Blood Horse association. George W. F. Randolph, Robert J. Livingston, Pliny Fisk, Harry G Runkle, John E. Stewart.

The State vs. Ike S. Thompson. Robert S. Manning, John M. Crane, J. Smith Garretson.

The State vs. Henry Stedeker. J. Smith Garretson.

The State vs. George Johnson. B. Frank Coriell, Daniel S. Roberts, Ephriam Miller.

The State vs. George Johnson. B Frank Coriell, Robert S. Manning, George W. F. Randolph, J B. Drayton, Ernest R. Ackerman, Harry G. Runkle.

The Hon. John Kean, Jr., Has Both Eyes on the Water Works Plant, Today.

The train arriving in Plainfield this morning at 11:58, deposited at the station Hon. John Kean, Jr., and Counselor Frank Bergen, of Elizabeth, the new members of the board of directors of the Plainfield Water Supply Co., whose election and the subsequent choice of Mr. Bergen as President of the Board, has already been exclusively told of in these columns.

These two gentlemen took a carriage at the station and drove about the city. It might have been only a coincidence, but the route they took was the same as that laid down by the Water Works company for their street mains. Mr. Kean sat on the back seat, and Mr. Bergen in front. The former was seen to frequently wave his hand to the right or left while speaking, as though asserting that Mr. Kean of the Water Supply Co., would change this plan of the Water Works Co., or intimating that he approved of that.

The "New company," which THE PRESS has already explained is a combination of Contract and Charter owners, has not yet submitted to the Water Board a proposition of what they are willing to do. Messrs Kean, Bergen and other directors will hold a meeting this afternoon and probably drew up such a proposition. As soon as it is received by Messrs Newhall and Rushmore, they will call a meeting of the Council and submit it. Then the Council will or will not approve, as they see fit.

A Chowder Party of Royal Arcanumites.

The "informal clam chowder" given at the rooms of Plainfield Council, Royal Arcanum, last evening, was understood to be District Deputy, Grand Regent, A. W. Rand's treat, and it was a fine one. Wm. H. Lyon and Charles Kellogg, of the Committee on the Good of the Order, attended to the lay out and its service in a way that thoroughly satisfied every inner-man present.

Besides this feast of material good things, there was a feast of good things for the mind. The large delegation of members present from Fireside Council of Westfield, came up loaded with a programme of entertainment. Of this, of course, the best was Editor Pearsall's recitations. Past Regent Grant, also, was much appreciated, and the music all round was good. E. M. Bodman delivered one of those most interesting addresses of his that are always so highly enjoyed.

Disastrous Ending of a Scotch Plains Sunday Frolic.

A stage containing eighteen people, returning to Newark from Scotch Plains, Sunday evening, was precipitated twenty feet down an embankment at the side of the road, near Springfield, and was completely overturned. Five of the occupants were injured. Joseph Bundy's shoulder was broken, and his wife's collar bone fractured and head cut. Moses Chadwick was severely bruised, and his wife's wrist was broken, and Thomas Sheaf had his left knee fractured. The injured were cared for by residents of Springfield for the night, and yesterday were conveyed to their homes in Newark.

Doctor and Mariner Each Kill a Deer.

On Saturday last, Dr. Daniel Cory Adams of Grove street, and Captain Benjamin Doane of LaGrande avenue, each shot a real deer. They had been in camp in the Adirondacks, some miles from Raquette Lake, for some days, but up to Saturday had only secured small game and a lot of big trout.

Gone, but Not Regretted.

After Wiegand's wretched display of ball playing and base running, Saturday, a number of the team stated they would not play with him again. The Crescents' managers thereupon wrote him that his services would be dispensed with in the future.

Minstrels Thursday.

W. S. Cleveland's Consolidated Minstrels will appear at Music Hall, Thursday evening. The organization is of exceptional strength, containing many well known favorites of the burnt cork profession. The first part has a lavish and very beautiful setting, while the costumes of the performers are simply gorgeous. Billy Emerson, Barney Fagan, Hughey Dougherty and Luke Schoolcraft are the end men and a funnier quartette of humorists is never seen. Prominent among the singers are: Signor Benedetto, a wonderful male soprano, and Haydon Tilla, a fine vocalist.

The second part is full of entertaining novelties, among which are: "The Alpine Mountaineers," Fields and Hanson, "The Phantom Cuirassiers," Billy Emerson's specialties, and Griffin and Marks The performance of the Craggs, the British gentlemen acrobats, is simply wonderful and must be seen to be appreciated.

John Burns and Labor Organizations.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—In a speech at a large labor meeting at Battersea, John Burns declared that out of 2,000 strikes during 1889 only thirty had been unsuccessful. He regarded the outlook as highly encouraging for great improvement in the condition of workingmen. The activity with which the organization of labor is progressing is indicated by the fact that 117 new unions have been registered during the past twenty months.

An Empress to Cross the Atlantic.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—Spanish advices state that the Empress of Austria, now traveling in Europe incognita, will shortly cross the Atlantic in the same fashion and visit Cuba. Whether she will extend her visit to America is not stated. The Empress traveled through England as Mrs. Nicholson, but frequently changes her name.

Actress Marie Hock Poisoned.

BERLIN, Sept. 23.—The actress Marie Hock, who made her debut in New York, died here from the effects of poison, administered as the result of a blunder on the part of either her physician or a chemist. An official inquiry to determine the responsibility for the fatal mistake is in progress.

Victim of an Organized Plot.

DUBLIN, Sept. 23.—Mr. Wm. O'Brien writes to the secretary of the John Daly Amnesty Committee of Tipperary that he has been for some time in communication with an Englishman of much eminence at Birmingham, who has discovered startling proofs that Daly was the victim of an organized plot on the part of the Irish police and their emissaries. This statement is based on the authority of the chief constable of one of the principal cities of the kingdom, whose confession has been sent to Home Secretary Matthews. Daly is serving a sentence of life imprisonment for dynamiting.

Robbed the Hotel Safe.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Sept. 23.—The Sixth Ward Hotel safe was robbed last night of $1,176 in cash and gold watches valued at $600. The thief knew the combination.

THE CENTRAL'S EXTENSIONS.

Important Changes Again Reported as Soon to be Made by That Company.

A despatch from Newark to the Elizabeth Journal, says that the proposed extensions of the Central railroad, which have so long been talked of, have been under serious consideration by the officers of the company within the last few days, and as the matter looks at present the long contemplated changes will soon be made. These changes are of the first importance to a large section of the neighborhood of this city. It is proposed to make the Newark and New York railroad a part of the main line at Fanwood. The connecting line will cross Broad street at the present terminus of the Newark and New York railroad, and will run in a southerly direction between Washington and Plane streets, thence around the foot of Clinton hill to Wyoming and Fanwood. This line will run around the foot of the Orange mountains near Milburn and through Springfield. Over it all through Central and Baltimore and Ohio trains will run. The old line will be used mainly for the transportation of freight.

From Wyoming a branch road will be built, running between the second mountains and the hills, through Milburn, crossing Livingston township at Washington place, and thence to Morristown. The building of this line will prove a serious blow to the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western's monopoly of traffic in the region beyond Morristown.

The line from Fanwood to Wyoming will be extended up the valley between the first and second mountains to connect with the Greenwood Lake railroad at Great Notch, and from that point through the town of Little Falls to Paterson, where it will connect with the main line of the Erie railroad.

This extension will open up a new route for transportation of coal from the mines in Carbon county, Pa., to New York State and New England, by way of Easton, the Erie railroad and the Central. All the proposed lines will pass through a very fertile country, which stands much in need of railroad facilities for its proper development.

It is said that the greater part of the right of way for the new roads has been secured, and in addition that property owners along the proposed route have promised large money contributions for the construction of the lines.

"Advertising Pays!"

That is what Secretary Muirheid of the Inter-State Fair Association told a PRESS reprentative recently. "Yes, sir; it pays, and you can't do too much of it.

"We have a fine plant, our buildings are commodious, our entries large, our attractions novel and interesting; everything points to the most successful issue the Inter-State Fair has ever had. But what good would all these things be if the public didn't know about them? Our advertising bill is going to be bigger than it was last year, and it made us gasp then when we saw it. But it brought the people, and they were all so well pleased that they are ready to hear and believe us this year. And if printer's ink can convey any impression of the immensity of preparation for '90, the people of New Jersey are going to flock to the Fair this year.

"It's the only way to make this Fair succeed. We are doing enough to attract the whole population of this State, and if we can only let everybody know what we are doing, everybody will come. So look out for us; just watch the newspapers and bill-boards and see what the Inter-State Fair people are doing."

This fair held at Trenton with such wonderful success last year, advertised in THE PRESS then and of course does so again now.

A Plainfielder Who Knows About Dates.

"J. E. E." sends a letter dated Plainfield, September 7, to The New York Times, concerning "A Calculation in Dates" as follows:

In your issue of today, you publish under the heading of "A Coincidence" (which is credited to the Christian Advocate) the following statement:

"The Rev. Gideon F. Draper died on Sunday the 8th day of December last, and his father died on the same day of the week and month in the year 1861. The grandson of the last named, who wrote of these facts from Japan, says that this coincidence of the day of the week and month occurs only once in twenty-eight years."

The above is not the exact text of the statement, but is sufficient for my purpose. The grandson is in error, as he would have found out had he made a small mental calculation before making the statement, as the 8th day of December fell on Sunday in three years between 1861 and 1883, and not including those years. Had the deaths occurred in 1860 and 1888 respectively, and on the 29th of February, then there might have been a somewhat remarkable coincidence of days and dates, as the 29th day of February falls on the same day once only in every twenty-eight years. Other days and dates recur much more frequently. Take for instance the 31st of December in 1864. It was the last day of the week, month and year, and the same thing occurred again in 1870, 1881 and 1887, and will occur again in 1892 and 1898 of the present century.

Frank Linke Fined for Illegal Liquor Selling.

Frank Linke was fined $25 by City Judge Codington, this morning, as a result of his recent conviction on the charge of selling liquor to a minor. Linke either thinks that the punishment is excessive, or that he ought not to be punished at all, for he has given notice that he will appeal the case to a higher Court. Police Captain Grant, however, who worked hard to secure the evidence which convicted Linke, thinks the fine was not nearly heavy enough.

THE LAST OF THE PEACH CROP.

Preserving Fruit The Feature This Week—Cheap Grades of Fruit.

The peach season of 1890 is almost a thing of the past. Not for thirty years has there been such a failure. With the exception of a few orchards in Hunterdon, Morris, Warren and Sussex counties, the peach trees of this State have been barren. The great peach-growing sections of Maryland, Delaware, and Pennsylvania have also been without peaches. A few thousand baskets have been grown in the Hudson River Valley, a few in Connecticut, and nearly a full crop in the Catawba islands in Lake Erie. A few are now ripening in Canada and in Niagara county in New York State. Had the entire crop of the country ripened on one day and been sent on that day to the market, the gross crop would not have made the usual daily supply for the market. Considering the scarcity, the prices obtained have not been large, and many who have during the season bought growing crops paid more for the fruit to the grower than they received from the retailer. When good peaches can be wholesaled at from 2 to 3 cents per pound, 100,000 baskets daily can be marketed in this city; at double that price not 10,000 baskets can be sold, and when from 10 to 15 cents per pound is demanded 1,000 baskets daily is an adundance.

The last of the Smock peaches will reach the markets this week, and it will be exceedingly difficult to get any of this much-esteemed preserving variety after Wednesday or Thursday. There is a peach much resembling the Smock in color, shape, and size which ripens later and is oftentimes sold for the Smock. It is the Solway. For canning or preserving it not so good as the Smock, but for eating uncooked it is preferable to it. The first of this variety will come to market with the last of the Smocks and the two will be frequently mixed together. They may be had all this week and some will be at hand next week. The best Smocks and Solways will be those from the Catawba islands. The ten days of rain effectually destroyed all chances of any peaches grown in this State from properly ripening. The Catawba island peaches will be wholesaled at from $1 to $1.25 per basket containing eight quarts each. There will be some delicious peaches from the Hudson River Valley this week, but they will sell for very high prices and be bought in most cases by New York's Broadway fruiterers.

Washingtonville Whispers.

French's flouring mills have again changed proprietors, N. W. French having bought out the interest of his father in the mill, which will be run in connection with his business in Plainfield. Charles Amerman will have charge of the mill. M. H. French has run the mills more than fifty years. He will now enjoy a well-earned rest.

The New Jersey Postal Telegraph company has a force of men setting poles and stringing wires on a new line to connect at Basking Ridge with a line running to Morristown and the other large towns on the line of the Morris and Essex Railroad. The line passes over the historic Washington Rock grounds, within sight of where Washington viewed the belligerant armies on the plains below. It is hoped that the committee having the erection of the statue in charge will be able to place it in position before the Centennial of 1893, so that those who do not go to Chicago may visit the finest lookout in the State.

The Misses Julia E. and Adaline Betz, of Harlem, spent a short visit with their friends, the Bartells.

Miss Nana Fischer, of New York, is the guest of her uncle, John H, Koch, at his pleasant home.

Our genial host, George Demler, is the victim of a severe cold, caught during the late unpleasant weather.

Will Neither Eat Nor Drink To-morrow.

The fast of Yom Kippur, or Day of Atonement, which is almost universally observed by the Hebrew community, will begin this evening and continue twenty-four hours. During this period the orthodox Jew allows neither food nor drink to pass his lips, and he spends the entire day in the synagogue, which is open for continous service from early in the morning until sunset. The fast is not so rigidly observed by the Reformed Jews, and the services are divided into morning and afternoon exercises. All the orthodox synagogues and reformed temples will be open for divine service this evening and to-morrow, and the services are the most solemn and impressive in the Jewish ritual.

One of New Jersey's Dead Letter Laws.

The time for the New Jersey State Fair at Waverly is at hand. An Inter-State fair will also be held at Trenton, and about every county in the State has arranged for its own local fair. Every one of these fairs, and every fair that will be held during the Winter in the parlors of a church will be in violation of a State law, the wording of which is brief and sententious. It reads: "That no fair or fairs shall hereafter be held in any city, town, or place in this State." The law is still on the statute books of the State, and has never been repealed. The date of its passage is January 27, 1797. The reasons for its enactment remain shrouded in the mists of antiquity.—N. Y. Sun.

A QUARREL.

How Bob and Bessie Were Naughty and How They Became Good Again.

Bob and Bessie were happy for a little while. Mamma had given them a big book full of pictures. She told them they might take their paints and brushes and color the pictures.

So Bob and Bessie sat down by their little table and began to work.

"I am going to paint this picture just as I want to," said Bessie. "I shall make the girl's dress blue."

"No, don't!" said Bob; "it must be red."

"Blue! it's going to be blue!" screamed Bessie.

"Red!" shouted Bob.

"I say it shall be blue!" said Bessie, stamping her foot.

"It sha'n't!" said Bob, in a louder tone.

"It shall!" said Bessie, still more earnest.

With that Bob jumped up and ran away with the book and hid it in a closet.

Bessie seated herself on the table with her lips stuck out and an ugly scowl on her face. Bob sat down on the table, too, with his back to Bessie, and here they are—two naughty children.

They did not speak a word for a long time—they pouted.

Baby sat on the floor looking at brother and sister. Baby had wise blue eyes. She saw that something was wrong. At last she spoke in a soft voice: "Poor Bessie! poor Bobbie! Bessie ky? Bobbie ky?" Baby looked up at them in such a sweet, funny way as she said it, that it made Bob and Bessie both laugh.

BOB AND BESSIE.

They jumped down from the table and ran to Baby and kissed her. They called her "Little Tootsie," and kissed her cheeks and mouth and eyes and nose.

They made such a stir that Dickey wanted to help, so he struck up and sang with all his might, "Cheer up! cheer up! cheer up!"

Then Bob and Bessie laughed again. Baby laughed too, and clapped her little hands.

Bob went and got the book. He said: "Bess, come on; you may make the dress blue."

"No, Bobby dear," said Bessie, with her very sweetest smile, "this dress shall be red—all red."

Then they both kissed each other, and the red sun, who was just going to bed peeped in and kissed them too.

They were all happy once more—Bob and Bessie and Baby and birdie.

TWO GOOD STORIES.

Tommy's Version of an Old Fable and Charlie's Bright Answers.

Here is Tommy's version of "The Ox and the Frog:"

"A ox tramped on a frog and squashed him. His brothers and sisters ran home and told their mother; and she said: 'How big was he?' and they said: 'Awful big;' and she said: 'As big as this?' and swelled herself out; and they said: 'If you do that again you'll bust;' and the ole fule done it again and busted.

"Moral—Never make a fule of yourself."

Charlie S. is a very bright boy and never at a loss for an excuse. He is also something of a naturalist. Walking along with a young lady one day he heard a tree-toad suddenly begin its shrill chirp. "It will rain within twenty-four hours," he announced, oracularly. "That is a sure sign—never known to fail." His predictions were received in good faith, but after twenty-four hours of remarkably pleasant weather he was taken to task about his prediction. "Oh, well," he replied instantly, in an injured tone, "the tree-toad lied. I am not responsible for his morals." Another time, having been requested to perform some little service, he came to receive his reward. His father offered him his choice between a silver dime and an old-fashioned copper cent. "I have always been taught to take the smallest piece," he remarked, gravely, pocketing the dime.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Guimbobo.

The Belgian legation at Mexico has recently reported to the Belgian Government on the subject of guimbobo, known also as angu, which is found in the State of Vera Cruz, a plant which should be included in the category of all the varieties of Mexican textiles. The guimbobo or angu produces not only a fiber of very superior quality, but can be easily and cheaply cultivated; moreover, the fruit of the plant constitutes a nutritious food. It appears from experiments that have already been made that the guimbobo differs essentially from the ramie, cotton and hemp, as in the guimbobo the covering of the plant surrounds the fiber, and is not mixed up and interlaced with it; this constitutes a decided economy, added to great facility in extraction and utilization. The structure of the plant permits of the operations of separating and removing the bark being performed by machinery, while in the other fibrous plants these operations are difficult, at the same time very costly, and only possible in countries where there is a large number of hands available and cheap. The fiber of the guimbobo has a luster similar to that of silk, and is undoubtedly finer and stronger, with a creamy color between white and straw color.—Scientific American.

Insomnia.

Insomnia, or sleeplessness, is so common a complaint—most people having at least occasional attacks of it—and the discomfort and resulting injury to health which are to be charged to it are so serious a matter, that any thing which is offered as a remedy is apt to receive attentive consideration. It happens that most of the antidotes or preventives which have been proposed, so far as our observation goes, are of so simple and inexpensive a character that any one may try them without severe effort or material outlay. Here is one such remedy, which some one has presented to suffering humanity, with such positive assurance of its efficacy as to inspire a hope in the breast of the most despondent victim. We quote the prescription, as follows: "The most potent and most perfect remedy for sleeplessness is to drink hot water. If one awakes in the night, as hopelessly wide awake as if galvanized or electrified with vital activity, an invariable remedy is a glass of perfectly hot—not warm—water. It can be heated over the gas, or over a spirit lamp, and sipped while almost at boiling heat, and one who tries it will find himself going off to sleep like an infant, and getting, too, the most restful and peaceful sleep imaginable."—Mechanical News.

A Waterproof Whitewash.

Resenschek, of Munich, mixes together the powder from three parts of silicious rock (quartz), three parts of broken marble and sandstone, also two parts of burned porcelain clay, with two parts of freshly slaked lime, still warm. In this way a wash is made which forms a silicate if often wetted, and becomes, after a time, almost like stone. The four constituents, mixed together, give the ground color, to which any pigment that can be used with lime is added. It is applied quite thickly to the wall or other surface, let dry one day, and the next day frequently covered with water, which makes it waterproof. This wash can be cleansed with water without losing any of its color; on the contrary, each time it gets harder, so that it can even be brushed, while its porosity makes it look soft. The wash, or calcimine, can be used for ordinary purposes, as well as for the finest painting. A so-called fresco surface can be prepared with it in the dry way.

Paralyzed!

How often do we hear of persons being suddenly stricken with paralysis? But such persons, although apparently stricken suddenly, had in all cases been warned for months by premonitory symptoms, which, if they had heeded and cured by the proper remedy, would have prevented the fatal result. Paralysis is often curable, but it can always be prevented if taken in time.

Among the first symptoms will be noticed a nervousness or restlessness with weak and tired feeling in the limbs and general sense of exhaustion; any unwonted exertion will be followed by great fatigue, and the weakness will be very marked. These symptoms will often be accompanied by feeling in the head, and the person often wakes each morning more tired and languid than on retiring. As the diseases progresses there will be a coldness ness and bad circulation in the feet and limbs, followed, after a time, by a slight numbness or tingling, at first hardly noticeable, but gradually becoming more and more marked. Among the first symptoms, also, are a weakness, tired feeling or trembling of the limbs, with an exhausted sensation.

A Marvellous Cure of Paralysis.

This certifies that I was stricken with paralysis of the left side in 1866; and have since that time been under the treatment of many physicians and tried various remedies. I could not, in all the years that have passed since stricken, lift my left foot from the floor. I commenced taking Dr. Greene's Nervura, and am now able to walk without a cane, having good use of my foot and side, so long useless. Dr. Greene's Nervura has cured me of my terrible trouble.

Another Remarkable Cure.

I had a stroke of paralysis. The suffering I endured was unbearable. My speech was impaired, my mouth drawn to one side, and the pains in my head were maddening. I used Dr. Greene's Nervura, and before I had used a bottle I felt a marked improvement, and now I feel myself again. It gives me great pleasure to recommend all troubled with nervous complaints, or any similar affliction to mine, to use this really wonderful medicine. Dr. Greene's Nervura.

PAULINE ROE,
806 7th ave. New York city.

Proofs like these are an almost certain guarantee that all similarly affected can be cured by this wonderful remedy. Do not hesitate for a moment when perfect restoration to health is within reach. By no means neglect the first symptoms, for they surely lead to prostration and paralysis. Save yourself from the terrible disease while there is time. If you are suffering from any nervous disease, like nervousness, nervous and physical exhaustion, sleeplessness, nervous debility, mental depression, neuralgia nervous or sick headache, heart disease, dyspepsia, indigestion, loss of appetite, or weakness and debility, by all means use this wonderful remedy and prevent a serious or fatal issue. Dr. Greene's Nervura is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless, and is for sale at druggists for $1.00 per bottle.

Dr. Greene of 35 West Fourteenth street, New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic disease through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write him about your case.

DARLING.

A little maid with sweet blue eyes
Looked upward with a shy surprise
Because I asked her name;
Awhile she bent her golden head,
While o'er her face soft blushes spread
Like some swift rosy flame;
Then, looking up, she softly said:
"My name is Mamma's Darling."

"Tell me your mother's name, my dear,"
And stooping low I paused to hear.
The little maid seemed musing;
"Why, mamma's name's like mine, you know.
But just because we love her so
We call her Mamma Darling."

"Tell me your papa's name," I cried;
The little maiden's eyes grew wide;
"My papa? Don't you know?
Why, ever since the baby died
Mamma and I have always tried
To cheer him from his sorrowing;
And my mamma and I love best
To call him Papa Darling."

"What did you call the baby, dear?"
The answer came quite low but clear:
"The baby—oh, I wonderwhat
They call him now in Heaven;
But we had only one name here,
And that was Baby Darling."

Swift years flew by, and once again
That little maid so tender
Stood by my side, but she had grown,
Like lilies, tall and slender;
This time 'twas I that called her name,
And swift the blushes grew like flame
At rosy mist of morning;
I clasped her in my arms and kissed
My tender-hearted Darling.

TRAPPED BY A WOMAN.

Thrilling Experience of an Amateur Lady Detective.

THE HISTORY of Margaret Hoffman, even when spread upon paper in cold type, reads like a romance. Deliberately related to the writer by the heroine of that romance herself, a girl who has but just attained her majority, it possesses an extraordinary degree of interest, which the modesty of the relator and her apparent unconsciousness of having done any thing remarkable rather enhances than lessens.

"You find me surrounded now with every luxury," said Miss Hoffman, "but two years ago I was a poor girl in an Illinois country town, earning my daily bread by hard labor. My father had died a year previously. My mother was an incurable invalid. My days were spent in the small dry-goods store where I earned just sufficient to support us. The only relatives I had were a distant cousin in New York and an uncle, my mother's brother, with whom my father had quarreled in early life and to whom our branch of the family had never become reconciled. News reached me one day that this uncle, a morose old man, had been suddenly stricken with disease, and had expressed a wish to see his only sister and her child. He was very well-to-do. As a prosperous merchant on South Water stree he had accumulated a considerable fortune, and it was with renewed hope that mother and I set out for Chicago.

"Upon our arrival here we at once went to the store on South Water street, where we met his partner. He received us with cold politeness, but informed us, much to our astonishment, that a visit to my uncle's home on the North side could be provocative of no good—in fact, that my uncle was as much set against my mother as ever—in fact, that he had long ago disowned his brother's family, root and branch.

"The source of the information I had regarding my uncle's wishes was of such a reliable character that this extraordinary statement from his partner set me thinking. I could not reconcile it with the expression which had fallen from the lips of the sick man: 'I would like to see Mary and her little daughter before I die.'

"I determined to act at once. I knew my uncle was very sick—not expected to live, in fact. Something in this man's face told me that he lied. The reason was not far to seek. My uncle, as I have said, was a rich man. This fellow did not want near relatives at hand at such a time. I knew that my uncle had made a will years before. Mr. Samuel Whitney probably figured there promised with red feathers and blue ribbons, one pair of blue spectacles, one brown wig, two cheek plumpers, a pot rouge, another of powder, a hare's foot such as theatrical people use in their making up and a large red bandana handkerchief.

"Then I announced that I was about to make application for a position as servant in the house of Mr. Whitney, my uncle's partner.

"The next morning there issued forth from the little lodging which had seen the departure day after day of a weary, pale, spiritless, very blonde and quite refined young lady, an uncouth, rosy, buxom servant girl, whose only defect seemed a somewhat weak eyesight, which necessitated at all times the use of spectacles. For an ignorant country girl, she seemed singularly quick and smart in the performance of her household duties. In a week Mrs. Whitney had voted me a treasure. In a month I had sized up every member of the household, and come to the conclusion that Samuel Whitney was one of the greatest villains the world had seen in a long while.

"I had discovered that my uncle was completely in the power of Mr. Whitney and his wife. They alone attended to his wants and gave him his medicine. Not another living soul, except the doctor, was permitted to approach him. Once to my great indignation I heard my mother's name mentioned by the sick man. He had evidently been frequently in the habit of asking for his sister.

"'Why does not Mary come and see me?' he was asking.

"'I have written to them several times,' replied Whitney.

"The liar! Almost I had a mind to tear aside my disguise, rush in, declare myself and comfort him.

"And have spoiled every thing. My uncle had never seen me. While Whitney would have been fluttered at first, he would have soon recovered himself, and I should have been ignominiously thrown out of the house.

"'Take some more of this medicine,' I heard Whitney saying.

"'No, no! No more of that. Medicine won't save me. I don't like that stuff, Samuel. I think it does me more harm than good.'

"A new light broke in upon my brain. I had heard of such things, but I dismissed the idea as too utterly improbable. Whitney could never be re-enacting in the nineteenth century the crime peculiar to the age which produced the Borgias—he could not be slowly killing this man by poison.

"But though I dismissed it the idea returned to me with tenfold force that night as I lay in my narrow cot. Although it was long past midnight, I could not sleep. It was a very close, sultry night. I arose and opened the door of my room to have more air.

"As I did so I caught the sound of voices.

"'What was that?' It was Mrs. Whitney who was speaking.

"'Nothing,' replied her husband.

"'But I heard a noise.'

"'It is nothing, I tell you; rats or something like that. Go to sleep.'

"The Whitneys were lying in bed, awake, and their door was open. Beyond it was the room of the sick man. An irresistible desire to hear further prompted me to steal softly from the room into the passage way. My foot caught in the mat. I could hear Mr. Whitney raise himself up in bed.

"'Who's that?' he called out.

"My heart stood still for a moment. 'It's Emma, sir!' I replied.

"'What are you doing out in the passage this time of night?' he asked suspiciously.

"'Why, I ain't in the passage,' I replied. 'It was hot and I just got up to open the door.'

"'Well, go back into your room,' said Mrs. Whitney, 'and don't let me catch you out of it till morning.'

"But I would not go back. Something I could not define recalled my suspicions of a previous evening. I felt intuitively that they meditated some evil against my uncle.

"'What are you standing there for? Why don't you go back into your room again?' called out Mr. Whitney.

"It was a trying moment. I knew that if I once shut the door I could not reopen it without making some noise, which might lead to suspicions, which suspicions might lead to an investigation of my trunk and effects which would be only sorely discomforting. Yet as it was I ran an awful risk. I stood here my natural self; no rouge, no wig, no spectacles, just as I had risen from my bed. Every dictate of prudence told me to go back; yet an inner consciousness whispered: 'Go forward!'

"'Are you going to stand there all night?' came the now exasperated voice of Mr. Whitney.

"'No, I'm not,' I snapped out; 'but it's hard a poor servant gal can't get a breath of fresh air.' And I banged the door to with much unnecessary violence, as if I had got out of temper.

"Had I retreated into my room?

"No. I had resolved to brave every thing. In that brief moment of time there had come a vision to me of my poor helpless uncle in the power of these wretches. I had banged the door to, but I had left myself outside standing in the passage, with beating heart and limbs which trembled, for I knew that the flash of a light might reveal me at any moment, and I had learned by this time the desperate character of these people, the Whitneys. Beyond a doubt of it they were slowly poisoning the man whose wealth they coveted.

"It had been impossible to get to the sick chamber; it was too well guarded for that; but I had had to wash some medicine glasses, and had drained into a little vial the contents of one not entirely swallowed. A local druggist whom I took into my confidence had told me it was undoubtedly arsenic.

"'Well, that hussy's out of the way,' I heard Whitney remark, when I had shut the door. 'Do you know, I don't like the looks of that girl. Discharge her!'

"'Discharge her!' said Mrs. Whitney. 'I wouldn't do that. She's the best girl I've ever had, and she's such a fool, too. I'm sure she suits in every way.'

"'If I thought she suspected any thing,' growled Whitney, 'I'd soon settle her. Do you think she's asleep yet?'

"'Why, no, give her a little time,' replied Mrs. Whitney. 'How impatient you are. Wait ten minutes.'

"'I am impatient; wouldn't you be? Think of all I have put up with from that old dotard in the next room. The years of labor, of weary waiting; the indignities to which he has subjected me; how I have had to toady and cringe to him to get a small share in the business. Of course, I'm impatient. Will he never drop off, I wonder. That last dose should have done it.'

"All this time I was standing almost paralyzed with an unspeakable horror. An indefinable dread took possession of me, a deadly terror seized upon my heart, my knees trembled, I dared scarcely breathe. To stand alone thus at dead of night and listen to those wretches plotting how to encompass the more speedy death of a helpless man.

"To remain where I was was to court discovery, and something told me a horrible death. It was equally impossible to retreat, for the noise of the opening of my room door would be the signal for instant investigation by the already suspicious Whitney, and I had no time to suddenly assume my ordinary disguise. There remained but one course to pursue. It required the exercise of the greatest caution and more courage than I believed I possessed.

"There was a small empty room beyond the apartment of the Whitneys which commanded a full view of the sick man's chamber. Once there I should be comparatively safe.

"But to reach it I must pass the door of the room where the Whitneys lay.

"Carefully poising myself I essayed to pass across the intervening space. Slowly I advanced, moving first one limb and then another, hardly daring to breathe, and feeling forward with my hands outstretched lest I should suddenly encounter some unexpected obstacle.

"I had safely passed the open door of the Whitneys' chamber, when I became confused, and in the utter darkness lost my way. Vainly I stretched out my hands. At last to my great joy they fell upon a door handle. I turned it softly and noiselessly and entered. As quickly and as noiselessly I closed it. There was a dull light in the room. I looked around and by its rays saw that by mistake I had entered the apartment of my sick uncle.

"He was broad awake and sitting up in bed staring at me with two glaring, awful eyes. The living image of my mother, as he had known her in her youth, and clad in my white night robe, his diseased and distorted imagination completed the illusion.

"'Mary,' he gasped, 'do not come to reproach me.'

"'Hush!' I whispered, hastening to the bedside. 'Hush, uncle! Do not make a noise, for God's sake.'

"He trembled violently. 'I do not understand,' he said, vaguely, as one in a dream. His terror seemed to have departed at the touch of my hand.

"'Listen,' I said. 'I am not Mary, your sister. I am her daughter. We heard you were very ill and wished to see us, so mother and I came to town. We have been here for weeks trying to see you, but they kept us away. Don't be frightened at what I am going to tell you. The Whitneys are not your friends. They are giving you improper medicine. Don't take it, uncle, for Heaven's sake. It's poison!"

"HUSH," I WHISPERED.

"'Poison! Oh! you don't mean that; and Sam Whitney, too, my old partner.'

"'Yes, uncle, I do mean it, and I'm here at the risk of my life to tell you. Hark, he's coming now to give you your medicine. Pretend to take it, but don't swallow it. It's arsenic.'

"A dreadful expression passed over the face of the old man; but even in that moment he thought of my safety.

"'Hide, child, hide,' he whispered, and he pointed to the closet.

"From there I witnessed what confirmed my suspicions. It was Samuel Whitney who poured the draught which my uncle pretended and did not drink. Subsequent analysis has, you know, proved it to be a most deadly poison. Horror stricken at the enormity of this man's crime, with the knowledge that instant death awaited the penetration of my disguise, I awaited only the coming of daylight to pick a quarrel with my mistress, which resulted in my instant dismissal. I left her house to report at police headquarters, but something had alarmed the Whitneys. When the officers reached the house the birds had flown.

"My uncle has been dead a year. My mother, sole heir to his considerable estates, lives surrounded, as you see, by every luxury. As I am only twenty-two, and am quite wealthy in my own right, I presume I am to be envied."—Austin W. Granville, in Chicago Journal.

SHOE-LACE MUSTACHES.

Only a Few Chinamen Can Raise Whiskers.

Quong Tung's Eight-Inch Mustache—Wing Sing's Galways—Lee Kee's Imperial—Hair the Mongolian's Chief Delight.

[COPYRIGHT, 1890.]
[Special Correspondence.

THE ingenious man who shall succeed in the invention of a wash or compound of any kind which will cause hair to grow on the human face can reap a substantial reward in Mott street. Should the lucky man choose to go to China he can return in a year the owner of fabulous sums, to say nothing of the gems of priceless value which will be showered upon him by the grateful Chinamen.

If there is any man in the world who desires a mustache, a whisker, or a goatee it is the almond-eyed Celestial. Hair, from time immemorial, has been the Mongolians' chief delight.

Of all the dwellers in semi-tropical climes the true Chinaman has been cursed by the lack of ability to raise a beard. Cruel Dame Nature has placed the hair follicles too far apart in his face for the cultivation of a thick growth. If, perchance, he has, by careful nurture and persistent care coaxed hair to grow on his upper lip or chin, the individual sprouts are further apart than they are in the face of a white man, and much thicker. In fact, the ordinary Chinaman's mustache resembles, in regard to the area covered, the growth of hair on an elephant's back, where there is a barren waste between each hair.

The Chinaman covets hair on his face because it is regarded as a symbol of authority and power. The gold foil Joss in the orthodox temple in Mott street has a golden mustache which droops, as large around as a lead pencil, upon his breast. The god of war at his side is also blessed with a most surprising beard, which strays all over his face like a brush heap in distress.

Some four centuries ago five hundred thousand Wanchoo Tartars swept into China and conquered two million Chinamen. The Tartars, coming from a colder climate than that of China, had a greater capacity for raising beards. The Tartars were quickly assimilated by the swarming Chinese, and with the assimilation came a slightly increased capacity for raising hair.

This tendency has been fostered through all the succeeding ages until, by assiduous cultivation, the big chiefs are now able to raise a lead-pencil mustache. This privilege, however, is only enjoyed by men of high caste.

It would be as impossible for an ordinary Chinese laundryman to raise a mustache like that of a Bowery dime museum woman as it would be for a cow to handle a musket.

A MUSTACHE EIGHT INCHES LONG.

The most ornate upper-lip adornment worn by a resident Chinaman of New York is owned by a former priest in the orthodox temple. His name is Quong Tung. His mustache is eight inches long and just about the general proportions of a rat's tail.

It is kept in splendid condition by its proud proprietor. None but the costliest cosmetics and oils are ever allowed to come in contact with this ornamental appendage. Whenever he goes out for a promenade down Mott street this fortunate Quong is the admiration of all the opium eaters in the street. With disdainful gestures he strokes the rat-tail with a lover's touch, and a smile of conscious pride mantles his mahogany face as he spurns the sidewalk.

The wicked little boys on the Bowery say ironically, as he goes by:

"Ah, there, Changi Where'd ye git the shoe-laces?"

But among the seven thousand Chinamen in New York City Quong is the only man who can raise a mustache over half an inch in length. Indeed the majority of hairs in Mott street mustaches are not more than one-quarter of an inch in length. There is scarcely enough length of hair to tickle a lady's cheek, provided that it was necessary for a laundryman to salute a woman in the American fashion. The hair grows out just long enough to become perceptible to the naked eye and then grim fate stops the growth. This is rather rough on John, and he can not become reconciled to it, and is forever striving to stimulate its growth.

A CHINAMAN WITH GALWAYS.

There is one individual in Chinatown who has succeeded in bringing out a pair of Galways, or side-whiskers, in front of his ears. These black blocks on his saddle-colored cheeks are about one inch wide and two inches long. These precious hairs are brushed and oiled carefully every day, with scarcely any wear upon the brush.

Once a week the itinerant Chinese barber, who goes around with his tools under his arm in a little lacquered box, is called in by Wing Sing, the proprietor of the whiskers, and carefully fixes up what there is of the Galways. Wing Sing is very proud of his whiskers, but he does not obtain the distinction enjoyed by his forefathers, because his whiskers are not fierce looking and do not cover a large enough area to be a prominent feature of his face.

ONLY ONE CHINESE IMPERIAL.

Lee Kee, of New York City, wears an imperial. His can hardly be called by so dignified a name, because it is only as large as a thimble.

Curiously enough, while the owner of the thimble imperial is a comparatively young man, the hair is gray. A cynical observer says that the hairs are slowly dying of loneliness and grief. Lee Kee would like to raise a mustache, but Joss has declared otherwise.

To show his passionate desire for hair on his upper, it is said that not long since an American with a long silken mustache called upon him. Poor Lee Kee's eyes were fastened upon the mustache with unalterable longing.

After they had become slightly acquainted Lee approached the American, and placing his hands upon his shoulders drew his lips over the mustache of his new friend. AARON WILEY.

A STRANGE CASE.

A Man Who, According to the War Record, Has Been Dead for Forty Years, But Who Is Still Alive and Well.

There is a man living in Alta Vista, Kan., who is officially dead, and has been dead ever since 1846-7. He enlisted in an Illinois regiment, and went to Mexico during the war with that country. He was killed, and his death properly and officially recorded by the officers of his regiment. The War Department record shows the day, date and circumstances of his death. After the war he was mustered out of service, went to New York, lived there several years and then traveled from State to State until he finally located in an Illinois town about a hundred miles from his former home.

Being dead, his dependent mother secured a land warrant for one hundred and sixty acres of land, on his account, lived upon it and there died.

During the civil war the dead soldier enlisted in another Illinois regiment, fought all through the war, made an excellent record as a soldier, became a Captain, and was mustered out of the service with that rank. The records of the War Department show that he was killed during the Mexican war, and that he served gallantly through the war of the rebellion.

Recently the soldier applied for pension on account of his Mexican war service and was informed that he was dead. He undertook to prove to the War Department that he was alive; but that could not be done, because he was dead sure enough, and his mother had long since secured one hundred and sixty acres of land over his dead body. Being dead, he can not get a Mexican war pension, nor can he secure the land grant which was given to his mother.

He can not get a pension for his services during the civil war, for he was neither sick nor wounded during that war. He is too old to take up a land claim as a soldier and work it; hence he gets nothing for his long and commendable service, not even the thanks of Congress. The Congressman who told me this story is trying to get a bill through Congress for the Mexican veteran who is dead, and would not give me the name of the soldier. But it is a true story, I know, for I saw a portion of a letter explaining how he comes to be on earth, in spite of the official fact that he has been dead nearly fifty years. S. D. F.

In Its Worst Form.

BRISTOW, LAP. CO., WIS., Dec., '88.

Rev. J. C. Bogen vouches for the following: James Rooney who was suffering from Vitus Dance in its worst form, for about 14 years was treated by several physicians without effect, two bottles of Pastor Koenigs Nerve Tonic cured him.

Prejudiced, yet Convinced.

So. Norwalk, Con., May, 1890.

Although I took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic with a certain prejudice, it has done me so much good that I must thank him for it, because now I can sleep again. Since the terrible catastrophe of the Johnstown flood, where I lost five members of my family, terrible fictions occupied my mind, so that I was since quite despondent. But now I come to myself again, and attribute this to the good effect of the Tonic.

THE BASEBALL DEAL

Amalgamation of the Association and Brotherhood.

SUNDAY BALL—LOWER PRICES.

The New Organization Will Comprise Twelve Clubs.

Pittsburg's Leaguers Lose Two Games to New York—Only Four Championship Games Played—Two Thousand People See the League Game at Detroit—How the Clubs Stand.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 24.—All the plans have been made for the amalgamation of the American Association and Brotherhood, it is now said.

Two of the National League's best cities—Brooklyn and Cincinnati—will desert their organization for the new organization to be known as the American Association Players' League. The scheme, which was first proposed about three months ago, was made a reality at the recent session of the representatives of the Association and Brotherhood held in Philadelphia a short time ago. Sunday games, twenty-five cent ball and beer on the grounds will be the order of things in the new organization.

The organization will comprise twelve clubs—New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Pittsburg, Baltimore and Brooklyn in the East, and St. Louis, Louisville, Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati and Chicago in the West. Three disinterested and competent judges of ball players will be selected and the players will be assigned to the different cities, the object being to equalize the strength as nearly as possible.

Byrne, of Brooklyn, and Stern, of Cincinnati, have already signified their willingness to join the new organization, and the former will combine with Ward's team. The Athletics and Philadelphia Brotherhood Club will be controlled by one management. The above was given by an official who is on the inside.

POWDERLY'S CIRCULAR.

He Counsels Knights to Stand by the Alleged Train Wreckers.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 24.—General Master Workman Powderly has issued a secret circular addressed "To the Members of the Order Wheresoever Found," and bearing his signature and the official seal of the order. It is the strongest and in many respects the most important document he has issued since the New York Central strike.

After giving the causes leading up to the New York Central strike, he says "It was clearly evident after the first week that the men would eventually be beaten, but it was necessary to teach the power that controls judges and legislatures that it would be an expensive undertaking to attempt to destroy the manhood of those who created the wealth that went to bribe public officials. To give in the first week would have shown cowardice and would pave the way for future attacks. The experience gained by the Central management in the loss of from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 and the greater loss of public patronage will have a wholesome effect in the future.

"That strike was deliberately planned in the office of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad, and once inaugurated it was but just that they should get enough of it.

"A number of our members have been arrested for train wrecking. Bogus confessions are being published, their authors knowing that their contradictions will never go as far as the slanders travel.

"Our duty does not end with the official declaration that the strike is off. We should protect the life and reputation of our brothers who are arrested, imprisoned and held to answer for the crime of train wrecking. Counsel has been employed and the funds necessary to defray expenses will be wanted."

SULLIVAN ON A SPREE.

The Champion Pugilist-Actor Scatters Coin on the Sidewalk.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Actor John L. Sullivan, the champion pugilist, reeled into the Hoffman House last night, and the regular guests gave him a wide berth.

The big fellow's plug hat was pulled down over his left eye and he swung a huge silver-headed cane much as a policeman juggles with a club. Sullivan's eyes were red and his voice husky. He brought up against the rosewood bar and leaned his back against it.

Detective Jacobs viewed his entrance with considerable alarm, especially as Actor Sullivan made a pass at the big bronze African that guards the entrance. He therefore undertook to persuade Sullivan to go away, in which he was presently joined by Billy Edwards. Sullivan resented the latter's interference, and pushing him roughly aside, said:

"G'way! I've got no truck with prize fighters. See?"

Billy laughed good naturedly, as Sullivan never was in his class anyhow, and Jacobs finally led the "Big Fellow" to the sidewalk. The latter scattered a lot of loose coin on the pavement, for which an immediate scramble ensued, and a crowd quickly gathered.

Sullivan was rescued in time and put to bed at Taylor's Hotel, in Jersey City. The audience at the Academy of Music in that city was not wholly disappointed last night, as he was able to go through his part in "Honest Hearts and Willing Hands," but the scene where he knocks out Lannon was decidedly amusing. After the curtain dropped he returned to the hotel and started in on a seltzer diet.

Violating the Weekly Payment Law.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 24.—Notice of suit has been served by the State Factory Inspector upon the Crown Point Iron Company for violating the Weekly Payment Law. The company runs a store in connection with its works in Essex County, and there is said to be much dissatisfaction over the mode of payment. Suit has also been begun against the St. Regis Company of Franklin County, employing 75 hands, for failing to pay weekly.

Wife and Stepson Charged with Murder.

CAMDEN, N.J., Sept. 24.—The coroner's jury in the case of Patrick Bowers, who was found dead in bed, returned a verdict that the man came to his death at the hands of his stepson, John Fitzgerald, and that Eilen Bowers, wife of the deceased, was an accessory after the fact.

Elijah J. Potter Dead.

KNOWLESVILLE, N. Y., Sept. 24.—Mr. Elijah J. Potter, the well known fruit farmer and leader in politics, died last night. Mr. Potter, while in a fit of despondency over ill health, several weeks ago, shot himself. Subsequently he was attacked by typhoid fever.

Detective Lynch Acquitted.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 24.—The trial of Detective Thomas Lynch on the charge of murder in the second degree, in shooting and killing Samuel Stoddard, was concluded last night and the prisoner was acquitted.

The Tariff Conferees Have Not Reached an Agreement.

A REPORT EXPECTED TO-MORROW

The Key to the Whole Situation is the Sugar Schedule.

A Quorum Secured in the House and Venable and Elliott Unseated—Erastus Wiman Speaks for Canadian Reciprocity—A Public Building Appropriation Reduced.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—The differences between the Tariff bill conferees on the part of the House and the Senate have been narrowed down to the sugar schedule and binding twine. Just before the second conference was held, one of the conferees expressed the opinion that a compromise would have to be reached between the Senate and the House propositions on both of the disputed points. A number of proposed compromises on sugar were discussed, but none of them were agreeable to all of those present.

A new complication arose later. The Senators from the Western and Northwestern States, to the number of ten, met and agreed to protest against the proposition to put a duty on binding twine for the purpose of effecting a compromise with the House on sugar. The statements of the Senators present at this conference as to the effect of it are slightly conflicting. Some of them say that it was agreed that if the conferees reported in favor of putting a duty on binding twine, the Senators interested would vote against the conference report and refuse to allow the Tariff bill to go through the Senate while the objectionable feature remained in it. Others say that the ten Senators merely entered an emphatic protest against the proposition.

The conference report will not be presented to the House to-day. It will probably take at least twenty-four hours to prepare it for submission to the House after it has been agreed to.

The general impression now is that Congress cannot adjourn before the latter part of next week, and that it will probably not get away before October 6th.

A QUORUM IN THE HOUSE.

The Virginia and South Carolina Contests Quickly Decided.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—When it was announced that a quorum was secured in the House there was applause on the Republican side.

The resolution declaring that Venable was not entitled to his seat was agreed to and Langston was sworn in as a member.

The House then adopted a resolution unseating Elliott as a Representative from the Seventh South Carolina district.

The Lottery Company Scheming.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—The threat of the Louisiana Lottery Company to purchase a paper in Montreal and flood this country with it, trusting to the Postal Treaty between the United States and Canada to give this paper immunity, despite the fact that it will fairly reek with lottery advertisements and lottery matter, does not find much credence here. No existing treaty between Canada and the United States can alter the definition of objectionable matter, and the Canadian papers containing these advertisements could be stopped the moment they reach the United States, and thus come under the jurisdiction of the United States postal authorities.

Canadian Reciprocity.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Members of the Tariff Conference Committee, after their morning session, afforded an interview to Erastus Wiman, in relation to Canadian reciprocity. A conclusion was reached that nothing should be attempted this session, but that in the event of the dissolution of the Canadian Parliament the Sherman-Hitt resolutions should have earliest consideration at the reassembling of Congress in December. This Mr. Wiman said would be satisfactory to the leaders of the Liberal party in Canada.

Reduced the Appropriation.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—The House Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds has authorized a favorable report on the Senate bill providing for a public building at Altoona, Pa., with an amendment reducing the appropriation from $150,000 to $80,000.

The German Catholic Congress.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 24.—One object which will receive great attention by the German Catholic Congress now in session is the school question. Another object that will engage the attention of the Congress is the establishing of new parishes. Nearly 300 priests have been enrolled and 2,000 delegates in all are here. The sessions will last till to-morrow afternoon.

THE BIRCHALL TRIAL.

The Prisoner Cool and Deeply Interested in the Proceedings.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Sept. 24.—The trial of Birchall for the murder of Benwell was resumed in the presence of a large crowd of spectators. Birchall came into court with his old jaunty, debonair expression. He was fresh shaved, well brushed, and as nervy as ever. He took a keen interest in all that passed.

Mrs. Birchall was in court and followed closely all that was said and done. The Grand Jury in the case of Mrs. Birchall reported "no bill" on the charge against her of being accessory to the murder.

There was very little new matter developed. Pelly, under the guidance of Queen's Counsel Osler, went over the old facts.

Charles Benwell, brother of the murdered man, followed Pelly. He said he came to the trial in the place of his father, who is ill in England. He identified the false teeth and plate, the pencil case and ring placed in evidence as belonging to his brother. He also identified the keys found on Birchall as his brother's and said that with them he opened his brother's desk and two trunks.

Joseph and George Eldridge, farmers in the township of Blenheim, who discovered the body, told of their ghastly find. Both said that the body had the appearance of being thrown over or carried to where it lay; that no footmarks were seen near by; that there had been a light fall of snow that day.

George told how the tell-tale cigar case with Benwell's name on it was found. It was by the purest accident. An axe dragged over it, displacing the snow which covered it, thus revealing its identity and frustrating the plans of the murderer, who had cut Benwell's name from all of the clothing.

THE KEYSTONE LEAGUE.

The Republican Clubs Elect Officers and Hold a Mass Meeting.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 24.—Over 1,000 delegates, representing 325 clubs, are present at the third annual convention of the Republican League of Pennsylvania, at the Academy of Music. The Platform Committee reported a set of resolutions, which were adopted, endorsing the National and State administration of affairs by the Republican party, and the nominees of the party for State officers. Speaker Reed is commended and Republicans in Congress are applauded for the passage of the McKinley bill. The speedy adoption of the Federal Elections bill is urged.

The following officers were elected: President, Edwin S. Stuart, Philadelphia; vice-presidents, John B. Robinson, Media; F. J. R. Jones, Philadelphia; J. H. Rehm, Pittsburg; secretary, Robert H. Lindsey, Pittsburg; treasurer, Capt. William Thornton, Philadelphia; delegates-at-large to the National Convention, William H. McCleary, Pittsburg; John Taylor, Philadelphia.

Last night a mass meeting under the auspices of the league was held in the Academy of Music. Speaker Reed, John M. Thurston, of Nebraska, Gen. Daniel H. Hastings, George W. Delamater, Republican candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania, and Congressman Dolliver, of Iowa, delivered speeches.

Reception to Democratic Governors.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 24.—The Kings County Democratic General Committee gave an informal reception to Governor Hill, and Governor Abbett of New Jersey, in their new home, the Thomas Jefferson building, last night. The two Governors and Mayor Chapin stood upon the stage and the visitors formed in a line and passed by them. The handshaking continued an hour and a half, when the reception was concluded. Governor Hill was driven to the Hoffman House and Governor Abbett returned to his home in New Jersey.

The Belden Candidate Nominated.

SYRACUSE, N.Y., Sept. 24.—The Third Assembly District Republican Convention nominated Ignatius Sawmiller, the present member, for member of Assembly on the first ballot. Sawmiller represents the Belden faction. The Hiscock people put up Jos. Bondy, a Syracuse lawyer, but they practically abandoned the fight just before the convention.

Summer Home for the President.

CRESSON, Pa., Sept. 24.—The President and his family left this morning for Washington, and will arrive there about 6 p. m. The suggestion has been made, and it seems to have met with favor, that the hotel company should erect a cottage for the permanent resort of the Executive during the late summer and early autumn.

Mr. Platt's Mission to Puget Sound.

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—Ex-Senator Thos. C. Platt, accompanied by his wife and his son, H. B. Platt, and his wife, arrived last night and is stopping at the Auditorium. He is on his way to Puget Sound, where he goes to select a suitable location for a Government navy yard. He expects to be absent from New York about a month.

Dropped from a Bridge and Drowned.

SPENCERPORT, N. Y., Sept. 24.—At 4 a. m., while the canal boat John Neupert was passing through this village, the driver, Charles Cratzley, of Easton, Pa., fell into the canal while dropping from the bridge to the boat. He sank at once and was not seen to rise. The body has been recovered.

Defeated General Banks.

BOSTON, Sept. 24.—James M. Fox, of Cambridge, was nominated for Congress by the Republicans of the Fifth District last night on the sixteenth ballot. Gen. Banks was a competitor for the nomination, but failed by some thirty votes. The Republicans of the Third Congressional District nominated Edward L. Pierce by acclamation.

A COMMERCIAL PANIC

The Leading Banks in Lisbon Trembling.

A VERY SERIOUS SITUATION.

Opponents of the King Making Trouble Throughout the City.

Soldiers Shoot Rioters While Colon is Burning—McAuliffe and Slavin Bound Over to Keep the Peace—An Epidemic of Suicide in Berlin—Another Irish Member Arrested.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—A commercial panic prevails in Lisbon, where the leading banks are trembling. A crisis is imminent.

Taking advantage of the financial difficulty, prominent leaders for a republic have agents in all quarters of the city fomenting trouble and urging a combine against the King.

The police and military are active, and a large number of arrests have been made. Outbreaks are expected at any moment.

M'AULIFFE AND SLAVIN.

The Prize Fighters Bound Over to Keep the Peace.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—The Lambeth Police Court was crowded when Slavin and McAuliffe appeared for a hearing. Both were bound over in the sum of £1,000 each to keep the peace on one surety and £1,000 each to appear if called upon. If a breach of the peace is committed warrants will be issued and the case sent before a judge.

The feeling among the lovers of the manly art is not merely one of regret at the prohibition of the fight between these two noted pugilists, but of apprehension as to the fate of boxing contests in the future. The use of such gloves as are condemned by the court in the present instance has always been considered legal, but now that a test case has been made, it seems to be in the power of any citizen, police official or jealous rival to prevent boxing contests in the future, and thus destroy one of the chief amusements of the frequenters of such clubs as the Pelican and Ormonde.

It is stated that Lord Lonsdale and others interested in the McAuliffe-Slavin match will shortly arrange to have the fight come off outside of England.

The Press Association announces that Slavin and McAuliffe will probably have a glove fight within a few days under modified conditions.

COLON IN ASHES.

Several Rioters Killed by the Police While the Fire Was Raging.

COLON, Sept. 24.—Three-fourths of the city is in ashes. The fire began at midnight and raged until late in the morning, all efforts to check its ravages being futile. It finally died out for lack of material to attack, having reached the portions of the city where buildings were too far apart to facilitate the spread of the flames. The shipping at the docks was saved.

Terrible scenes of disorder marked the progress of the conflagration. Crowds of rioters and plunderers roamed the streets. In dispersing these gangs the police found it necessary to fire upon them, and several persons were killed.

The City of New York First.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—The City of New York was sighted off Fastnet Light at 9 o'clock and it was 10:30 before the Teutonic came along. Both vessels left New York last Wednesday morning, the City of New York getting away from her pier at 7 a. m., and the Teutonic half an hour later. The time of the City of New York was 5 days 23 hours and 14 minutes, and the Teutonic's 5 days 22 hours and 35 minutes

Parnell Will Not Visit America.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—Mr. Parnell's health will not permit him to make a personal visit to America at this time. He will wait until after the trial of Dillon and O'Brien to see whether it will still be possible for them to go to America, believing the delay will not affect the object of their mission.

Mr. Healy's War on Landlords.

DUBLIN, Sept. 24.—Timothy Healy, speaking at a League meeting in Dublin, said that if any tenants submitted to the demands of the landlords they were traitors to their fellow countrymen. He promised that he and his colleagues would continue the struggle for the extermination of landlordism in Ireland.

Large Shipments of Foreign Freight.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 24.—The transatlantic passenger steamers are carrying extraordinarily large cargoes of goods, exporters being anxious to start their shipments before October 1, the date of the new American tariff. Freights have advanced from 60 to 70 shillings per ton.

An Epidemic of Suicides.

BERLIN, Sept. 24.—The suicide last night of Major Von Norman, Commandant of the Cadets' School in this city, following so closely on several other startling suicides by persons of prominence within the past week, has caused a profound sensation.

The Baltimore Coming Home.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 24.—The United States steamer Baltimore, which brought the body of Capt. Ericsson to this country, sailed on her return to the United States.

Commoner O'Brien Arrested.

DUBLIN, Sept. 24.—Patrick O'Brien,

IN CHAINS FOR YEARS.

Awful Cruelty of Parents Toward Their Demented and Violent Son.

READING, Pa., Sept. 24.—Dr. H. M. Wetherill and Charles H. Woltjen, of the State Board of Charities, visited the house of George Deitrich, at Mount Carmel, to inqestigate a case reported them of a demented man chained to the wall in his parents house for nineteen years.

They found Dietrich's son George, aged 41 years, partially demented and violent, fastened by a stout chain and padlock to the wall in a small and filthy, dark cellar. Here he has been for 19 years. His only garment was a shirt. His appearance was pitiable and shocking. The parents threatened vengeance upon any one who interfered. Dr. Wetherill laid the case before Judge Rockerfeller and the sheriff was instructed to have the sufferer taken to the hospital.

MR. CLEVELAND'S HEALTH.

He Emphatically Denies the Philadelphia Story that He is a Sick Man.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—A story emanating from Philadelphia was published here that ex-President Cleveland was in failing health; that he had not been able to any extent to enjoy his summer vacation, that he was losing ambition, etc.

Mr. Cleveland said to a reporter today that he had never passed a more enjoyable vacation, never felt better than he does at present and that the article referred to was false in every particular. He had never authorized any such statement and could not deny the whole article too emphatically.

Mr. Cleveland's eyes were bright, his face was bronzed by his summer outing and he appeared to be in perfect health.

An Irish Giantess.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Miss Bella Macdonald, a 17 year old girl from County Kildare, Ireland, arrived at the Barge Office during the morning. She is 6 feet 7 inches in her stocking feet, and is perhaps the biggest woman ever landed here from foreign shores.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The race horse Reclare was sold at auction in New York for $15,000.

Six distinct shocks of earthquake were noticed at Columbia, S. C., about 3 a. m.

A fire at Palmer, Mass., destroyed property to the amount of $35,000; insurance over $22,000.

Gen. Boulanger's forthcoming reply to his detractors will consist of a book containing about 200 pages.

The State Committee of New York unanimously renominated Judge Robert Earl for the Court of Appeals.

Frank Potter, of Canandaigua, N. Y., fell from a crowded excursion train at Bath, N. Y. and was instantly killed.

The case of Kiernan, the alleged train wrecker, was again adjourned in Justice Grogan's court in West Troy, N.Y., until Saturday morning.

Henry Delarin, of Troy N. Y., who was accidentally shot by Rev. Father Morris, of the French Catholic Church at Malone, while the two were hunting a few days ago, has died.

The trial in New York city of Dr. McGonegal, Mrs. Shaw and Gus Harrison, charged with causing the death of Annie Goodwin, the cigarette girl, by malpractice, has been begun before Judge Fitzgerald.

The Duchess d'Uzes of Paris and her son, who has challenged General Boulanger for recent statements attributed to him, will accompany the Comte de Paris and the Duc d'Orleans to New York.

The condition of ex-Congressman William L. Scott of Erie, Pa., is unchanged and his friends are greatly alarmed. His ailment has been pronounced to be acute gastritis, and his chances for recovery are considered very doubtful unless a change for the better occurs speedily.

Bishop Harkins of the Rhode Island diocese declines to participate in the celebration of the Cotton centennial at Pawtucket. In his letter to E. W. Blayck, chairman of the committee, he says: "Considering the object of the celebration and the manner in which it is to be conducted I decline to assist it."

Samuel Spooner, a policeman of Boston, has received notice from his cousin in Wales, that he, as a direct descendant of the Swinton-Spooner family, has fallen heir to a street in London named Swinton street, the property being valued at $3,500,000. Spooner will sail for England to-morrow to investigate the matter.

Weather Indications.

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. FORCE, Publishers and Proprietors.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—After the most successful season of its existence, Hotel Netherwood will close to-morrow morning.

—A special meeting of the Plainfield Bicycle Club will be held on Saturday evening at eight o'clock in the club house, to consider the football question.

—The Woman's Temperance Aid Society will meet in the auditorium of Reform Hall, to-morrow afternoon, at 3 o'clock A full, prompt attendance is solicited.

—W. P. Smith's new coachman was kicked in the head by one of the horses in the stable, yesterday. Dr. Davis, however, fixed the man up in good shape again.

—The gymnasium classes of the Plainfield Bicycle Club give every promise of being liberally patronized this Winter. The hours and terms are announced today in the advertisement in another column.

—One of the watering carts sprinkled North avenue, the other day, with hundreds of little bass. They were probably some of the thousands that had been placed in the brook for propagation, by the fish commissioners.

—The West Ends will bring a brass band with them Saturday, and the Crescent management will provide seats for them. They will give a concert before and after the game, but there will be no increase in the price of admission.

—The Bound Brook Commissioners have followed the example of the Plainfield Common Council and have issued an ordinance prohibiting bicycle riders from riding on the sidewalks in any part of the town. During the night, when riding along the streets, they must display a light or be fined $5.

—An old man who peddles garden truck and clams about town has given the little hamlet in the rural district where he lives a name to suit his fancy, and has labeled all his barrels and butter jars "Isaiah Iscom, Bivalve, N. J." He hopes to live to see the day when "Bivalve" will be recognized by the men who make geographies.

—The Young Plainfields are happy because of a base ball victory over the Harned Academy nine. They made nine runs in the first innings, and won by the score of 27 to 6. The batteries were C. Jackson, T. Vargas, C. Mumford and W. Littell for the Harneds, and E. Sebring and C. Sutphen for the Plainfields. The Academy pitcher was changed three times, which accounts for the battery of four.

—The new bill for free postal delivery, if it becomes a law, will include in New Jersey: Bordentown, Burlington, Cape May, Dover, Englewood, Freehold, Long Branch, Millville, Mount Holly, Newton, Ocean Grove, Perth Amboy, Phillipsburg, Rahway, Red Bank, Rutherford, Salem, Somerville, Vineland, Westfield and Woodbury.

—The games that were to be played this month between the St. George Cricket Club of Plainfield and the cricket eleven of the New Jersey Athletic Club have been postponed till next season, when the Plainfield cricketers will be in better condition to cope with formidable rivals. It has been difficult to get the St. George players together for match games, but a thorough re-organization will take place this Winter.

—Dixon's Tourists present the well-known and interesting drama made famous by Wm. J. Florence, entitled "The Ticket of Leave Man," at the Amphion Theatre this evening. The cast will enlist the services of the full company. To-morrow evening the great moral drama, "Ten Nights in a Bar-room," will be presented. Edith Hand, the daughter of Charles Hand, the proprietor, will appear as Mary, the child. The houses have improved and things are going smoothly. Friday evening's bill will introduce the never-dying "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

—Now that the Union County Board of Freeholders has promised to make a public statement in refutation of The World's slanderous charges against F. A. Dunham, Engineer of Roads, The World is squirming out of its original position and says that it didn't say what it did say. Instead of its former allegations it now makes entirely different charges casting grave reflections on Mr. Dunham's personal honesty. The conduct of The World in connection with Plainfield matters has not inspired the people with any great confidence in its present statements, and Mr. Dunham may adopt the opinion expressed by his friends, that the journal is not reputable enough to warrant proceedings to recover damages for libel. It has to be an honest paper which can injure an honest man.

The Crescent League to Have a Handsome New Club House.

The owner of the property on Second street East of Park avenue, occupied by the Crescent League until burned out, offers to tear down the old walls and build on the lot a club house for the League according to such plans as it may adopt.

The new building is to be broadened four feet and brought out to the sidewalk line where it will make a fine appearance from Park avenue. It will be fitted with spacious alleys, dining, reading and billiard rooms, ladies' parlor and in fact everything that can be asked for in a first-class club house. The insurance adjusters allowed the owners of the building $2,800 damages.

OBITUARY.

William Hunt Cleaver.

The impressive spectacle of a patriarch whose frame is still robust falling peacefully asleep for eternity was witnessed at the home of the Rev. J. B. Cleaver this morning, when the pastor's venerable father, William Hunt Cleaver, breathed his last.

William Hunt Cleaver was born in Vermont in 1798, and was a nephew of Wm. Cleaver, Bishop of York, and later of St. Asaph's. Mr. Cleaver taught the village school at Scotch Plains, seventy years ago. Among those who were his pupils are the learned A. Coles, M. D., "poet laureate of Scotch Plains," and a well-known official of this city. Mr. Cleaver voted first for Adams, was contemporaneous with every President of the United States, and survived all of them excepting three.

Mr. Cleaver was very active for so aged a man, even to the day of his death, and his wife, who survives him, and who is in her eighty-eighth year, is also vigorous. The aged couple ate their sixty-ninth wedding breakfast at the home of their son in North Plainfield the morning of Sunday, July 13. They were married on a Sunday morning, before breakfast, at the home of the bride's father, John Darby, Scotch Plains, in 1821.

Mrs. Cleaver's uncle, Ezra Darby of Scotch Plains, represented New Jersey in Congress, when the State had but one Congressman. Mr. Darby died at his post, and was buried in the Congressional Cemetery at Washington.

Mrs. Cleaver's cousin, Henry Stanbery, also of Scotch Plains birth, was Attorney General of the United States, during President Johnson's administration. Mr. Stanbery resigned his high office for the purpose of defending his chief in the impeachment trial which has passed into history as the greatest State case of the age. President Johnson was not impeached.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

William Palmer Smith and family will spend the early Fall at VanCourt Inn, Roselle, while extensive alterations to their Netherwood home are being completed.

Editor Wm. H. Keefe, of the Daily News, Newburgh, N. Y., was among the callers at this office yesterday. He is looking at one of the Scott perfecting presses, with a view to purchasing. His paper is in such demand that he cannot print it fast enough.

The Rev. C. B. Mitchell has been suddenly called to Pittsburgh by the alarming illness of John Grazier, the gentleman Mr. Mitchell accompanied to Europe last year. Mr. Grazier has been seized with a stroke of paralysis. The Rev. Dr. Hurlbut will occupy Mr. Mitchell's pulpit in his absence.

An interesting feature of the coming bazar of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be the exhibition, by Miss Clementine Yates, of botanical specimens gathered by her own hands in the Holy Land. Bits of the mosses and other vegetable growths of the Mt. of Olives will be neatly mounted on card-board and displayed to the public eye for the first time.

She Won't Marry Her Deceiver.

Deacon Mansfield Robinson's daughter, Laura, is home again; but McQuay, the man she eloped with, is still in Boston. Laura is in the 16th year of her age, but full grown and well developed. She seems to bear the separation calmly, and some of her friends say she is ready to "take up" with her deceiver again.

The strangest part of the affair is that Mrs. Robinson, the girl's mother, says McQuay proposed to marry Laura in Boston the other day, "so as to fix the thing all up;" but Mrs. Robinson told him he "shouldn't marry Laura to save his life." The parents' idea seems to be that they will be able to send McQuay to State Prison for life without the least expenditure of time, trouble or money. They would rather have satisfaction than a son-in-law.

The Sensible Man Both Observes and Reads—and Takes THE PRESS.

An interesting debate has been planned by the Young Men's Auxiliary of the Young Men's Christian Association for next week Tuesday evening. The subject will be:

Resolved, That reading is more beneficial than observation.

The debaters will be Vincent Rockwell, James Kimball and Charles Fernald for the affirmative, and William Crawford, Walter Dobbins and Warren Rice for the negative.

The debate will be begun at eight o'clock.

A Brakeman's Narrow Escape.

Bystanders at the Netherwood railroad station held their breath yesterday afternoon at a brakeman's narrow escape from death. The man was bending backward from the steps of one of the cars, while the train was going at rapid speed, and was struck in the side by a baggage truck. He lost his grip on the hand-rail, and was almost thrown under the wheels, but managed to recover his balance sufficiently to escape being mangled. He was seriously bruised, and one of the trunks on the baggage truck was broken by the collision.

When you have that tired feeling of exhaustion, and you have little ambition, your blood is thin and poor. There is nothing that will enrich your blood, bring back life and activity, like Hires' Root Beer. Nothing so nutritious and strengthening. Ask your druggist or grocer for a package. Makes five gallons, sparkling and delicious. Sold everywhere.

ARTHUR WEBB'S TERRIBLE SUICIDE.

He Climbs Up on an Elevated Railroad Pillar to Kill Himself.

A number of the readers of this will remember Arthur C. Webb, the youngest brother of the late Otis G. Webb, for many years President of the Plainfield Athletic Club, and also a brother of Irving, Harry and Ernest Webb, all boys who grow up in Westfield and were well-known and popular in this city and vicinity. Yesterday morning Arthur lay down in front of an elevated railroad train in Brooklyn with suicidal intent and was killed. He was an eccentric man. He was married, but he did not live with his wife, who lives in Bayonne. He had not done any work for three months. He boarded with W. S. VanHorn, at 1,209 Broadway, Brooklyn. His brother Ernest, a prosperous lawyer, paid his board. Monday afternoon he called at his brother's office. He returned late in the afternoon, not in very good spirits. He went to bed early. He slept in a hall room facing the streets. The tracks of the Union Elevated Railroad run along on a level with and ten feet away from the window. There is a wooden awning in front of the house 1,203 Broadway, and a pillar of the elevated road runs up at nearly the centre of this, on the line with the curb.

Some time before 6 o'clock yesterday morning Webb got up and put on his shirt, his trousers, and his stockings. Then he raised the window in his room, climbed out on the cornice and walked along to the awning and down the awning to the rail pillar. He climbed up that to the tracks by means of the bolt heads. At just 6 o'clock James Fletcher, a colored man who lives at 1,190 Broadway, looked out of his window and saw him standing on the railroad walk inside the down track of the road. He noticed that Webb was hatless and coatless. The place he was standing at was 200 feet from 1,205 Broadway, and 500 feet from the DeKalb avenue station of the elevated road. A train was nearing the station. Fletcher saw him deliberately lie down on the track in front of it. He shouted to his wife. At the same time the engine whistle shrieked, and the engineer reversed his engine. It was less than 20 feet from Webb, and the train could not stop. The engine struck him. He was frightfully injured, but he lived and remained conscious until he was taken to St Mary's Hospital. He refused to say why he wanted to commit suicide, but continually moaned "Oh, let me die."

Mr. VanHorn told a reporter there was no doubt in his mind but that Webb was crazy. One man said he had understood Webb to say it was intended to put him in the Flatbush Asylum, and he would rather die than go there.

Miss Bowers Indorsed by the City Superintendent.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I commend to the people of Plainfield the lessons in the Delsarte system of physical culture to be conducted by Miss Maud Agnes Bowers. The system is an improvement on ordinary physical culture in that it seeks to produce not only strength but grace of movement. And all who have witnessed the part which Miss Bowers has taken more than once in public representations under the auspices of our high school, will be sure that she is abundantly qualified to give instruction in this system. I hope that a large class will be formed in our city.

JESSE L. HURLBUT,
City Supt. of Schools.

The Board to Officially Vindicate Mr. Dunham.

At a special meeting of the Board of Freeholder held at Elizabeth, Monday afternoon, the charges against Engineer Dunham, of this city, were brought up. The subject was referred to as a slander, and Mr. Trahon moved that in justice to Mr. Dunham and the board an investigation be made of the books of the engineer, and that a public statement be made of all the expenditures. The resolution called for a committee of six members to make the examination.

The resolution was adopted and Director Hubbard appointed as the committee, Freeholders Trahon, Doty, West, Roll and Wright.

Germans Make Merry With Songs and Drama.

A dramatic and musical entertainment was given by the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein Monday evening, before a large and appreciative audience. Good music was rendered by C. L. Conde's orchestra and the Singing Section, with individual parts by M. Bartow, M. Conde, C. Dresselt, C. Maas and H. Haurand. The dramatic impersonators were C. Maas, R. Kersting, C. Dresselt and M. Tonnemann. The directors were M. Koerfer of the Singing Section and M. Hasselmann of the Dramatic Section.

A Front street merchant advertised in THE PRESS Monday for men to drive a wagon. He paid 11 cents for the advertisement, and had 18 applications.

A Plea for the Grown-Up Cat.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I would like very much to write a few words in defence of that much abused animal, the domestic cat. Some people profess to be too tender-hearted to drown their young kittens, yet when the felines are half-grown they will drop them here and there, never caring whether the poor things starve or are tormented to death as they so often are. Within a month six of these little felines have been left within mewing distance of my door; one of them had a wound in its neck, and most of them were half starved. I wonder if boys, and older people, too, ever think what cowards they are when they abuse anything that cannot defend itself. All are God's creatures, and He says "Blessed are the Merciful." Can not the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals do something in the matter? At least provide a temporary shelter until the homeless animals can be disposed of in a painless manner? I would be very glad to give my mite towards so humane an object.

A FRIEND OF THE FRIENDLESS.

An Egg-Plant Human Head, With Hooked Nose and Cunning Ears.

An odd vegetable growth—an egg-plant with a decided likeness to a human head—is on exhibition at the City Pharmacy. The nose is very pronounced, and is of an elongated and pointed Hebraic order. The ears are cute, the ladies say. The eyes and mouth were dark blotches, and have been beautified by a Plainfield artist's touch.

Rheumatism,

BEING due to the presence of uric acid in the blood, is most effectually cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Be sure you get Ayer's and no other, and take it till the poisonous acid is thoroughly expelled from the system. We challenge attention to this testimony:—

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatic gout, being able to walk only with great discomfort, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters, without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months, and am pleased to state that it has effected a complete cure. I have since had no return of the disease."—Mrs. E. Irving Dodge, 110 West 125th st., New York.

"One year ago I was taken ill with inflammatory rheumatism, being confined to my house six months. I came out of the sickness very much debilitated, with no appetite, and my system disordered in every way. I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla and began to improve at once, gaining in strength and soon recovering my usual health. I cannot say too much in praise of this well-known medicine."—Mrs. L. A. Stark, Nashua, N. H.

IS THE POISON ITSELF A WITNESS?

Further Details of the Story of Attempted Murder Told by Mrs. Hess—The Wife Repeats the Tale, and Produces "the Fatal Draught," but the Husband Claims to Be the Victim of Foul Conspiracy.

Henry Hess, who is accused by his wife of the attempted murder of his little daughter, as told exclusively in THE PRESS of yesterday, has been released from the North Plainfield lock-up, on the payment of the fine in default of which he stood committed. Some are inclined to discredit the story told by Mrs. Hess and her children, claiming that she is more to blame than he, but Mrs. Hess insists that every word of her tale is gospel truth, and the fact that the children corroborated it so closely convinced Justice Hardy that the complaint was based on facts.

The origin of the trouble among the Hess family dates a long time back. Its first outbreak was manifested two years ago, when Hess is said to have had a wrangle with aged Francis Bernard. Mrs. Bernard had long received personal attention at the hands of Mrs. Hess, and out of gratitude promised to give her the dwelling in which the Hesses had been living and the plot of land surrounding it. Mrs. Barnard did not want Hess to get hold of the property, and, it is alleged, continually cautioned Mrs. Hess against him. Bitter feeling was thereby engendered, and after Mrs. Barnard's death Hess and Barnard had frequent controversies. Hess is reported to have declared that his wife had conspired with the Barnards against him, and to have become so violent, at the time mentioned, about two years ago, that Mrs. Hess and Barnard had to seek the protection of the authorities. Justice Hardy then was asked by Mrs. Hess to go into the house and pacify the husband. Mr. Hardy says that to obey this request he had to break his way through a door, and was met face to face by Hess, who brandished a butcher knife menacingly. Hardy was unarmed, but, under pretense of drawing a revolver, frightened Hess into dropping his bloodthirsty weapon, and eventually restored peace. Last week, after occasional intervening eruptions, the Hess volcano broke out again, and Hess was arrested and fined. The story of Mrs. Hess, relating how—in his mad rage at her giving evidence against him, and out of desire for revenge—he is alleged to have sought to poison first her children and then himself, has already been told in THE PRESS. Forces are said to have been at work to induce Mrs. Hess to withdraw the complaint against her husband. Whether or not the alleged attempt to hush up the case will be successful remains to be seen. If the case comes to trial the partly-emptied package of rat poison which Mrs. Hess says was used by her husband in his alleged attempt at murder and suicide will be used as evidence against him.

Hess has a reputation for being an industrious, hard-working man, and is said to be utterly guiltless of the brutality which Mrs. Hess has charged. A PRESS reporter sought to obtain, in an interview, a statement of his side of the story, concerning the claim that he is a victim of conspiracy, but he refused to say anything for publication. The columns of THE PRESS are open to him for whatever he may have to say in vindication of himself.

Dead is the Crow, and Blood is on the Moon.

Harry Coddington's pet crow is deceased, and vengeance is in store for the man who shot it. The crow had been a member of the Coddington family a long time. It was caught when young in the mountains back of North Plainfield. As the bird waxed in years it was given a thorough classical and scientific education, and could do many things even more wonderful than hiding keys under the door-mat, mending lamp chimneys and old umbrellas, paring potatoes, singing the babies to sleep, and taking the little ones to Sunday-school. It could sing, it is said, in a blonde voice, and play jackstones, and pull hairpins out of the girls' braids and re-arrange the hair in latest Delsarte style, and was just learning how to sew buttons on shoes when its demise occurred.

J. Worth Coddington sauntered away from the house, Sunday afternoon, with the crow perched on his shoulder. When he reached the junction of Mountain avenue and Somerset street he saw some friends coming, and advised the bird to go home. The sable creature cawed his protest, and flew into the branches of a tree, where it smoothed its ruffled feelings and sought to choke down the promptings of jealousy that all well-bred birds indulge in when thrust ruthlessly aside to make room for other bipeds. While the crow was composing itself back into a Sunday-school frame of mind a Mean Man from Mountain avenue appeared. The Mean Man knew that the bird was a family pet, for others told him so, but instead of receiving it as a distinguished guest he chuckled over what he considered a good shot and went into the house and got a gun. Then he shot the crow and killed it, and the righteous wrath of the Coddingtons was aroused. They threaten to have the Mean Man placed in the borough lock-up for discharging fire-arms on the public streets on Sunday, and to sue him for the damage he has done the family feelings by turning a good, playful, industrious live crow into a worthless dead one.

—Representatives of the "Order of the Royal Ark," a one-year endowment order, are in town and will organize a branch here in a few days.

THE BOROUGH WAR IS ENDED.

The Telegraph Poles Will Go Where the People Say, and Nowhere Else.

The telegraph pole war in the Borough is at an end. The story of its outbreak, as told exclusively in THE PRESS of Monday, came to the knowledge of Joseph A. McClary, General Manager of the New Jersey Postal Telegraph Company, and Division Manager of the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company, and he promptly visited this city, displayed the olive branch of peace, and put an end to all hostility. The holes which had been dug along Greenbrook road, Grove street and Willow avenue were for the poles of the New Jersey Postal Telegraph Company, as was surmised. Mr. McClary says that they were dug under the direction of a foreman who exceeded his authority. The Company has no desire to do anything contrary to the wishes of the people, and will not erect any poles without consent of the property-owners. The local foreman did not understand this. He thought he must go ahead and complete the line through Plainfield and North Plainfield in a hurry, and he didn't trouble himself about the wishes of the people or anybody else. As soon as Mr. McClary found that holes had been dug where the people didn't want them he ordered them filled up, and his command was promptly obeyed. The route for the line mapped out by the local foreman has been abandoned, and the poles will be erected along a route against which there is no objection. Mr. McClary has given orders that the property-owners' consent must be secured in every instance preliminary to excavation. His Company aims to please the public now and always.

A Literary Guest That Always Brings Delight.

Sun and Shade, the artistic monthly periodical published by the Photo-Gravure Company at 137 West 23d street, New York, grows more welcome the oftener it comes to hand. It is one of the choicest visitors to the library table. The plates are of a convenient size, yet are not too small for comprehensive work and conscientious execution of detail. Each issue is a repetition of perfected art.

The number for June opened with an excellent portrait of Gen. P. H. Sheridan, from the original crayon of Otto Venino, brother of A. Venino, the pianist, of this city. "Gossip," that charming painting by Carl Marr, which attracts so many admiring eyes at the Métropolitan Museum of Art, is faithfully reproduced, and is one of the brightest things Sun and Shade has ever given. "In Love," Marcus Stone's work, is old, but it is one of those thoughtful studies of which one does not easily tire. The "Lane at the Base of Cemetery Hill" is a noteworthy addition to the series of Gettysburg views. Gustav Richter's "Harem Scene" is redolent with a languorous glow, and its maidens are tender and coy. The "Scene in Switzerland," "Tulip Culture," and "Interior at Boston," are all good.

For July Sun and Shade presented a portrait of the Rt. Rev. Henry C. Potter, D. D. LL. D., Protestant Episcopal Bishop of New York. "Winter Foliage" is a very pleasant picture; one can sniff the fresh cold perfume of the snowy woodland, and can feel the crunch of the snow under his feet and the tingle of the crisp frosty atmosphere on his cheeks. "The Organ Rehearsal" is an old-time favorite. "The Challenge" develops, as one gazes on it, into a tale of romance, chivalry and nobility of manhood. "Yucatan" is spread before one's gaze in a single comprehensive glance. The cacti, the stunted foliage, the villages of adobe and stone, the distant hills, the thorny paths at hand, all arouse one's fondness for travel to distant lands. "Spangler's Spring," at the foot of Culp Hill, Gettysburg, is of especial interest to the soldiers who fought for the possession of the spot, and will be appreciated by all who know its history. "Naples" is a fine view; and the "Modern Colonial Architecture" is a good sample of the work the builders are doing.

Sun and Shade will become a monthly visitor in any Plainfield household for four dollars a year.

We Have Already One Too Many.

The Elizabeth papers say that "there was a special meeting of the board of freeholders held Monday afternoon for the purpose of acting on the petition of the Commonwealth Water company of Plainfield for permission to lay mains on certain county roads recently paved with telford."

Providence be praised, this is not so! Plainfield has already two water companies—the "Water Works Co.," and the "Water Supply Co."—and she could be happy with either were t'other one out of the way.

The company referred to in the above extract, is the Commonwealth Water Co., of Summit.

A Large Estate.

A broad land is this in which we live, dotted so thickly with thrifty cities, towns and villages! Amid them all, with ever-increasing popularity and helpfulness, is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, giving hope and cheer where there is disease and despair. Wherever there is humanity there is suffering; wherever there is suffering there is the best field for this greatest American Remedy. Consumption (which is lung-scrofula), yields to it, if employed in the early stages of the disease; Chronic Nasal Catarrh, yields to it; Kidney and Liver diseases, yield to it! If you want the best known remedy for all diseases of the blood, ask for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and take no other. It is guaranteed to cure in all cases of diseases for which it is recommended, or money refunded.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

The encampment of Knights Templar held at Rockford, Ill., last week proved a gratifying success. It now seems likely that Templar encampments in the State will become an established institution.

The temple builders of Chicago are still at work. Last week ground was broken for the erection of the Lowther Masonic Temple on the west side of the city. It will be a beautiful structure and will cost about $75,000.

The gathering of Scottish Rite Masons at Cleveland, O., next month will probably be the largest assembly of high-grade Masons that has ever been seen in the Western States. Of late years the rite has been growing steadily in the northern jurisdiction, and as the preparations for the next General Assembly have been made on a very large and liberal scale the occasion will be a brilliant one.

Odd-Fellows.

The triennial cantonment is over and the question is naturally asked: Are such monster gatherings and public displays for the benefit of the order? The answer from nearly all the leading members of the order is in the negative Odd-Fellowship is planned, they say for practical work and not for costly display. It is among the fatherless and the widow that its uses and charities appear to best advantage. There is, therefore, a widespread feeling of humiliation among the friends and faithful workers in the order. The absorbing question among the order now is: What is to become of the surplus money realized from the venture? For it is admitted that there is a very large surplus on hand, and while General Underwood claims the right to dispose of this sum as he pleases, there is a large element in the order disposed to dispute the right of the Generalissimo to give a "show" under the auspices of the order and then pocket or otherwise use the proceeds as he chooses.

It seems probable that General Underwood will be severely scored in the coming session of the Sovereign Grand Lodge, and a thorough accounting will be required of him, in any event. There are also serious charges being prepared against Underwood for issuing orders in defiance of the laws of the order, for the purpose of favoring certain members who do not appear to be in good standing among the fraternity.

An Odd-Fellow's temple is about to be erected in Cincinnati, O., which will cost $250,000 and be seven stories high. Designs for the building have been called for.

The Inter-State Odd-Fellows Association of Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri and Kansas concluded its business last week by the election of J. W. Humphreys, Iowa, President; and C. A. Patterson, Omaha, Secretary. The next meeting will be held in Omaha.

Knights of Pythias.

Brigadier-General Barkley, of Illinois, is already looking around for a place for holding the next State encampment of the uniform rank. East St. Louis has offered special inducements for the camp, and Springfield is earnestly urging its claims for the patronage of the rank.

The Supreme Lodge, at its last session, increased the salary of Major-General Carnahan to $4,500, which is to cover and include the entire expense of running the Major-General's headquarters. This it is thought will prove a saving to the order of several hundred dollars.

Improved Order of Red Men.

This order has been making headway steadily in every part of the country for the past ten years, and the next annual meeting of the Great Council of the United States is regarded with much interest, as it is believed the reports will show that the order has now a membership of over 100,000. McDOUGALL.

A Damper.

At the close of the grand ball of the Arts Club, the celebrated first actor of the Court Theater in Berlin stands in the passage waiting for friends. A beautiful and fashionably dressed lady approaches him and says:

"Beg pardon, have I the honor to see before me our famous Herr Bruller, whose powerful and sonorous voice I had the pleasure of admiring last night in 'Macbeth'? Might I ask you to do me a little favor?"

"I am quite at your service, Madam."

"Then will you be good enough to call out in the street for the carriage of Baroness Zabelitz?"—The Jury.

Rooted Habit.

Parrott (wrathfully)—I can't see why Gabby takes so much time in coming to the point. He keeps saying the same thing over and over.

Wiggins—He can't help it, poor fellow. He has had a telephone in his office for the past four years.—Munsey's Weekly.

Hirshkind's Business Reasoning.

Hirshkind—Und vat may be the price of this vatch?

Jeweler—Ten dollars.

Hirshkind (sotto voce)—He asks ten; he means eight; he'll take six; it's vorth four; I'll offer two.—Jewelers' Circular.

The Height of Economy.

"Is Scribuler stingy?"

"Awfully! Why, when he writes a novel he does it with a pencil, so that if his book is rejected he can rub it out and use the sheets again."—Harper's Bazar.

It Was Impossible.

"Why do you sing so at your work?" growled the Stove-pipe to the Kettle. "I never do."

"Why, you can't!" returned the Kettle. "You're always smoking at your work."—Puck.

FEATURES OF MAGNETISM.

Remarkable Behavior of Some Metals in Certain Conditions.

It is now pretty widely known that iron suddenly ceases to be magnetic when heated to the critical point of its "recalescence" or "after-glow," and that if alloyed with some 12 per cent. of manganese, as in manganese steel it becomes almost completely non-magnetic. These facts show us that iron is not necessarily magnetic under all conditions, for admixture with a small quantity of another metal, and even mere change of temperature, render it non-magnetic. Stranger still, some observers report that iron again becomes magnetic when the temperature reaches whiteness, but this lacks confirmation.

The behavior of nickel-steel is very remarkable. As usually received from the maker, nickel-steel with 25 per cent. of nickel is non-magnetic; and yet it is a mixture of two magnetic metals, iron and nickel. If, now, we cool this nickel-steel to —20 deg. C (—4 deg. Fahr.) it becomes very decidedly magnetic, and remains so when it again returns to the normal temperature. If, finally, we heat it, it remains magnetic till it reaches its critical temperature of 580 deg. C (1,076 deg. Fahr.), when it again becomes non-magnetic, and remains so until again cooled to —20 deg. C. In short, this nickel-steel may at the common temperature be either permanently magnetic or permanently non-magnetic as we please. We can at will make it permanently non-magnetic by heating it momentarily to 580 deg. C. and again cooling it; or permanently magnetic, by cooling it temporily to —20 deg. C. Nickel-steel has been recommended for ship building because non-magnetic. But if the nickel-steel ship is to become magnetic suddenly, and without a word of warning, on cooling to —4 deg. Fahr., sending its compasses spinning, its sphere of usefulness would be limited. For, though this temperature is not reached during common ocean trips, yet vessels in port at New York, Boston or Halifax, on the great lakes and elsewhere, are occasionally exposed to it. Reheating the vessel to 1076 deg. Fahr. to unmagnetize it seems at first to present technical difficulties. Finally pull a bar of non-magnetic 25 per cent. nickel-steel apart tensilely, and, presto! its broken fragments are magnetic!

This, be it understood, is the behavior of 25 per cent. nickle-steel. It does not at all follow that, with other proportions of nickle, the same strange conduct will be found. Thus with five per cent. of nickle, steel becomes non-magnetic when heated to about 800 deg. C. Like 25 per cent. nickle-steel, it remains non-magnetic when cooled somewhat below this temperature, regaining its magnetism at a decidedly lower temperature at which it again becomes magnetic, instead of being below zero, is somewhat about 650 deg. C.

Again, it has become pretty well known that tungsten, itself unmagnetic, greatly increases the magnetism of steel; and now it turns out that it plays the same part with nickel, 3 per cent. of tungsten making nickel more strongly magnetic than the steel of which magnets were formerly made. Thus Mr. Preece states that, while tungsten raises the magnetic induction of steel from 700 to 5,000, it raises that of nickel from 120 to 1,032.—Engineering and Building.

TOOK THE WRONG DOSE.

How a Miner's Colic Succumbed to a Dreadful "Adjunct."

There came a chap one day to set up a drug-store in our mining town, which had taken a boom and was attracting business. This wasn't to be a "regular" drug-store, but the drug part was an annex to a grocery and boot and shoe store. The new arrival had just opened it when Tom Harrison, one of the men in my claim, was taken one night with bilious colic. Ben Wheeler, another of our men, went to the druggist's to get a remedy but that individual at once said to him:

"I know mighty little about drugs, but I took this stock on a debt and thought I'd better show 'em up. The drugs are an adjunct."

"Yes, but Tom has had a bad case of colic"

"Well, I might hit something and I might miss it. I don't want to take the chances. If you do, go ahead.

"I don't feel fit, and mebbe I'd better go and ask Tom. If he'll run the chances I will."

He came back and stated the case. Tom's colic was worse, and in his desperation he exclaimed:

"Git sunthin—no matter what! You can't mor'n kill me, and I shall die anyhow!"

Ben returned to the store and pawed around for a spell. He couldn't read except with a great effort, but he came across two bottles, the contents of which rather took his eye, and he filled the smaller one with the mixture. When he was ready to give Tom a dose he said:

"Can't guarantee this, Tom. The feller says the drugs are only an adjunct, and you know I'm no hand at doctorin'."

"I'll chance it," replied Tom, and down went the dose, and at midnight he was a dead man.

The coroner got the story as I have have given it, put a jury on the case and had the particulars retold, and when they had nothing more to learn, he said:

"Gentlemen, I can't see whar nobody was to blame, and you'll return a verdict that Tom cum to his death on account of an adjunct in the hands of a friend, which the same was drags as nobody knowed any thing about."—N. Y. Sun.

—Nigger is not, as generally supposed, a corruption of negro, but it is regularly developed from the earlier form of neger, which is derived through the French from the Spanish-Portuguese negro, from which the English negro is taken directly. Nigger is more English in form than negro and was formerly and to some extent is still used without opprobrious intent; but its use is now confined to colloquial or illiterate speech, in which it generally conveys more or less of contempt.

MY HOUSE BOAT.

The Realization of a Dream—Hospitality as It Should Be.

A Magical Key—Practical Side of the Question—Suggestions From Many Quarters.

[COPYRIGHT, 1890.]
[Special Correspondence.]

I HAD not lived long in New York before I realized how much to the worker in town a summer home must mean—a summer home not involving, after hours of the dust and din of the streets, a gasping consultation with time tables, and a crush with hot and hurrying crowds. I thought a long time about this, but my plans at first were vague, for above all things I wanted to possess a key. This key was not to guard my belongings, I never thought of it in that way, it was rather to open the way to them. It was something I was to have and to give away, to let pass from hand to hand, like good gold in circulation. I had no idea what door that key was to fit, nor where that door was to be. All I knew was that it was to lead him who had it to comfort and repose, to wide windows looking to the sky; yes, and to a quiet corner where cushions and books should beguile him to rest. And over all there was to be an atmosphere breathing to each a personal welcome, as though somehow or other every thing man found there was his own.

And so real did that key become to me, that not only with friends but with tired strangers I saw in the cars, I found myself on the point of handing it with a "use this to-day, you'll be better for it to-morrow." I never saw a brainweary man or woman without longing for their sakes to own that key. Even more for two lovers or for any congenial souls craving solitude for themselves.

Where this house was to be was a question which bothered me not a little. My thoughts turned toward the mountains with their hushed and purple twilights, and the thrill of their woods at dawn. My memory brought back a certain breeze rollicking around a hilltop and blowing off in a breath all the care I had carried with me. If mountain air will do that with care, that, thought I, is the place for my house. But it was all so many hours away, and with a house hours away, what is one to do with a key? I saw that no house involving a long journey to reach it could ever fulfill a hospitable intent, when that intent is to welcome not so much the opulent as the wayfarer. And for the wayfarer one must have above all things a key. For the finest hospitality is that which shall not call on the host to dispense just as a gift is greatest in which all sense of obligation is lost.

There is a bend in the elevated road coming from the Battery where one gets a glimpse of a great tangle of masts thrown up against the sky, the roofs of old houses, a patch of green with its solitary park policeman, and the many colored tops of canal boats, huddling like painted tortoises that have waddled away out of the wind. If you walk down by those at night, or better still, in the crisp, cool twilight of an October day, you get a glimpse now and then of a life within that opens up new possibilities. Now it is a little gleam of red in the lamplight, a bird that is chirping itself to rest, and now a pot of bright flowers. There are pots of flowers everywhere. And once I saw the hands of some woman at dinner—no faces can be seen from the dock—so delicate and dainty that I would walk many miles to see them again through that little crack in the window. I was standing there and watching those hands, the wind fresh from the river blowing keen in my face, when the idea of a house-boat came to my mind. I had found a place for my key. "A boat, a boat," sang I. "My house must be a boat."

It was a long time before it was built, for the buying of a boat is no ordinary affair, and house-boats then in this country were very little talked of. Still it was done, and now it lies—but why say where? for next week it will be gone. There is a good old New Englander, with a trig and tidy wife at one of the wharves, behind canal whose barge I and my boat are going a-sailing.

But to-day it lies moored just across the narrow part of the river at the foot of a low hill. It is all welcome, all glow. The flowers on deck nod their many colored heads at you in greeting, the white curtains at the open window stir, one is willing to believe, with a sort of enthusiastic promise of what lies in the cold dim room inside. Even the smoke from the chimney, busy with good cheer, bends toward you with a wide wave of welcome before tossing itself merrily upward. Not only this, but when you stand on the further shore looking over, you see the lights and colors from the boat come down across the rumpled surface of the water to meet you, in eager sinuous lines to your very feet. And as you step into the little boat that carries you over, they gleam and glance under your boat, always beckoning, and receding the nearer you approach, till when you step aboard and past them, like well-trained messengers, their office fulfilled, they vanish quietly away in silence.

On most of the English house-boats you enter at the end, but with mine the main entrance is in the middle. There are many reasons for this, the greatest being that in this way I get the lines in my living room unbroken.

My living room lies then at one end of the house. There are three sides to it in which there are windows, thus giving to the room not only the sun and breeze all day when I want them, but all the effects of sky and water, both by night and day as well. Under these windows are divans, low seats and cushions, and above them a long shelf running all about the room for books. In one corner stands the fireplace, an old-fashioned Franklin with its shining brass and irons and low fender, worn at one end by many feet. I sometimes wonder whose feet they were that for half a century or more, before the Franklin came into my possession, rested themselves so long on this fender. Whether they belonged to some comfortable old paterfamilias, paper in hand, lounging back in his great arm-chair and toasting his toes through two generations of domestic nights. Or whether the delicate slippered foot of some dainty woman rested on it as she wore her life out in silent waiting. Or whether some child grew to manhood and built his way to fortune there. Whatever its history it never itself rested before cheerier logs than those which on cool autumn nights go snapping and sparkling in great flames up my chimney.

Of course, I had to overcome prejudice in the building of my boat. The purely practical and unpoetic said it would blow over if I built it on a scow. And I must confess there was much to be said in the way of a canal boat. An old one can be bought for twenty-five dollars. Then, too, there were all the suggestions held out by "Rudder Grange." I consulted authorities on Chinese boats and men who were filled with the delights of boat life in Terra del Fuego. But something failed to please me in them all. There were queer things that happened to people's feet standing always so far under water. I wanted my house on deck. I wanted to live, feet and all, in the wide open of pure air and sunshine. So in spite of every one I took a scow. Now, a scow is eighty feet long and sixty feet wide, so your house can be sixty by twenty, leaving deck room at either end. But the price of mine—and every one always insists on the price of every thing where an innovation is made—the price of mine I decline to give, for I paid for my experiments, as a novice must always do. But I have two friends who for four hundred dollars are building one on a canal boat which, with much arrogance, they maintain will outrival mine. I decline to believe them.

The walls, from the floor to the ceiling, were covered with old tapestries, and upon them were hung rare etchings, delf plaques, brass sconces and choice pictures. There was still plenty of room to tack up sketches as fast as made. At intervals, along the sides, Venetian church lamps, a censer or two, and some richly-hued marine lanterns were suspended from the dark, heavy beams which upheld the deck, and served as a magnificent ribbed ceiling, bold and agreeable in tone, and beautiful in its curved lines. At the farther end of the salon was built a permanent table of generous dimensions, placed longitudinally, which served as a dining table, and which became between meals and in the evening a common center, across which were exchanged the adventures of the day and the plans for the morrow. About it were grouped a number of carved and ornamental antique armchairs, of larger pattern, and one of which was to its neighbor a stranger from a strange land. Holland, Spain, Italy, Mexico, England and Plymouth Rock jogged elbows and tread under their feet prayer rugs from Smyrna, Bokhara and Hindoostan. The coal-stained floor, and the battered keelson, upon which had been dumped many a ton of anthracite, carefully scrubbed and cleaned, were covered throughout the length of the boat with fresh, clean china matting. The cots along the side were perfectly disguised as divans, and brought into "tone" by a judicious use of Turkish and India rugs, camel's-hair blankets, etc. A carved oaken chest, of the thirteenth century, served as a sideboard, and from the opposite side an English high chest of drawers, of two hundred years ago, flaunted its brass handles. A Japanese bronze vase, as high as the back of an old-fashioned chair, richly ornamented in relief with tangled gods and sacred snakes degraded from the splendor for which it was deservedly intended, now served as a depository for smoking materials. Near by, an old-fashioned writing desk, always open, presented a continual opportunity for communication with the unfortunates in the outside world.

TO PRESS PLANTS.

Some Information on a Subject in Which Many Ladies Are Interested.

Does the reader want to know how to press plants, so as to have respectable specimens in his collection? You say that your specimens will not keep their color, and that altogether you can not make a satisfactory job of pressing plants.

Well, says a writer in Golden Days, I will tell you how I manage the business, and I think I may say that I am fairly successful.

My friends tell me that the mounted specimens in my herbarium are perfect pictures to look at, independently of their scientific value; and, between ourselves, I thoroughly agreed with them:

First of all, what do you collect your plants in? I think a portfolio is better than a tin, and for this reason: that you can at once lay your specimens out flat between the papers, and so prevent them from getting bruised and crumpled.

Your portfolio should be of the same size as the paper on which you intend to mount your specimens, so that you may select plants of suitable size.

The size of my mounting paper, and therefore of my portfolio, is thirteen inches by nine inches, and I may say that I find that size a very convenient one and quite large enough.

The making of a portfolio is a very simple matter. Get two pieces of stout pasteboard at your stationer's, cut them to the right size and connect them with two pieces of strong tape, thus:

Then place about a dozen double sheets of botanical paper between the two covers and your portfolio is made.

A tin is very useful for many stout, stiff, troublesome plants; but you will easily understand that with delicate plants in flower, it is a great advantage to place them carefully at once in a portfolio. I often carry both a tin and a portfolio.

Next, take trouble in the selection of your plants. Choose your specimens with the flowers nicely out and with the foliage in good order. Be careful to take them up by the root, otherwise your specimen will be mutilated and not perfect.

I sometimes ask friends at a distance to get me such and such a plant, which happens to grow in their neighborhood. Instead of a plant they send me a fragment of a plant—four or five inches of a plant. Such fragments are useless. We want entire plants, roots and all. Of course, with large plants this is often impossible; but no specimen is complete which does not show the root and root-leaves as well as the flower.

Having, then, got your plants, how are you to press them?

I will tell you how I manage. It is most important that you use proper botanical paper; otherwise, no matter how careful you are, you can not expect your plants to keep their color. The most convenient size is sixteen by ten inches, when folded, and I should advise you to buy at least half a dozen quires.

As the drying paper is sixteen inches by ten inches I use a press of the same size. My press consists simply of two elm boards, about three-quarters of an inch in thickness, with a piece dovetailed crosswise at each end to prevent the boards from warping, thus:

FIG. 2.

As these boards cost next to nothing, it is well to have two or three pairs; so as not to have stout and delicate plants in the same press at the same time.

It is also a great advantage to have a supply of stiff cardboards, cut the size of the press, to interlay with the paper, so as to keep the specimens as level as possible.

The weights must of course vary according to the nature of the plant. Delicate plants, like pimpernel or wood sorrel, want only a very light weight—a good-sized book is sufficient; while obstreperous plants like burdocks or thistles require severer treatment.

I have several weights varying from, say, fifty-six pounds to twelve pounds. You will soon learn how heavy a weight is necessary for any given plant; experience in such a matter is the only master.

Many botanists use screw-presses, and of course a screw-press is a great advantage, as you can employ just what pressure you please. But screw-presses cost money, and it is quite possible to get on without one, although if any one is kind enough to give you one, do not by any means refuse it.

But supposing you have a screw-press, you will still want some boards and weights as well, for one press, even if a screw, is not sufficient.

We will assume, then, that you have your press, with paper and weights and cardboard complete. The next question is: How are you to use them?

Suppose you are going to press a violet. First clean the roots; then arrange the plant as nicely and picturesquely on the paper as you can, being careful that the leaves lie flat; cover it with eight or ten sheets of paper, and put it in the press, with a light weight only.

Next morning change, or just turn, the papers, rearrange the position of the plant if necessary, and put on a heavier weight. In three or four days, perhaps less, such a plant as a violet will be perfectly dry.

Some plants, of course, take longer, some less; and in every case the great point is to change the papers daily, and to use suitable pressure.

In the case of plants like the orchids or daffodils it is well sometimes to make a section of the bulbs, otherwise it is almost impossible to get a satisfactory specimen.

So with the larger and coarser plants, like many of the Compositæ and Umbelliferæ, it is often necessary to cut away portions in order to press the plant at all. But when this has to be done, always endeavor to select as typical a specimen as possible.

With woody plants, like hawthorne or wild crab, make a section of the stem, and put on all the pressure you can. With succulent plants, use more paper, and change it oftener. And if, as sometimes happens, in spite of all your care, the specimens get moldy in the press, paint them over with spirits of wine.

Before now, when I have been away from home for a few days, I have found on my return my plants wholly smothered with mold; but a good dose of spirits of wine has soon cleaned them.

When away on a holiday it is of course impossible to cart about with you half a dozen fifty-pound weights in your portmanteau, and so you must use other contrivances.

You can, however, quite easily take one press, and a good supply of paper and cardboard and a couple of stout straps. You can also make a canvas bag, and fill it with stones and use that as a weight.

If your supply of botanical paper falls short, you must make newspaper do. When on a botanical expedition, as on all other occasions, common sense is necessary.

Let me now say one word about mounting your specimens. The first thing we want is mounting-paper, and it should be of the best.

A specimen once dried and mounted will last you your life-time; it is surely then a pity to mount it on bad paper. Pressing or cartridge paper comes in sizes of twenty-six inches by twenty-one inches, and a quire cuts up into a good many sheets.

Have it cut up in sheets thirteen inches by nine inches, and some thirteen inches by eighteen and one half inches. The larger sheets doubled are used to enclose the smaller, on which the individual plants are mounted.

On the outside sheet I write the name of the genus, on the inside the name of the species, thus:

FIG. 3.

Some botanists stick their plants to the paper with gum, others use strips of sticking-paper. I have always found the latter—stamp-paper—quite satisfactory.

Some, again, wash their specimens with a preservative solution before placing them in the cabinet; but the objection to this is that the solution often spoils the color of the specimen. I think that camphor placed in the cabinet is sufficient, and if at any time mold should appear, paint the specimen with spirits of wine.

In conclusion, let me impress upon you the absolute necessity of accurately labeling your specimens. A complete label should not only give the name of the plant, but also its locality, its date and the name of the finder.

The Iridium Light.

Upon a suitable plate or support, such as wax, the form of the desired filament is penciled with plumbago; this is placed in an electrical iridium bath. When a film of sufficient thickness is deposited upon the stenciled design, the filament is peeled off from the beeswax and the plumbago brushed off the back. Iron wires are used as conductors. The filament is incandesced in the atmosphere, as it is practically non-combustible, or, for security against breakage, it may be incandesced in any suitable gas or in a vacuum.

Six years ago there were scarcely a hundred electric motors in operation in the United States for any purpose; today there are not less than 15,000 motors in use, applied to not less than two hundred different industries, and an industrial revolution is taking place equaling, if not surpassing, in importance that attending the introduction of the steam engine, and marvelous in the rapidity of its growth.—Sprague.

BIRCHALL'S ORDEAL

More Damaging Evidence Against the Prisoner.

HE MAY TRY TO PROVE AN ALIBI

An Intimation by His Counsel Causes Much Speculation.

An Important Discovery Made by a Detective—A Heavy Blow to the Young Englishman—He is Recognized by Witnesses as "Lord Somerset"—The Court Room Crowded With Ladies.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Sept. 25.—The Birchall trial was continued to-day. There was a great crowd in the court room, including over one hundred ladies. Neither Mrs. Birchall nor her sister were present, the former being too nervous.

It has been reported that the prisoner is handcuffed on his way to and from the court room, but such is not the case. He neither complains nor gives trouble in any way.

Dr. Taylor, who was called to see Benwell's body when found in the swamp, said that the clothing was frozen to the ground. He testified that both bullets passed through the brain, either wound being sufficient to produce death; that the wound in the back of the head had been made first and the bullet passed upward and forward; that the hair near both wounds was singed, showing that the pistol was held close to the victim's head. The bullets were of 32 calibre. Death was instantaneous, so sudden that the heart had stopped on the half beat. Witness thought that death occurred four days before the body was found. He found marks in the groin and in the pit of the stomach, but thought such marks could have been made by Benwell falling from an upright position.

Dr. Taylor's testimony was corroborated by Dr. Welford of Woodstock as to the condition of the body. He took a human skull from a satchel, and amid breathless interest on the part of the audience, showed how the shots entered.

The defense so far has been extremely severe in cross-examination. What will be offered when the defense opens its case remains a mystery. Some say there are surprises in store, but no inkling of what they are has been given as yet.

His Defence May be an Alibi.

Sexton Greigs swore that at 10 o'clock Wednesday night succeeding Pelley's identification of the body, at the time when Birchall was in custody, a buggy drove up to the cemetery and stopped. He drew the blind to let the light shine out and the buggy was driven away rapidly. He suspected somebody had come to steal the body.

George Hersee, a farmer who lives near the scene of the murder, identified Birchall as the man who introduced himself to him in 1888 as a son of Lord Somerset, and asked him about Mud Lake, saying he had been gunning there four years before.

James Ellis testified that he met Birchall with another Englishman near Mud Lake in 1888.

"He was not in the country at that time," Mr. Blackstock remarked, and speculation at once became rife that the defense would be an alibi.

Chief Young, of Niagara Falls, testified that when he told Birchall he had a warrant for his arrest, the latter said "All right," but did not ask for any explanation.

Important Discovery.

A very important discovery in the Birchall case has just been made by Government Detective Murray. It will be remembered that a great sensation was made after Benwell's body was identified by the discovery of the entry, "F.C. Benwell," on the register of the Commercial Hotel, Brantford, Ont., date of January 13. The coincidence of the names was remarkable and Birchall's lawyers relied upon the circumstance in shaking the Crown's case, Archibald Nyuma and Baird Murray, both living at Brantford at the time of the murder, have confessed to Detective Murray that the entry was made for a lark. Two fictitious entries were made, one "F. C. Benwell, Bristol, England," and another, "J. W. Rogers, Europe." This is a heavy blow for the defendant.

THE FAMINE DISTRICTS.

English and Scotch Members of Parliament Making an Investigation.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—Mr. Morley's example in making a personal inspection of the famine-threatened districts of Ireland has proved contagious, and a large party of English and Scotch Members of Parliament has now been made up with the same object in view.

The reports and statements of these gentlemen are expected to form an interesting feature of the next session of Parliament. The character of the visitors is of the highest kind, and their words will have great weight with the English Conservatives, who are not inclined to accept the statements of the Irish members as exactly unprejudiced.

The Floods in France.

PARIS, Sept. 25.—President Carnot will visit the flood districts. Relief for the sufferers by the floods will be asked from the Chamber of Deputies. The town of Annonay, department of Ardeshe, and the surrounding country, have been flooded by the overflow of the Cance and the Deaume rivers, causing an immense amount of damage.

McAdoo Defeated.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Sept. 25.—Congressman McAdoo was defeated for renomination in the Democratic convention here. The nominee is Edward F. McDonald, who was ousted from the State Senate last winter because it was alleged he had been counted in.

THE MATCH TO COME OFF.!

McAuliffe and Slavin Will Fight in About Two Weeks.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The arrangements for the international fight between Joe McAuliffe, the American champion, and Frank P. Slavin, for £1,300, the Police Gazette championship belt, and the championship of the world, have been completed and the fight will take place within two weeks.

Crichton Temple, who is now blamed for the police interference, did not want the men to battle for the purse, but Lord Erie Gordon. Lord Lonsdale and Richard K. Fox insisted that the purse should be offered, and also that, should the police interfere when the men are in the ring, Slavin and the American champion shall each receive £350. Temple opposed this proposition, and said "it was useless to think of it."

Richard K. Fox insisted that the above amount should be paid. A long discussion followed, and finally Temple agreed to the American's proposition.

All bets on the fight are declared void, as there has been police interference with the fight, and the conditions that governed the original match have been changed.

Betting on the great event began at Tattersall's, and McAuliffe is the favorite, his fine condition and splendid physique being greatly admired at the Lambeth Police Court.

A WOMAN ORDAINED.

Mrs. Bennett Admitted to the Ministry of the Universalist Church.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Mrs. Ella May Bennett of Stony Brook, L. I., was last night ordained to the ministry of the Universalist Church. The Rev. J. H. Ballou of Southold officiated, and Mrs. Phœbe A. Hanford of the New Haven church preached the ordination sermon. She is the first woman ordained to the ministry on Long Island.

Mrs. Bennett is the mother of three children. She is 35 years of age and wears her black hair cut short. Her father was Daniel Shalor Hawkins, and she was the twelfth of 14 children. She is the only member of the family who is a Universalist. The rest are either Methodists or Baptists.

American Mechanics Elect Officers.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Sept. 25.—At the annual session of the National Council Order of American Mechanics the following officers for the ensuing year were elected: National Councillor, Charles H. Jewett, of Salem, Mass.; vice councillor, Thoms B. Chapman, of New Haven, Conn.; secretary, John Seaver, of Philadelphia; treasurer, Joseph H. Shinn, of Camden, N. J.; marshal, E. E. Hill, of Milford, N. H.; protector, G. D. Ludlam, of Jersey City, N. J.; doorkeeper, John Welty, of Alliance, O. It was voted to hold the next annual session at Troy, N. Y., on the fourth Tuesday in September, 1891.

Ike Weir Fined for Assault.

BOSTON, Sept. 25.—In the Municipal Court here Ike Weir, the Belfast Spider, was arraigned on charges of having evaded carriage fare and with having assaulted Thomas Roberts. Weir showed no signs of the encounter, but Roberts had some ugly black marks on his face. Weir was discharged on the complaint of evading carriage fare, by reason of a variance between the allegation and the proof. On the charge of assaulting Roberts he was fined $25 and costs. He appealed and was held for trial in the higher court.

A New Daily Paper for Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 25.—The publication of a new daily morning paper, to be called the Sun, will be commenced in Pittsburg early in October. It will be an eight-page, seven-column paper, to be sold at two cents. In politics the new journal will be Republican. Its editor will be Mr. C. D. Brigham, one of the best known newspaper men in the country, who has long been identified with Pittsburg papers.

New Dramatic Scheme.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—The Dramatic Development Company has been incorporated here by Edmund C. Stanton, director of the Metropolitan Opera House, William F. G. Shanks, of the Tribune, Louis N. Megarges, manager of the American Literary Association, and others, for the production of dramas before theatrical managers free of cost to the authors.

Refuse to Work With "Q" Engineers.

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—The delayed arrival of Grand Masters Sweeny and Sargent is tending to precipitate a general strike among the Stock Yards Switching Association employes. Six switchmen were discharged during the morning, making 12 in all who have been thrown out of work for refusing to work with "Q" engineers.

Found Dead in Bed.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 25.—During the morning the remains of Wm F. Young, a mechanic employed by the Winchester Arms Co., were discovered lying on the bed in a room in the Merchants Hotel. The man had been dead for two weeks at least in the opinion of the medical examiner.

THE EIGHT HOUR BILL

Shipbuilder Cramp is in Washington to Oppose It.

TROUBLE OVER THE TARIFF BILL

The Conferees Still Divided on Binding Twine and Sugar.

The President and Family Return from Cresson—Mr. Kennedy's Speech Excluded from the Record—Prepayment of Interest by the Treasury Department—Postal Delivery in Small Towns.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Charles H. Cramp, the Philadelphia shipbuilder, is here looking after the prospect of the passage of the Eight-hour bill, which has passed the House and is now pending in the Senate. He is opposed to the bill, as it will affect his firm with Government work.

Although the measure has been scheduled for consideration by the Republican Senatorial caucus, yet the prospects are that it will not be enacted at this session.

The members of the Federation and Knights of Labor have their representatives at work in behalf of the bill, and feel confident that the measure will go through when called up for action in the Senate.

FATE OF THE TARIFF BILL.

Western Senators Fighting Against the Duty on Binding Twine.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—The Republican conferees on the Tariff bill held a meeting during the morning and discussed at some length the differences between the two Houses on the sugar schedule and the duty on binding twine, these being the most material points of difference now existing between the two Houses. No conclusion was reached.

The action of the Western Senators in entering a protest against the proposition to place a small duty on binding twine has complicated matters seriously. A well known Western Senator said that while the Senators who met yesterday afternoon were not bound to stand together on this proposition, there were enough Republican Senators pledged to stand out for free binding twine to make it certain that the conference report would be rejected in the Senate if the Senate conferees agreed to any compromise on this disputed point.

The conferees and other Republicans who are interested in the fate of the bill have used every possible argument with the recalcitrant Senators, but thus far apparently without effect.

The conferees now say that it is almost impossible to come to an agreement unless a compromise is made on binding twine, and that if the conference report should be rejected through the efforts of the friends of free binding twine, Senators who are opposed to other features of the bill will feel at liberty to use the same tactics to obtain other changes, and it will be impossible to pass the Tariff bill.

THE SPEECH EXCLUDED.

Congressman Kennedy's Criticism of Mr. Quay Will Not Appear in the Record.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—In the House Mr. Stewart, of Vermont, from the Committee on Judiciary, reported a resolution directing the public printer to exclude from the Congressional Record the entire speech of Representative Kennedy, of Ohio, made on the 3d of September, criticising Senator Quay.

Mr. Kennedy requested to be heard in his own behalf. At first there was a disposition shown to refuse him this request, but after Mr. Oates of Alabama, said that while he concurred in the report, he thought that the gentleman should be heard and after Mr. Boutelle of Maine declared that it would be an outrage to deny him the request, Mr. Kennedy was accorded the floor for twenty minutes.

Mr. Kennedy said that he had asked the Committee on Judiciary either to let his speech appear in the Record entire or to cut it out entire. He was willing to stand before the people of America on that speech, believing that the people of this country in their first judgment and in their sober second judgment would approve the words he had uttered. He had letters from every section of the land, from Maine to California and from the Lakes to the Gulf, endorsing the word, letter and spirit of his speech. He was willing, he said, to stand before the people of the country and await their endorsement.

The resolution expunging the speech from the Congressional Record was adopted. Yeas, 151; nays, 35.

Elliott Renominated.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—A dispatch from Columbia, S. C., says that Wm. Elliott, who was unseated by the House of Representatives, was renominated by acclamation by the Democrats of his district.

Interest Paid by the Government.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—The prepayment of interest by the Treasury Department to-day for the entire country [illegible] at $20,000.

TIRED OF EXILE.

Absconder Bartholomew's Friends Think He Has Been Sufficiently Punished.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 25.—Efforts are in progress to effect a compromise in the case of George M. Bartholomew, the Hartford capitalist, who, in September, 1886, fled to Canada to escape not only his creditors, but the hand of justice. His defalcations aggregated nearly a million dollars, and investigation showed that he had been on the brink of a financial volcano for two or three years and had resorted to desperate means to save himself.

Some of these measures were so criminal that indictments were brought in the Hartford courts and Bartholomew has been compelled to remain in Canada. He located at Quebec for a time, but subsequently in Montreal for its advantages of speedier mail communication with Hartford and New York. His time has been largely devoted to correspondence with his creditors. It is not generally believed that he had much money when he fled, and the report is that he has been receiving assistance from Cyrus W. Field, of New York, to whom he is related by marriage.

Recently a proposition has been made to settle with his creditors at fifty cents on the dollar, and this has been followed by a petition, which Governor Bulkeley and leading professional and business men have signed, praying for an abandonment of legal proceedings. The petition urges that Bartholomew is 74 years old, in delicate health, and that he has been sufficiently punished by his four years' exile. It will be presented this week to Chief Justice Andrews, with a request to call a special meeting of the judges to consider it. The State Attorney for Hartford County will oppose it.

A SISTER'S CRUELTY.

Michael Grogan of Jersey City Covered With Kerosene and Set on Fire.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Sept. 25.—Michael Grogan, a laborer, is suffering in the city hospital from burns received a week ago. His injuries will prove fatal.

Grogan accuses his sister, Bridget Mehan, of pouring kerosene over his person while he was drunk, and igniting it. While he was enveloped in flame and screaming for help, he says, his sister sat in a corner of the room and laughed at him.

He was assisted to tear off his burning clothes by his nephew and daughter, who were attracted by his cries. His sister has been arrested.

Large Transfer of Timber Lands.

OLEAN, N. Y., Sept. 25.—Perhaps the largest single transfer of Pennsylvania timber lands, in the recent history of that State, has just been consummated in this city, it being the purchase of 18,000 acres of land in Elk County, by S. S. Bullis, of this city, who paid $380,000 for the tract, which was owned jointly by Messrs. J. K. Hall of Ridgeway, Andrew Kaul of St. Mary's and Sampson Short of Northeast, Pa. It is unquestionably the largest and most valuable block of timber stumpage in the Pennsylvania hemlock belt.

A Dangerous Green Goods Man Arrested.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 25.—Jacob Bush, of many aliases, one of the most dangerous "green goods" men in the country, was arrested here and held to await the action of the United States authorities on charges of using the mails for fradulent purposes and attempting to defraud the Government. Two of Bush's victims, who gave their names as John D. Bethia and William Atkinson, merchants, of Marion County, South Carolina, were also taken into custody.

Union Labor Party State Ticket.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 25.—The executive committee of the Union Labor party met in secret session here. When the doors were opened it was announced that it had been decided to place the following ticket in nomination: Governor, Theodore P. Ryuder, of Centre County; Lieutenant Governor, Justus Watson, of Tioga County; Secretary of Internal Affairs, Henry K. Feller, of Blair County. A new executive committee was named and a platform adopted.

Failure of a Large Coal Firm.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 25.—William H. Jourdan & Co., one of the oldest and largest coal firms in this city, made an assignment, liabilities $150,000, assets $154,000. The firm did a business of over $1,000,000 a year previous to the passage of the Interstate Commerce bill, but the passage of this law and bad collections brought about the assignment. The heaviest creditor is said to be the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad.

Roasted to Death by a Gas Explosion.

TREMONT, Pa., Sept. 25.—A violent explosion occurred in the Feger Ridge colliery, near this borough, in the morning. The inside workings were set afire and the force of men had all they could do to extinguish the flames. Thomas Ward of Branchdale was killed by the explosion, having been literally roasted to death. James Lewis and Albert Miller were horribly burned and may die.

Hotel Proprietors Assign.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 25.—Crowley & Smith, proprietors of the Hotel Carleton, have made a general assignment to Edward J. Colesworth, and the papers were filed at the City Hall. Their indebtedness is said to amount to about $10,000.

The Carbrey-Longnecker Jury Disagree.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 25.—In the suit of Robert T. Carbrey vs. Edwin Longnecker, lieutenant commander of the United States Naval Station, for $10,000 damages for imprisonment after the plaintiff had been discharged from the navy, the jury disagreed after being out over six hours. They stood seven to five in favor of the defendant.

EIGHT MORE GAMES

The Struggle on the Diamond Nearly Finished.

BROOKLYN AND BOSTON LEAD.

Louisville Sure of the Pennant in the Association Race.

Ewing's Giants Defeated by the Bisons. Ward Wins at Pittsburg—Mutrie's Men Capture a Fine Game at Cleveland. Anson's Colts Defeated by the Phillies. Comiskey Back in Fourth Place.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Nothing short of a miracle can prevent the Brooklyn team from winning the National League championship. Each club has eight more games to play.

The Western clubs, by winning seven of these from Brooklyn, would pull the latter's percentage down to .621. During that time the Chicagos would have to win seven games, which would place their percentage at .623. This would give the championship to Chicago by two points.

If the Brooklyns lost every game the Chicagos could lose two and yet win. No such finish is expected, but it shows the only way by which the Brooklyns can lose the pennant. It might be that the Chicagos could take six out of the remaining eight games. She has two games to play with the Philadelphias, and three each with the Boston and New York clubs. The Brooklyns are playing in Cincinnati. They play two more games there, and then meet the Pittsburgs and the Clevelands for three games each.

QUESTIONING CANDIDATES.

Gov. Brackett Replies to a Letter Sent by the Clothing Cutters' Union.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 25.—In reply to the recent letter to gubernatorial candidates of John Crowley, secretary of the Executive Board of Clothing Operatives' National Union, Gov. Brackett writes that, if elected, he shall recommend that the Legislature investigate the allegation that the New York tenement house clothing manufacturing system is injurious to Massachusetts workmen and menacing to the health of our people.

In reply to the question as to whether or not he would order the State Board of Health to prohibit the sale in Boston of such tenement made clothing, the Governor says he is advised that the power to effect such prohibition rests only with the Board of Health of the city of Boston. If it is shown that these goods are liable to spread the germs of disease, the Legislature will doubtless enact measures necessary to mitigate the evil, which measures he should exert his authority to enforce.

Found Hanging by His Sister.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 25.—Nicholas Lynch, of No. 69 Colden street, was found hanging to the transom of the parlor door of his residence last night by his sister. She at once cut the body down and summoned medical aid. The man was alive when the physicians arrived, but despite their exertions, he died without regaining consciousness. Lynch was a young man and had only recently married. No cause can be assigned for the rash act.

The Baltimore to Go to China.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—The published report to the effect that the United States steamer Baltimore is on her way home is incorrect. The vessel will proceed to Lisbon, as originally intended, and there await orders. As yet no orders have been decided upon, but it is probable that she will be sent to the China station as the flagship of that squadron.

Corbin's New Railroad.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 25.—Austin Corbin is here in conference with local capitalists concerning the proposed railroad from Watertown to Camden, to connect with the Elmira, Cortland & Northern. A committee was appointed to prepare a plan for the formal organization of the company. The road will be sixty miles long and will cost about $1,000,000.

Compte De Paris Coming.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 25.—The Comte de Paris, accompanied by the Duc d'Orleans and suite, sailed by the Germanic.

—It is understood that in addition to George Gore of the professional league, the Somervilles have hired for next Saturday, Gil Hatfield, the famous New York short stop, —The sale of Joseph Odam's interest in the property at 104 Jackson avenue, North Plainfield, adjourned from last Thursday, will take place Saturday afternoon on the premises, at two o'clock.

—Tonight commencing at 8 o'clock Donald Downie will give his great illustrated lecture on Japan in the Warren Mission chapel. Over one hundred beautiful colored views and splendid mechanical effects will be used. Mr. Downie furnishes the highest testimonials from the press and pulpit and those who hear him cannot be disappointed.

—Yom Kippur, the Jewish Day of Atonement, the most sacred of days in the Mosaic calendar, was celebrated by the orthodox Jews throughout the World yesterday with fasting and prayer in their synagogues all day long. Although the Jewish population of Plainfield is not large the fact that the day was a Hebrew holiday was noticeable on account of the Jewish stores being closed.

—New Jersey will vote on two proposed amendments to the State Constitution September 30. One of these amendments cancels the prohibition against special legislation regulating the internal affairs of towns and counties, and the other eliminates the clause in reference to the appointment of Judges of the Court of Common Pleas. New Jersey will elect a new Legislature and seven Congressmen Nov. 4.

—The Hotel Mail, New York's bright journal of hotel news, has concluded its twenty-fifth volume, and has entered on the second quarter of its century of life. It is the oldest, most influential and most widely quoted paper of its class, and its success must be highly gratifying to the men whose brains and energies have developed it. The able editor is D. N. Thayer, and the wide-awake business manager is A. J. Leader, of North Plainfield.

—Percy Denton, who is the interlocuter and stage manager of the Cleveland company that appears at Music Hall this evening, is one of the rising young men of the profession and thoroughly deserves his success. He came to this country from England a few years ago with lots of money inherited through a long line of blue-blooded ancestors. Unfortunate investment in a Western ranch threw him on his own resources, but in three years his indomitable will, earnest effort and brilliant parts have placed him on high as an executive man and an artist in his line.

They Appreciate Good Treatment but Can't Afford to Pay League Salaries Any Longer.

The following letter was read at a meeting of the Crescent League, last evening, and received with much gratification:

UNION LEAGUE CLUB,
Somerville, N. J.

Mr. Charles A. Reed, President:

Your favor of the 22d inst. was brought before our meeting held this evening, and I was instructed to inform you that the sentiment of the members present was unanimously against any change of schedule or that any games be added to the schedule already arranged. We feel indebted to your organization for the gentlemanly treatment received in the present series and trust that it will continue through the games which we hope to arrange in the future.

Yours truly,
J. E. BROKAW, Sec.

Renewing the Work for Draughtsmen.

Classes in mechanical drawing will be organized at the Young Men's Christian Association rooms, Tuesday evening, October 14. Messrs C. J. Robertson and A. J. Gavett will again teach these classes, which have been so eminently successful in past years. The classes of last Spring will have an opportunity to continue their study, and a new class will be organized for the benefit of beginners, or any who have been irregular in their attendance.

The regular $2 membership fee in the Young Men's Christian Association entitles to the above and all other privileges of the association.

Mr. Linke Takes His Medicine.

Frank Linke this morning paid the fine of $25 imposed on him by City Judge Codington for selling liquor to a minor, and stated that he had decided not to appeal the case to the higher courts.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Walter Murray, youngest son of John W. Murray, has gone to Yale.

James Allen Sangston returned this afternoon from his trip to the Adirondacks.

Mrs. D. C. Skaden, of East Sixth street, returned yesterday, with her young son, from an extended Summer outing.

A. D. Mallinson and family left town today for a two weeks' sojourn at Mamaroneck, Westchester county, N. Y.

James T. Closson has purchased the property adjoining him on East Front street, corner of Sandford avenue, for $9,000.

Gen. Schwenk, of the Holly Grove farm, is among the principal exhibitors of choice Jersey cattle at the State fair at Waverly.

Mrs. Jacob Blimm of Somerset street, returned home last Tuesday after a week's visit among friends in Freeport, Long Island.

Mr. and Mrs Charles H. Pellletrau have invited their friends to a wedding reception tendered their daughter and Dr. Charles B. Thiers of this city. The affair will take place Thursday evening, Oct. 9, at 306 Livingston street, Brooklyn.

Firman H. Long, of Martinville, and Katie, daughter of the late Wm. Zimmerman of Washington Valley, were married last week Wednesday, the Rev. Geo Bowers officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Long have begun housekeeping in Plainfield.

The Chimney Rock correspondent of The Somerset Messenger says that W. A. Coddington, of Plainfield, last Sunday resigned the superintendency of the Chimney Rock chapel, "his business compelling him to give up the position he has so faithfully filled the last five years. We regret to lose him and we hope the future Chief Justice will always bear in kind remembrance the humble school over which he once presided. Lawyer Fred H. Cook succeeds him here."

Plainfielders Help Dedicate the Handsome New Chapel at Chimney Rock.

At the recent meeting of the Union Chapel Association at Chimney Rock, Fred. H. Cook and Ransom Lamb were elected Trustees for three years. The Board organized with W. A. Coddington, of Plainfield, as President, F. H. Cook, Secretary and F. N. Voorhees, Treasurer. In the two years since the chapel was built the debt of $1,300 has been reduced to $500, all outside expenses have been paid to date and there is a balance in hand of $54.

The dedication of the neat little chapel was witnessed by a large assembly last Sunday. The interior was handsomely decorated, and the bright sunshine lighting up the surrounding scenery made all seem in unison with the happy hearts of the people present. Addresses were made by the Revs. J. B. Cleaver, of Plainfield, and W. W. Jordan, of Bound Brook, Wm. H. Ayers, Chas. M. Nabb, Geo. La Monte, W. B. R. Mason, S B. Dunning and others. The stirring speeches made a marked impression upon all. Gov. Brown prepared the masonry, the Rev. W. W. Jordan laid the corner stone, the benediction was invoked by the Rev. J. B. Cleaver, and all joined in singing "Old Hundred."

At Music Hall Tonight.

The receipts the past season of W. S. Cleveland's two minstrel companies were $575,000—just think of it, over half a million dollars in a little over ten months! $90,000 was paid for railroad transportation.

W. S. Cleveland has paid William Emerson $25,000 in salary during the past ten months.

Barney Fagan, the most prolific of all minstrel "producers," is one of the numerous distinguished recruits enrolled with the Cleveland Consolidated Minstrel forces. It is understood that his salary is in the lingo of the profession, "away up in G," but as he is very popular with the minstrelsy-patronizing public, and consequently a strong drawing card, Mr. Cleveland will have no reason to regret the investment. Contracts with electric supply houses, costumers and scenic artists, amounting to over fifteen thousand dollars, have already been let for Mr. Fagan's two productions.

The Mail Cart Wobbles Now.

Edward Martin, the man who transports the mail pouches from the North avenue railroad station to the post office, was energetically pushing the mail cart, heavily laden with its accustomed early morning burden, around the corner of North and Park avenues, at six o'clock this A. M., when the wheels, like the famous "one-hoss shay" described by Dr. Holmes, fell to pieces, "all at oncet." The sudden fall of the wagon and its load took Mr. Martin so completely by surprise that he was thrown to the pavement and tangled up among the debris. Beyond the soiling of his new Autumnal trousers, however, he was uninjured. The fractured wheels were patched up, and did wobbling service all day. They will be replaced by wheels which follow a straight and true track.

Mrs. Hess Swears That Her Story is True.

Mrs. Henry Hess this morning appeared before Justice Hardy of North Plainfield and swore out a complaint against her husband on the charge of attempted murder, thus taking oath to the story that she had already told the Court, and which was published exclusively in THE PRESS of Tuesday evening. A warrant for the arrest of Hess was promptly issued.

HYMENEAL.

Halsted—Osgood.

On Tuesday, at 12 o'clock noon, was celebrated the marriage of Miss Eleanor Gertrude Osgood, niece of Frank M. Derby, of this city, to Frank Ryder Halsted of Brooklyn. The best man was his brother, Frederick Halsted. Dr. W. H. Shepard and Frank Olney were the ushers. The ceremony was performed in St. Mark's church, Brooklyn, by the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Roach. Following the ceremony, was luncheon at the future home of the young couple in Willoughby avenue, to their immediate relatives A number of Plainfield people were present at the ceremony.

Kulp—Voehl.

Miss Auguste Voehl, one of the twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Voehl, was married at six o'clock last evening to John Kulp, at the residence of the bride's parents, 65 Somerset street. The Rev. C. B. Mitchell officiated. Only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom witnessed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Kulp will live at Bergen Point, where the groom has purchased a bakery. They have the good wishes of a large circle of friends.

The Enemy's View of It.

(From the Somerville Messenger.)

About 2,000 anxious people, with but a single thought—who will win it?—witnessed the second of the West End-Crescent games on Saturday, at Plainfield. The first game had been won by the West Ends on the previous Saturday, at Somerville. That was not enough; to defeat the Crescents on their own diamond was the aim of the West Ends. At a sacrifice of even public belief in them for just and honest treatment did the Crescents try to prevent it. The manner in which the West Ends had pounded the leather around the field taught the Crescents that they must improve their battery. To do that was their privilege, but their manner of doing it is very questionable.

They engaged Doran of New Haven, the crack pitcher of the Atlantic Association, and by some method or means Tom O'Rourke, the West Ends' first baseman and a heavy hitter, was induced to catch Doran, and only the day before the game Manager Mack received notice that O'Rourke was not to play with the West Ends. Such manipulation as that could only be condemned, and the justice-loving members of the Crescent League (and they are not a few) joined in denouncing a course so absolutely unwarranted. The explanation offered was that Doran had agreed to bring a catcher, and that it was not known to be O'Rourke until too late to remedy the wrong. This may be true.

The manager of the West Ends was, however, equal to the occasion, and, to the surprise of many, who should show up in the left field for the West Ends but George Gore of the New Yorks, Galligan in right and Bergen on first base. Oh, what a fall (of hope) was there, my countrymen!

The Recent Unprecedented Rainfall.

The precipitation in all parts of the State for the week ending Sept. 17, was above the weekly average, and in a few localities exceeded the normal for the whole month of September, which is 3.89 inches. This normal for the month would not be so high but for the remarkably heavy downpours which occurred in September, 1874 and 1882, when the total for the month at New Brunswick, Middlesex county, was in the former year (1874) 8.61 inches; of this amount 7.10 inches fell on the 15th to 18th inclusive, and in the latter year (1882) 15.52 inches fell; of this amount 11.84 inches fell on the 20th to 23d inclusive. At this time, also, the unprecedented September fall of 25 inches occurred at Paterson, Passaic county. Some idea may be obtained of the vast amount of water which feel when it is known that "an inch of rainfall means a gallon of water spread over a surface of two square feet, or a fall of about one hundred tons on an acre of ground."

The following are the total rainfalls reported in inches for the week spoken of:

| | Inches |
|---|---|
| Plainfield, Union county | 4 41 |
| Highland Park, Middlesex county | 5 27 |
| Beverly, Burlington county | 2 21 |
| South Orange, Essex county | 3 43 |
| Trenton, Mercer county | 3 19 |
| Gillette, Morris county | 3 27 |
| Woodbury, Gloucester county | 1 95 |
| Madison, Morris county | 3 26 |
| Tenafly, Bergen county | 2 84 |
| Egg Harbor City, Atlantic county | 5 15 |
| Bridgeton, Cumberland county | 2 50 |

The Crescent City Chosen for Their Convention.

Plainfield has been chosen by the Union County Union of the Young People's Societies for Christian Endeavor as the place for the next annual meeting of the Union, which will be held Friday, October 10.

A Large Estate.

A broad land is this in which we live, dotted so thickly with thrifty cities, towns and villages! Amid them all, with ever-increasing popularity and helpfulness, is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, giving hope and cheer where there is disease and despair. Wherever there is humanity there is suffering; wherever there is suffering there is the best field for this greatest American Remedy. Consumption (which is lung-scrofula), yields to it, if employed in the early stages of the disease; Chronic Nasal Catarrh, yields to it; Kidney and Liver diseases, yield to it! If you want the best known remedy for all diseases of the blood, ask for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and take no other. It is guaranteed to cure in all cases of diseases for which it is recommended, or money refunded.

A Plainfielder Tells How He Handled a Gila Monster.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Your recent account of Mr. Vail's experience with a gila monster doubtless has aroused a local interest regarding these reptiles I regret that I can impart no information regarding their family name, the size which they attain or their habits of life, save a slight personal experience and tradition; but slight as my knowledge is I feel sure it will be favorably received, and further information can probably be obtained from Mr. Vail, who no doubt has become sufficiently interested to inquire into the antecedents of his late intimate acquaintance. I did not succeed in finding Mr. Gila Monster's name in Webster's directory, from which it is reasonable to conclude that he has evaded the canvassers or that he traveled under an alias; nor do I believe he or his family were included in the Porter census, but as one Gila Monster has taken up residence in Central Park, that oversight will probably be remedied in the recount by which New York is going to show that the census enumerators have beaten themselves out of quite a little money.

Mr. Gila Monster, having received his first alias from the Gila River, is entitled to a capital G, but not being a monster at all his last nom de plume should be spelled with a small m. I have seen about fifty of him, and he was always about a foot long. He was always attired in an orange livery, with about a spade or club straight flush of irregular black blotches, and strolled along with a don't-monkey-with-me sort of air. One of him crawled out his box in a cigar store one day, and the proprietor offered a box of cigars to any one who would put him in again, but he could not have been shunned more successfully had he been a book canvasser. I, however, was not going to let any one-foot "monster" stand between me and the only chance I ever had in my life of getting a whole box of cigars, so I adjourned to the nearest blacksmith shop and borrowed a long pair of tongs, with which I handled Mr. Gila Monster with much ease and personal comfort, winning, by my inventive genius, a whole box of cigars and eternal freedom from the hateful appelation of "tenderfoot."

There are those who contend that a Gila Monster's bite is harmless, but I never saw any one who so contended who was willing to give a practical demonstration of his theory, although fully aware that a Gila Monster's bite entitles the bitee to an unlimited whiskey license. I never before heard of but one man who was bitten—a saloon keeper; and there was no bad effect in that case except that the Gila Monster became bestially intoxicated.

Notes of the New York Theatres.

The importance of the drama in the daily existence of New Yorkers is well illustrated in the number of columns devoted to things theatrical by all of the metropolitan dailies. Each paper makes a special feature of theatrical gossip and the sayings and doings in and about the playhouses are eagerly sought for and printed and as eagerly read. Inasmuch as the average New Yorker finds the most of his recreation within the walls of the theatre the prominence given theatrical items by the press of the great city is not at all surprising.

Jerome K. Jerome has been declared by the metropolitan press the coming playwright. His "Maister of Woodbarrow" is crowding the Lyceum Theatre at each performance. Prior to the production of the play at the Lyceum, Mr. Jerome was almost unknown, his dramatic efforts having been confined to writing one-act curtain-raisers. In these he has been highly successful in London.

"A High Roller" is the fetching title of the spectacular farce comedy which Clay M. Greene is now constructing for Barney Fagan and Bob Slavin, who are to discard minstrelsy next season and enter the legitimate field of amusements under the guidance of Managers E. G. Gilmore and Alex. Comstock of the Academy of Music, New York.

The Liliputians have come, have been seen and have conquered. The big city has been taken by storm. Such a peculiarly bewildering display of scenic extravagance and splendor, introducing a company of principals, the oddest ever seen, has never before been presented at a public exhibition in America. Notwithstanding that the prices at Niblo's have been almost doubled, the advance sale for the Liliputians' engagement is startling. All hail to the wee Thespians!

Since its first presentation, the "Old Homestead," which returns to the Academy, New York, October 6, for another year, has been produced over 1,000 times; the books show a total attendance during that period of over 2,000,000 souls, an average of 2,700 persons daily. The total receipts to date amount to considerably over a million dollars. Divide the net receipts of the play to date among the few persons interested, and each has a fortune. It surpasses the record of any play that has ever been presented, not only in this country but the whole world.

A Barn Burned at New Market.

Fire on Nelson Blackford's farm near New Market yesterday afternoon destroyed the barn and all its contents. Besides the building, Mr. Blackford loses ten tons of hay on which there was no insurance. The barn was insured for $250. The tenant loses his wagon and carpentry tools.

—The regular mid-week meeting of the Reform Club will be held this evening at 8 o'clock. A welcome is extended to all.

HOW TO PERFECT OUR ROADS.

Interesting Counsel Which Local Highway Menders May Heed With Profit.

Now that the public highways in this section are receiving such conspicuous attention it may not be inappropriate to publish the following hints on good road making, which are condensed from a circular issued by the Roads Improvement Association of London, an organization formed to distribute matter for the education of local highway authorities, road contractors and others, on the proper construction, maintenance, and repair of highways.

Never allow a hollow, a rut, or a puddle—such as even Plainfield's streets have an abundance of—to remain on a road, but fill it up at once with "chips" from the stone heap. Always use "chips" for patching, and for all repairs during the Summer months. Never put fresh stones on the road if by cross-picking and a thorough use of the rake the surface can be made smooth and kept at the proper strength of section. The rake is the most useful tool in your collection, and it should be kept close at hand the whole year round. Never spread large patches of stone over the whole width of the road, but coat the middle or horse track first, and, when this has worn in, coat each of the sides in turn. In moderately dry weather, and on hard roads, always pick up the old surface into ridges six inches apart, and remove all large and projecting stones before applying a new coating. Never spread stones more that one stone deep, but add a second layer when the first has worn in, if one coating be not enough. Use a steel-pronged fork to load the barrows at the stone heap, so that the siftings may be available for binding and for Summer repairs. Never shoot stones on to the road and crack them where they lie, or a smooth surface will be out of the question. Go over the whole of the new coating every day or two with the rake, and never leave the stones in ridges. Never put a stone upon a road for repairing puposes that will not pass freely in every direction through a two-inch ring, and remember that still smaller stones should be used for patching and for all slight repairs. Hard stone should be broken to a finer guage than soft, but the two-inch guage is the largest that should be employed under any circumstances. Never be without your ring guage. It should be to the roadman what the compass is to the mariner, and if you have no ring guage, remember Macadam's advice that any stone you cannot easily put in your mouth should be broken smaller. Use nothing but chips for binding newly laid stones together, and remember that road sweepings, horse droppings, sods of grass, and other rubbish, when used for this purpose, will ruin the best made road.

Water-worn or rounded stones should never be used upon steep grades, or they will fail to bind together.

Never allow dust or mud to lie on the surface of the road, for either of these will double the cost of maintenance. Dust becomes mud at the first shower, and mud—as Plainfielders all know by experience—forms a wet blanket which will keep a road in a filthy condition for weeks at a time, instead of allowing it to dry in a few hours. See that all sweepings and scrapings are put into heaps and carted away immediately.

The middle of the road should always be a little higher than the sides, so that the rain may run into the side-gutters at once. Never allow the water-tables, gutters, and ditches to clog up, but keep them clear the whole year through. Always be upon your road in wet weather, and at once fill up with "chips" any hollows or ruts where the rain may lie. When the main coatings of stone have worn in, go over the whole road, and, gathering together all the loose stones—which even in Plainfield are too infrequently left lying on the surface—return them to the stone heap for use in the Winter to follow; for loose stones are a source of danger and annoyance, and should never be allowed to lie on any road.

Wm. M. Sandford and wife to Jeremiah Manning, land on southeast side of Third street, Plainfield, 50x156, $1.

Broke His Neck.

Wm. Hall, of Fanwood, broke his neck yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, and died two hours after. The unfortunate man was a carpenter and at work on the roof of John Waterson's house at Cranford. He fell twenty-five feet to the ground.

FOR THOSE WHO GRIEVE.

What is Good and What is Bad Form in Mourning Costumes.

There is no more glaring violation of good tastes in dress possible than an elaborate or much-trimmed mourning gown. It stamps its wearer at once as certainly ignorant, very possibly vulgar. The style follows closely the quietest shapes of the day. Thus for the street a long-waisted bodice, very possibly seamless with the fullness plainly gathered in front instead of being confined with ribbon or buckel, and a skirt with undraped back and having the front either straight also or with long Greek apron, slightly caught up on the left side. Such a skirt may be bordered, if wished, with a deep crape band.

At any fashionable milliner's will be found a variety of mourning hats and bonnets, and the straining after effect in them quite as marked as in gayer plumage. This does not apply, of course, to the first bonnet worn by the widow, which carries the vail. This vail, the doctors say, is a most unwholesome piece of drapery, and assuredly it is wearisome because so heavy. Its length in fashionable circles is carefully graduated according to whether it is worn by a widow or a mother who has lost a child. The tendency at present is to substitute nun's vailing for crape as its material, and for summer, certainly, the change is commendable. A bonnet that is to be vailed must have a low, flat crown, and in spite of the fact that a few black-headed pins and a fold here and there are all that is necessary, the arrangement of a vail to form a becoming back-ground for the face is a good deal of an art and one to which is given more and more attention, only the best milliners in good establishments being allowed to touch the drapery. Strings for the mourning bonnet, if of crape, are silk-lined. Sometimes broad ribbons are used and sometimes narrow bridles.

Mourning for young girls should be of the simplest always and not too heavy. It injures the health and spirits, and no one has a right to keep them under a cloud. For toddling children mourning-dress is nothing short of heathenish.

The mourning gloves are undressed kids, but these seldom wear well, and dressed kids are frequently substituted. A handkerchief with a simple black monogram is better than the bordered varieties, while as for the woman who sends black-bordered paper and envelopes through the mail, she ought to be stopped by an injunction. To wear black corsets and lingerie is overstepping the mark altogether, and suggests a luxury of grief that is as far removed from genuine affliction as possible. One is not called on to believe in heart-break when a woman finds her tearful eyes relieved if they rest on mourning draperies in her boudoir. It lessen's one's respect for a woman if she finds black sheets contributing to her peace of mind.—Chicago Times.

DEALS IN IDEAS.

Odd Business by Which a New Yorker Makes a Good Living.

There is, in an office building uptown in New York, a gentleman with a serene and humorous cast of face, an erect figure and a smile that is as much identified with his countenance as are his drooping glasses and elusive blonde mustache. His name is James Goodwin, and he is a creator of ideas. He sells the ideas in the rough, makes a capital living, and works on contentedly without a trace of yearning for fame, yet the fame many caricaturists and artists in New York belongs by right to him. Artists and newspaper illustrators are almost entirely destitute of humor, taken all in all, although there are one or two exceptions. The majority of them have the ability to draw clevery, but the inventive and humorous faculties are not included in their mental and artistic make-up. These men Mr. Goodwin supplies with ideas. His sketches are made roughly on paper and forwarded to different artists regularly every day. This week no less than nine pictures in the current issues of the comic papers were inspired by the creator of ideas, although they are all signed by the names of prominent caricaturists in very large, black and prominent letters. Mr. Goodwin declares, by the way, that the artists lack assurance more than ability, and that if they only knew the trick they could create an idea as easily as he does it for them. But they do not seem able to find the Goodwin secret.—N. Y. Letter.

The Gold in a Gold Dollar.

Director Leach, of the mint, thus writes to the Philadelphia North American: "The amount of pure silver in the standard silver dollar has not been changed since we first began coining. The quantity of pure gold to the dollar, as fixed by the act of 1792, was 24.75 grains, the ratio in coinage being 15 to 1. By the act of June 28, 1834, the pure gold was reduced from 24.75 to 23.20 grains to the dollar, the ratio between gold and silver in coinage being 1 to 16.002. By the act of January 18, 1837, the fineness of the gold coins was increased about three-fourths of one thousandth by changing from standard of .899225 to .900, which increased the pure gold in a dollar from 23.20 to 23.22 grains, at which it has remained up to the present time. The ratio between the two metals in coinage was fixed by this act at 1 to 15.988, at which it still remains."

—The increase noted in leprosy in the West Indies is attributed to the fact that lepers are permitted to walk about without restraint, to beg, and to mix with healthy people. In the four years following 1878 twenty-two deaths from leprosy were registered there, while thirty-four deaths occurred in the three years preceding 1888.

—A pack of hyenas is reported by the Indian papers to have appeared near Monghyr. The animals are making great depredations. One night a child of about two years of age was carried away. In the morning the head and two hands were found.

Midsummer.

The summer solstice melts the morn
To dewy vapor, and a haze
Dreams in the light of sultry days;
The heart of June is gone.

The early chirper in the woods
Forgets its virgin song, and nests
Once filled with fledgling yellow breasts
Shelter no more their broods.

The floral blooms of skyey blues,
The dainty asphodels—the mixes
Of meadow tints, have shed their smiles,
And lost their perfect hues;

Existence waits with burning breath,
And strains to catch the upland winds;
The parched earth, furnace-heated—pines
Beneath the dome of death.

Unveiled, the drooping grasses swoon:
The day is burdened; nature bears
Its cross, and pants; the ripe sun glares:
It is the year's high noon!
—Stephen H. Thayer, in Christian at Work.

Unfreezable Dynamite.

This invention is due to Herr Edward Liebert, Berlin, and it consists in adding a small percentage of a chemical ingredient either to the nitroglycerine or to the dynamite itself. Having, says Iron, so recently pointed out the dangers attendant upon the operation of thawing dynamite, because that operation is so seldom carried out in a proper manner, we need not now dwell upon the subject. We will only observe that the reports of H. M. inspectors of explosives show that the most fruitful source of accidents with dynamite is the thawing of the cartridges, which freeze at the comparatively high temperature of about forty degrees Fahr. The ingredient added by Liebert does not commence to freeze at thirty-five degrees below zero, and it in no way detracts from the strength of the dynamite to which it is added. On the contrary, it slightly increases its effective power, being in itself explosive. The unfreezable dynamite is also said to be somewhat less sensitive to concussion than ordinary dynamite. Sir Henry Roscoe, F. R. S., has subjected unfreezable dynamite to exceedingly low temperature, and he reports that Liebert's invention "is of great value and importance, as rendering solidification practically impossible, and therefore greatly diminishing the liability to chance explosion, by avoiding the well-known danger incurred in melting the frozen nitroglycerine." We are glad to notice the advent of such an invention, the public importance of which can not be overrated.

Paralyzed!

How often do we hear of persons being suddenly stricken with paralysis? But such persons, although apparently stricken suddenly, had in all cases been warned for months by premonitory symptoms, which, if they had heeded and cured by the proper remedy, would have prevented the fatal result. Paralysis is often curable, but it can always be prevented if taken in time.

Among the first symptoms will be noticed a nervousness or restlessness with weak and tired feeling in the limbs and general sense of exhaustion; any unwonted exertion will be followed by great fatigue, and the weakness will be very marked. These symptoms will often be accompanied by feeling in the head, and the person often wakes each morning more tired and languid than on retiring. As the diseases progresses there will be a coldness, numbness and bad circulation in the feet and limbs, followed, after a time, by a slight numbness or tingling, at first hardly noticeable, but gradually becoming more and more marked. Among the first symptoms, also, are a weakness, tired feeling or trembling of the limbs, with an exhausted sensation.

A Marvellous Cure of Paralysis.

This certifies that I was stricken with paralysis of the left side in 1866; and have since that time been under the treatment of many physicians and tried various remedies. I could not, in all the years that have passed since stricken, lift my left foot from the floor. I commenced taking Dr. Greene's Nervura, and am now able to walk without a cane, having good use of my foot and side, so long useless. Dr. Greene's Nervura has cured me of my terrible trouble.

ALEXANDER HORN,
Marine Asylum, Philadelphia, Pa.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 21st day of December, A. D., 2887.
J. S. PHILLIPS, Notary Public.

Another Remarkable Cure.

I had a stroke of paralysis. The suffering I endured was unbearable. My speech was impaired, my mouth drawn to one side, and the pains in my head were maddening. I used Dr. Greene's Nervura, and before I had used a bottle I felt a marked improvement, and now I feel myself again. It gives me great pleasure to recommend all troubled with nervous complaints, or any similar affliction to mine, to use this really wonderful medicine. Dr. Greene's Nervura.

PAULINE ROE,
806 7th ave., New York city.

Proofs like these are an almost certain guarantee that all similarly affected can be cured by this wonderful remedy. Be not hesitate for a moment when perfect restoration to health is within reach. By no means neglect the first symptoms, for they surely lead to prostration and paralysis. Save yourself from the terrible disease while there is time. If you are suffering from any nervous disease, like nervousness, nervous and physical exhaustion, sleeplessness, nervous debility, mental depression, neuralgia nervous or sick headache, heart disease, dyspepsia, indigestion, loss of appetite, or weakness and debility, by all means use this wonderful remedy and prevent a serious or fatal issue. Dr. Greene's Nervura is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless, and is for sale at druggists for $1.00 per bottle.

Dr. Greene of 35 West Fourteenth street, New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write him about your case.

RICH AND PRETTY GIRLS.

Pen Pictures of Some of the Daughters of Michigan Statesmen.

General Alger Has an Interesting Pair of Girls—Senator McMillan's Pretty Daughter—A Michigan Girl at the Russian Court.

[COPYRIGHT, 1890.]
[Special Correspondence.]

"I'LL you excuse me if I sit in my shirt sleeves?" And the daughter of Ambition, as personified in the person of Russell A. Alger, of Michigan, gives an emphatic toss to her pink, silken blazer, which carries it to the ignominious seclusion of a trunk bottom.

It is reasonable to remain at home, when the thermometer is trifling with the affection of the nineties; but from a girl's standpoint such reasoning is not reasonable, and to enjoy is to flit. Hence the position in the foreground of our picture of a cavernous trunk, and unlimited girlish fripperies.

As to other accessories, be kind enough to imagine a faint odor of violets, swaying muslin draperies and that delirious and formidable confusion of "things" which render so delightful the summer room of our summer girl. The walls breathe hints of sojourns by sea and mountain side. In a corner, from amid some dainty water-color sketches, the photograph of General Sherman looms up very much as a rugged old rock rears itself from amid surrounding greeneries. The scrawl beneath it, you will observe, bears the General's signature. A severe little writing-desk indicates a lavish waste of gray matter in somebody's brain. It is here that Miss Fay Alger serves her mind, done to a turn, and garnished by one of Uncle Sam's beautiful red postage stamps.

Just at present she is perched humming-bird fashion upon the arm of a huge cane rocker, busily fanning herself with a very natty sailor hat. It is the moment of moments in which to steal her portrait. Evolution may cause monkeys to resemble closely Herbert Spencers, but all the mannish shirts and four-in-hand ties turned out by retailers could not bestow a masculine air upon Miss Alger. She is too distinctly feminine. And what nicer thing can be said of her?

Miss Fay Alger is the eldest unmarried daughter of General Alger. Perhaps just here we might observe, parenthetically, that the hazy perspective of my sketch discloses "un Mariage D'Amour." She is not beautiful. She is, however, so distinctly pretty in a characteristic fashion peculiar to the Alger girls, that we immediately decide prettiness to be more seductive than beauty.

She is an edition de lux of the society girl. Has perhaps inherited the politician's charm of being "all things to all men"—and women. Her dark, brown eyes regard frankly the world at large, and her red curved lips naively disclose in smiling a pretty set of teeth. She is of medium height, but, being rather slight, impresses one with a belief in several more inches than she possesses.

General Alger's eldest daughter, Carrie, is the wife of Harry Sheldon, the son of one of our Michig an millionaire merchant pioneers. She makes her home in Detroit. The second, Miss Fay Alger, we have already described. The third, and younger, Miss Frances, is to be a debutante of the coming season. She closely resembles her sisters, possessing in common with them that well-bred, well-groomed look so characteristic of American girls of the upper classes and so highly indicative of a refined mother's presence upon the domestic stage.

MISS M'MILLAN.

Where is Don M. Dickinson this summer?

If you wish to join a certain inner circle of rusticity, take a certain crazy little steamer leaving Detroit daily, and after various tiltings and lurchings you will at last find yourself alongside of an equally crazy little pier, cherished as a curio and antique by dwellers on Grosse Isle. Multiply nine miles of quiet by two of comfort, and you have this island.

Here Don M. Dickinson and family are enjoying the ephemeral beauties of the summer days of 1890. It is all delightfully primitive — perhaps no place more so—from the afore mentioned insane little steamer to the negligee assumed by our erstwhile Postmaster-General.

It would remind some of the girl who said she liked to be engaged because it would be such fun to break it off. The chief pleasure in being there would be, to such ill-regulated persons, the ability to come away again.

Well! Good-bye to Grosse Isle and a glance at Detroit's amateurish Newport—Grosse Pointe.

Surrounded by rolling green lawns, tennis courts, palms and blossoming hedges, here stands the summer home of Michigan's Senator, James McMillan. Its russet tints are thrown out effectively by the contrasting blue of July skies.

Close to the pier, in sight from its piazzas, lie a number of gay steam launches dipping about merrily in the waters of Lake St. Clair, and with them the yachts Lela and Truant.

Upon the shining deck of the latter may be often seen a slender, refined-looking girl with a demure, fresh face and modest manners.

Her yachting suit clings affectionately to the person of Senator McMillan's only daughter, Miss Amy McMillan. The white yachting cap covers a small, elegantly-shaped head. The brown eyes express a quiet enjoyment of life which has been in their owner's possession just twenty-one years. Sedate, reticent, simple in manner, Miss McMillan is utterly unspoiled by her host of admirers.

Down in the distant city, shut up in the old ivy-mantled town house, amid the Corots, Fortunys, Heniers, Geromes and Viberts, which add color to the walls of the darkened rooms, hangs the portrait of a very singular girl face. It is that of Grace McMillan Jarvis, the eldest daughter of Senator McMillan. Before this portrait flowers placed as before a shrine tell the tale. It is one familiar enough—an association of wedding bells with a fast following funeral knell.

In the Grosse Pointe nursery, with its walls as blue as a robin's egg, sleeps the Senator's little grandchild, not the least of her inheritance being the name of her mother—Grace McMillan Jarvis. One of Detroit's large hospitals—Grace—is an In Memoriam royal indeed, and one which occupies much of Senator McMillan's time and interest.

On the deck of the Truant besides Miss McMillan one may often see another of Michigan's greatest heiresses, Miss Helen Newberry, the only daughter of ex-Congressman Newberry.

Her white yachting suit clings to the form of a nineteenth century Venus. This is a distinction with a very wide difference, for who would gaze for a moment on an antique Venus nowadays?

Her figure proclaims her a devotee of physical culture, and so she is. Her light brown hair is ruffled with the lake breezes, and gray eyes look from a face of tan. Tennis player, swimmer and a veritable little sea-dog when it comes to yachting, of her we can not expect the coloring of a lily. She is well remembered in Washington, where she was the season's guest of Mrs. James McMillan, and where she was noted for wearing with exceptional grace the trying First Empire and Greek gowns. She is a skilled musician, interpreting with feeling and precision music of a high order, yet not above thrumming on a banjo in honor of the moon upon a summer evening. Last autumn while living in Paris she became the keynote in the color scheme of a gossipy little story, whose sketching outlines time has since filled in.

It all hinges—this story—upon the infatuation of a certain Count Baergraff over our very chic little friend, Miss Newberry; and possibly also over the glittering ducats of Newberry pere. Be this as it may, upon her return to this country she had added an ornament largely affected by American girls to the jangle of bonboniers and other noisy trifles hanging at her very small belt. It was a titled scalp.

Absence seems to have but added business-like intensity to the Count's passion, but he was at first seemingly ignorant of the best course to pursue. As Miss Newberry had given him no encouragement whatever to follow her to America, he was in despair.

Finally, light seeming to flicker, dawn-like, upon the edge of his mental horizon, he dispatched a cable to a mutual friend. The original request was made that she discover, if possible, if a certain gentleman with a German accent and a hard-up title could be found stalking about the corridors of Miss Newberry's heart.

As the heart in question proved to be unoccupied by any such person, the return message was not conducive to an American trip on the part of the Count. Miss Newberry is therefore still Miss Newberry, due perhaps to her possession of an unusual quantity of good hard common sense.

It is at Grosse Pointe also, that our ex-Minister to Russia, G. V. N. Lothrop is passing the summer in a large summer house which has quite a farm-house flavor about it, and is surrounded by sunny vineyards. Mr. Lothrop's eldest daughter Anaie is now the Baroness Huehue, having married the Baron soon after the return of the family from St. Petersburg. She now forms one of the brilliant court circle in that icily splendid city. His younger daughter is still in the home circle.

THE SUMMER HOTEL.

Howard Fielding Briefly Tastes Its Delights.

He Observes with Pain the Decline of the Hotel Orchestra; and Furnishes the Feet of Genius for a Grand Tableau.

[COPYRIGHT, 1890.]
[Special Correspondence.]

I have just served a sentence of two weeks and three days at a summer hotel. I will not state where the hotel is, but the climate of the place was said to be a sure cure for a large variety of ailments, none of which I had ever had before I went there. During my stay, however, I enjoyed them all. The landlord told me that nothing but the salubriety of the place saved my life. I shall never impose the same strain on that climate again, for I do not wish to spoil it.

There is nothing so corrosive to a man's self esteem as to find himself classed way down in the subcellar of the social category—down among the men who order the whole bill of fare, and the women who publicly quarrel with their husbands in order to remove injurious suspicions from the mind of the observer—to be classed, I repeat, by a gentleman of color who wears a dress suit at breakfast time. But I never could get up the courage necessary to resist the head waiter. When he beckoned to me I invariably fell humbly into his wake, and then he steered a straight course for the chumps' table, where I was served by a girl with hair so red that when she brought me roast beef I knew what must have been the color of the old carhorse it had been cut off of.

I tried getting there early in order to eat before the chumps arrived, but no sooner did I reach my place than I observed in the doorway the melancholy countenance of the lonely young man who did not wear cuffs. When he had seated the young man the head waiter at once returned to the door and brought in the husband who palpably regretted his choice, and the wife who was the amply sufficient cause of his remorse.

Then I tried coming late, but the chumps were also unavoidably detained on that occasion, and we were all fed from the same trough as usual. One day I summoned up all the nerve I had left, and asked the head waiter to give me another seat. He said: "Yes, sah; dis way, sah," seated me in my old place, and escaped. I hadn't the moral courage to move. That afternoon I asked the clerk to make the head waiter change my seat, and he promised to do it.

This change, however, was not wholly fruitless, for it enabled me to hear a fairly good thing. On my right was a table where a mother and four daughters sat. The girls were all old enough to marry rich men, and the mother was willing that they should do so, at any moment. On my left sat the sensation of the hour; the only real, live, guaranteed foreign nobleman in the place. And he was a bachelor, too. Lord Yorkshire Pudding—I can't remember his real name—was a good enough sort of fellow, for an Englishman. He had that peculiar breeding which makes even Chicago pork seem a very inferior article in England. Nobody who hasn't had the advantage of being reared in that little island, can be perfectly courteous to one whom he honors with his immediate society, and at the same time as cruelly indifferent as a barbed-wire fence to the comfort of the stranger who casually gets within range. The polished American, on the other hand, is scrupulously polite to the man he doesn't know, while he may not tip his hat to his own wife's mother.

"GENIUS AND THE NINE MUSES."

My lord certainly kept his eye-glass bearing steadily on the table where the mother and daughters sat, and they were not slow to notice it. I could hear some pretty little squabbles between the girls, as to which one of them was getting the best of it. The mother did not enter into these disputes, but she looked at my lord in a way that meant: "Oh! how I wish there were enough of you to go around." She was in high feather, and the girls couldn't sit still in their chairs. It looked like a clear case even to my unprejudiced vision, and I was beginning to be interested to discover which of the daughters stood the best chance of being unhappy for life, when my lord pulled one of his side-whiskers with an air of decision and remarked to the man beside him, in that generously audible voice of his: "I say, deah boy, that table girl, as you call 'em, don't-yerknow, waiting on those old women over there, is the prettiest girl in this hotel, ba Jove!"

Everybody was talking about the incident after dinner while the evening promenade on the piazza was in progress. I was there, catching the neuralgia in one ear and the sweet strains of the hotel orchestra in the other. The orchestra was not what it used to be. The popularity of hotel life at American summer resorts has, on the whole, declined of late years. It seems incredible that the robust digestive apparatus of our people can have been exhausted in so short a time, but something has caused a falling away of guests, and many a seaside hotel proprietor has had to cut down expenses this season. The unhappy musician has been the first to feel the sharp edge of retrenchment. Hotels which formerly supported an orchestra of half a dozen players—and two or three dummies who worked the well-greased joints of voiceless trombones—have now come down to a violinist, a cornetist and an old maid to pound the piano.

And the "hop" is not what it was. As for that, I have a theory that the generation which succeeds our children will be too lazy to dance, and that signs of the decay of this exercise, which kept our grandmother merrily skipping about until daylight, are not wanting even now. However, far be it from me to force the results of my own deep research upon a world which can not appreciate me. I will say only that the hops at our hotel this summer were failures. So, in the last week of my stay, they got up some tableaux, by way of variety. As I was known to have perhaps the most refined artistic taste of any man of my weight in America, I was selected to arrange the display.

The next day I was approached by Mrs. A., mother of Miss Birdie (one of the nine). Mrs. A. tapped me playfully on the arm with her fan and inquired what I was going to do with her Birdie. I came very near saying that I didn't see what anybody could do with her, but by great self control I limited myself to a mild inquiry as to what Birdie's mother wanted me to do with her. It did not take me long to discover that the old lady wanted her Birdie to perch higher than any other in the tableau. I scented danger, and promised only that I would give the subject the consideration it deserved.

"I need not tell a person of your fine artistic sense," said Mrs. A., "that Birdie is the only girl in this hotel who can fill a position of prominence in a tableau. I only wish to inquire whether you had chosen your subject. And, by the way, I understand that the expenses are to be defrayed by the ladies. Allow me to put whatever sum you think necessary at your disposal. But you must promise me about Birdie."

"My dear madam," said I, "it has appeared to me necessary from the nature of the subject—which I must keep secret for the present—to give perhaps the most prominent position to Miss B."

"Oh! you can't think of it," cried Mrs. A., holding up her hands in horror, "my dear sir, she has been fading steadily for the last ten seasons. Poor girl; I pity her. Under these circumstances I must withhold my subscription from the affair."

Of course I had no idea of losing her subscription.

"I don't see how I can promise about Birdie," said I, with hesitation.

"If you only won't let Betty B. have the best place, I'll subscribe double," said Mrs. A.

"Madam," said I, "you may have my word of honor upon it."

So she took my word, and I took her subscription. Within ten minutes I was approached by Mrs. B.

"I need not tell a man of your extraordinary good taste," said she, "that my daughter Betty—"

"Madam," said I, "all that you would say has already occurred to me, but the nature of the subject points with an unerring aim to Miss Birdie A."

I thought Mrs. B. was going to faint, and, as she weighed over two hundred pounds, the moment was full of terrible anticipations. But she recovered her composure, and told me that if I would keep Birdie out of first place she would bear the whole expense of the affair herself. I accepted her proposition.

In the course of the day I encountered all the ladies whose daughters were to appear. They all complimented me on my exquisite artistic taste in all matters connected with tableaux; and they all ended with bribery. After these interviews I was somewhat shocked to reflect that I had solemnly promised to keep every blessed girl in the list in some subordinate position. This was not easy, for in a tableau some person has to shine with especial effulgence. After mature deliberation I decided that I was the person in this particular case, and I constructed a tableau representing the Nine Muses at the feet of Genius. I furnished the feet. All the lights were turned full upon me, and the spectacle was probably one of the most beautiful ever presented to an American audience. The thought that I had fulfilled my nine bargains at once fell upon my conscience as soothingly as cold cream on a sunburned nose. However, I had to leave the house very soon, to escape the consequences of too much fame.

Just before I left, I asked the landlord what he would give me to write up the hotel.

"Write it up?" he asked.

"Yes," said I, "give the facts about it."

"Do you want to kill the place?" said he, turning pale.

First Catch Your Hare

Reads an old recipe; that's well enough in Culinary matters, but it dosen't do to wait until you Cut, Scald or Burn yourself, and then run for a bottle of CARL KAERTH'S

"Instantaneous Liniment."

A much wiser plan is to spend 25c., and keep a bottle in the house.

Ask your Druggist for it.

Has no equal for CUTS, BURNS, SCALDS, RHEUMATISM and NEURALGIA. For sale at all Drug Stores or at the FACTORY, 16, E. 2d St. 4-3-f

The Tariff Conference Committee Ready to Report.

ONLY ONE QUESTION LEFT OPEN.

Deciding Upon the Date When the Bill Shall Go Into Effect.

Newspaper Publishers Arrested for Printing Lottery Advertisements—Judge Tyner Preparing Instructions to Postmasters—Adjournment Talk—Mr. Venable Declines to Run Again.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The Republican conferees on the Tariff bill adjourned last night without completing their work. It is stated now that only binding twine is in doubt. The sugar schedule is fixed, and the rates agreed upon, it is understood, are free sugar up to No. 16 Dutch standard, a duty of five-tenths cent a pound on all above that grade; a bounty of two cents a pound on sugar above 90 polariscope test, and a bounty of 1½ cents on sugar between 80 and 90. The conference report may be presented to the House this afternoon.

There will be a meeting of the full committee to formally pass upon the the report before its presentation to the House. The only question yet left open to be decided is the date upon which the bill shall go into effect.

The period intervening between the approval of the bill and its enforcement will be brief, and it is thought will certainly not exceed two weeks.

PUBLISHERS IN TROUBLE.

The Proprietors of Three Papers Arrested for Printing Lottery Advertisements.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Chief Postoffice Inspector Rathbone has received telegraphic notice of the arrest of the proprietors of the Montgomery, Ala., Advertiser, and of the Age-Herald, and Evening News, at Birmingham, Ala., for violation of the lottery law in publishing and mailing lottery advertisements.

The New Anti-Lottery Law.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Judge Tyner, the Assistant Attorney-General for the postoffice is engaged in preparing instructions to postmasters in regard to the enforcement of the new Anti-Lottery law. A number of questions have arisen in regard to the construction of this law; especially as to the right to mail back numbers of newspapers containing lottery advertisements, printed prior to the passage of the law; also whether a Canadian newspaper containing lottery advertisements can be delivered in this country through the mails. Judge Tyner will answer both of these conundrums in the negative and will solve a number of other questions relating to the new law which have been brought to his attention.

International Railway Commission.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The first subject of conference between the President and Secretary Blaine upon the return of the latter to Washington this week will be the nomination of three gentlemen to represent the United States upon the International Railway Commission, which is to meet in Washington early in October for the purpose of initiating a survey for a trunk line of railroad to connect the systems of North and South America.

Adjournment Talk.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The talk now is for adjournment, as the outlook at present is that the tariff conference report will be adopted to-day or to-morrow. A number of members think adjournment will take place some day next week, but there are more who think that a Sunday should intervene between the introduction of the resolution for and final adjournment. At any rate it is certain that Congress will not adjourn before October 6.

Mr. Blaine Returning to Washington.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Secretary Wharton has received a dispatch from Mr. Blaine saying that he would leave Bar Harbor to-day for Washington. The report of Minister Mizner on the killing of General Barrundia will then be sent to the House of Representatives in response to the resolution of that body.

Declines to Run Again.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—A special dispatch from Petersburg, Va., says the Democratic convention of the Fourth Congressional district nominated James F. Epper of Nottoway county for Congress. Ex-Representative Venable, who was unseated by the House on Tuesday, absolutely declined to run again.

Consul New's Newspaper.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 26.—The rumor that Consul-General New returned from London for the purpose of selling his newspaper to United States Treasurer Huston caused a reporter to ask him if it is true that he is likely to make such a deal. "No, sir, it is not true," he replied emphatically. "Mr. Huston has not money enough in the United States Treasury to buy the Journal. It is not for sale, and if it was Mr. Huston could not buy it."

Fled to Escape Punishment.

RONDOUT, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Chief Engineer John R. Derrenbacher, who confessed to the defalcation of $4,000 as treasurer of the Kingston City Firemen's Association a few days ago, is said to have fled to escape punishment. A warrant for his arrest, charging him with grand larceny, has been issued. Actions to recover the amount embezzled will be brought against his bondsmen, all of whom are responsible men.

PUT POISON IN HER TEA.

Startling Story in Which a Girl's Mental Weakness Figures.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 26.—Miss Nellie Fish, a sixteen-year-old Cheshire girl, is in jail in this city charged with a serious crime. She made three deliberate attempts to poison her mother by putting Rough on Rats in her tea.

The case unfolds a startling story in which the girl's mental weakness figures as much as any deliberate intent of wrong-doing. Mrs. Fish is the girl's foster mother, having adopted her when but four years of age. The girl has always been wayward and hard to keep in bounds, and has several times run away from home.

Last week she put the poison in her mother's tea. The first time it made her sick, and the second time she was taken with a severe fit of vomiting. The last time she put the poison in the tea her mother became suspicious, and had the doctor examine the food she had eaten. The examination resulted in the finding of a quantity of the poison in a half-filled cup of tea.

Suspicion pointed to the girl, and when accused she admitted that she had done it just for fun. She was arrested and locked up, and taken before a justice of the peace in Cheshire, who bound her over to the Superior Court.

About a month ago a girl named Sarah Ellis, a niece of Mrs. Fish, who resided with them, and who was appointed Postmistress of West Cheshire a short time ago, died after a brief sickness. It is now generally supposed that the girl died from the effects of poison administered by the Fish girl. Her body will be exhumed and an examination of the remains made. Her reason for administering the poison is that her mother would not let her out when she liked.

A PITTSBURG FAILURE.

The Iron City Bridge Company's Embarrassment Announced.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 26.—It has just been announced that Charles J. Schultze & Sons, doing business under the name of the Iron City Bridge Company, have failed. As yet no schedules of liabilities and assets have been prepared, but it is understood that Oliver Brothers hold judgments against the concern aggregating $110,000.

The Iron City Bridge Company was one of the oldest concerns in the city, and was always believed to hold a strong financial position. This is the first failure of any consequence in this city for a long time.

Financial circles here are uneasy over the failure.

Ray Hamilton's Will.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—The will of Robert Ray Hamilton will not be filed to-day, as was announced. Edward R. Vollmer, of 229 Broadway, who has charge of Mr. Hamilton's estate, told a reporter that the testament would not be offered for probate until the arrival from Europe of Edmund L. Baylies, one of the executors, who left Liverpool yesterday for home.

Hon. John Jay Injured.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Hon. John Jay, ex-United States Minister to Austria, was knocked down by a cab and seriously injured. Mr. Jay was taken to St. Luke's Hospital, where everything possible is being done to make him comfortable. He is bright and cheerful and suffers comparatively little. Mr. Jay is 73 years of age.

Snow in the Adirondacks.

AMPERSAND, SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., Sept. 26.—The thermometer at the Signal Service Station registered 28 degrees at 9 a. m. The first ice of the season was seen at Mount Marcy, and the McIntyre, Whiteface and all the high peaks of the Adirondacks were covered with snow.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 26.—Dr. Joseph H. Coover, one of the leading physicians of this city, died suddenly of heart failure. He leaves a wife, son and daughter. Dr. Coover was born June 15, 1838, in Mechanicsburg, Cumberland County, Pa.

Prohibitionist Nominations.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 26.—The Prohibitionists of the Thirtieth District nominated John J. Cornel for Congress. A full county ticket was also placed in the field.

SEALING HIS FATE

The Evidence Against Birchall Very Damaging.

EXCITING SCENES IN COURT.

The Crown's Counsellor Will Close His Side of the Case To-night.

The Prisoner Tracked to the Swamp—A Young Lady Acquaintance Gives Interesting Testimony—Line of Defense to be Pursued by Birchall's Lawyers—Piekthall May Take the Stand.

WOODSTOCK Ont., Sept. 26.—As the Birchall trial proceeds, the interest increases and the throng thickens. The great square in front of the court house had the same crowded appearance that it bore yesterday; while, if anything, the courtroom was even more fully packed, the ladies again forming fully half the spectators. Every seat was occupied, and many stood along the sides of the room. Rapt interest was depicted on every face save that of the prisoner, which alone in all the throng expressed no emotion.

Crown Counsellor Osler said only three Crown witnesses were to be called this afternoon, that their evidence would be brief and be in before adjournment.

The circle of evidence is nearly rounded out. The evidence has traced Birchall from Buffalo to the swamp and back to Eastwood station. Within that circle there is overwhelming circumstantial evidence.

A Sensational Witness.

John Crosby swore to meeting two Englishmen on the Governor's road between 11 and 12 o'clock, February 17. He described their dress, which was like that Birchall and Benwell wore that day. Identified the prisoner in the box as one of the men and swore he saw the other dead in Princeton cemetery when Benwell's body was exhumed. The most searching cross-examination failed to disconcert the witness, although there was a sensational interruption. Crosby grew deadly pale, tottered and fell into the supporting arms of those about him. He soon recovered. Through it all Birchall's face was immovable as that of a graven image.

The Prisoner Turns White.

Miss Alice Smith, who was considered the Crown's most important witness, testified that she knew the prisoner by his coming to her grandfather's at Eastwood on several occasions, and had spoken to him several times. She had seen him at Eastwood Station on February 17, and he said he was going to Hamilton for baggage. Had asked him if his name was Dudley or Somerset, to which he replied, "Don't you know me?" She recognized the prisoner as the man, which caused great excitement, the prisoner first flushing crimson and then turning white.

Mr. Blackstock—Did you know Dudley; he was a particular friend of yours!

Miss Smith—I know him, but he was not a particular friend of mine.

"Were you ever in your grandfather's kitchen alone with Dudley?"

The witnesses eyes filled as she replied, "No; he never was alone with me."

Several ladies cried in sympathy with the witness and the judge stopped any further questions on that point.

The Line of Defence.

In conversation this morning one of Birchall's counsel indicated to a certain extent the line of defence that will be adopted. They will not combat the fact of the deception of Benwell, and most likely will not dispute the fact that Birchall and Benwell set out together on the morning of February 17 to see the mythical farm near Woodstock. It is expected, however, that they will endeavor to show by witnesses that Benwell was not killed on that day and that he was seen alive on the following day. To this end they will lay stress on the disagreement of medical and other testimony as to the time the body had been lying in the swamp when found. But the most interesting factor in the defence promises to be one Neville H. Piekthall. He is a curious young man. He comes of a good English family, and is well educated. He came to this country as one of the "farm pupils" four years ago. His father died in the meantime in England and left him some money. With this he bought a farm of 200 acres some two miles from Woodstock. He married a daughter of a clergyman in a nearby village and was living on his farm when Birchall, masquerading as Lord Somerset, arrived here a year ago last spring. He and Birchall became close friends. The story that they quarrelled the defence will try to disprove from Birchall's diary.

THE TIPPERARY RIOT

Exciting Scenes at the Irish Nationalist Trials.

THE POLICE USE THEIR BATONS.

The Clubbing of the Crowd Pronounced an Outrage.

John Morley Saved from a Constable's Blow—Timothy Harrington Enters the Court Room Bleeding—The Prisoners Object to Magistrate Shannon, but Are Overruled.

DUBLIN, Sept. 26.—The excitement of a week ago, when the arrests of Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien were so suddenly made, has its counterpart in Nationalist circles to-day. The dispatches from Tipperary describing the clubbing of the crowd before the court house by the police created a profound sensation at the National League headquarters. The action of the police was denounced as a gross outrage.

The fact that John Morley is present at the trial is considered a subject for much congratulation. It is thought that the trial will afford him more insight into the true inwardness of the Irish problem, which he came to Ireland to study for himself, than weeks of ordinary travel and investigation. He will be able to tell the English Liberals with more force than ever what the Irish people have to put up with at the hands of the police after his own rough experience at Tipperary.

The Nationalists are confident that whatever the outcome of the trial may be the brutal police episode and the evident reluctance of the court to open the doors to the public will not increase the popularity of Mr. Balfour's rule.

THE POLICE OUTRAGE.

John Morley Roughly Jostled by a Brutal Constable.

TIPPERARY, Sept. 26.—When the Nationalist prisoners, Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien, and a number of friends arrived here from Dublin they started for the court house in a body.

They had not gone far when they stopped at a street corner and entered into a conversation. While they were standing, in no way disturbing the peace there, they were ordered by the police to move on. John O'Connor, member of Parliament for South Tipperary, took very vigorous exception to this order, and showed his contempt for the police by calling upon the crowd—which by that time had become large—to give three cheers for John Morley.

The cheers were given with hearty good will, much to the exasperation of the police, who thereupon charged upon the group and attempted to force it to move forward. In the melee that followed the police did not hesitate to use their batons. One burly constable aimed a blow at John Morley himself, but John O'Connor, who stood near, warded it off. The Nationalists then continued their way slowly toward the court house. As this was the day fixed for the trial of the arrested Nationalists the streets of Tipperary were full to overflowing with people interested in the case. Nationalists had thronged to the town from all adjacent parts, many of them carrying the national weapon—the shillelah—and proposed to use it if provocation would arise.

The court house door was closed against the crowd and only the prisoners and their counsel allowed to enter. The crowd did not take kindly to this treatment, but pressed forward trying to force a way into the court house. The police stontly resisted, charging repeatedly upon the crowd and using their clubs freely on whoever happened to be within reach. Many of their blows took effect, but the crowd did not yield instantly.

Among the wounded were Timothy Harrington, M. P., and he entered the court house covered with blows when Mr. O'Brien was addressing the judge about the bru ality of the police.

Then Mr. John Morley arose and addressed the court, manifesting great agitation both in tones and manner. He earnestly appealed to the court to protect the populace against the wanton use of the club by the police.

Mr. Dillon, in speaking of the subject, called the police cowards several times, and Mr. John O'Connor was also loud in denouncing their conduct.

The court room doors were finally opened and the crowd rushed in. O'Brien and Dillon protested against being tried before Magistrate Shannon on the ground that he had tried them before on similar charges and that his sitting in the present case was an insult. The objections were not admitted and the trial is now proceeding.

Mr. Ronan, counsel for the Crown, asked permission of the court to make some slight alterations in the charges against the prisoners. The latter protested vigorously, but the court permitted counsel to make the desired changes.

Obtaining Money Under False Pretences.

BOSTON, Sept. 26.—L. S. Drew, the Tremont Row dry goods dealer, against whom a complaint of obtaining goods under false pretences is preferred by several Boston creditors, had his bail reduced to $10,000 in the Municipal Court, and was bound over for the Supreme Court.

Murderer Wayman's Case Appealed.

GENEVA, Sept. 26.—Mr. Henry M. Stanley, who is staying at this place, is much feted by the people and is the lion of the hour. His health is steadily improving.

HIS FAMILY'S DISGRACE.

Shamed by the News of Disruption Victor Johnson Shoots Himself.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—The suicide of young Victor Johnson early in the morning in Brooklyn reveals a sad bit of history. He lived with his grandfather, R. R. Wheeler. The latter had led young Johnson to believe that his father and mother were dead, but in rummaging some old trunks the boy found a letter from his father, now living at Fayetteville, N. C. The grandfather would not give him money to go to see his father.

He went to work, but not finding the money accumulating fast enough, used $300 belonging to his employers and found his father, who told him that his mother was living in East New York, discarded by him fifteen years ago for loose habits. He had disowned his daughter for the same reason. Victor was overcome by shame when he had told his grandfather, and baring his bosom, shot himself through the heart.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 26.—The National Prison Congress, an association of humanely-inclined persons and of persons whose duties are in connection with prisons and reformatory work, began its annual meeting in the Odeon, in this city, last night. The exercises were wholly preliminary.

Governor Campbell and Mayor Mosby delivered welcoming addresses, and ex-President Rutherford B. Hayes, who is president of the association, made a reply.

The real work of the Congress, which consists of reports of committees on assigned topics and of addresses and papers, commenced to-day and will continue until October 1. There are 150 delegates from all parts of the United States.

Hunting for Murderers.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Inspector Byrnes refused to talk about the reported search for three Italians, who are alleged to have murdered a man in Hartsville, Pa., and to have fled with $18,000 in gold and bills which were stolen from him. It is believed the men are in this city.

Their Trial Put Off.

TROY, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Arthur Burtt, John Cain, and John Reed, the alleged train wreckers, were taken into court during the morning and the day of trial was postponed. They are back in jail, where they must remain until court convenes on December 15, unless they can furnish $20,000 bail.

Congressional Deadlock.

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 26.—The Republican Congressional convention of the 28th District resulted in a deadlock. The vote up to the 30th ballot stood 8 for Noyes of Seneca, 4 for Beach of Schuyler, and 4 for Titus of Ithaca. The contested delegation from Seneca was not admitted.

BY THE WAY.

—The Rev. G. K. Newell will lead the public meeting of the Hope Chapel Temperance Club this evening.

—The Somerset grand jury finished its labors yesterday, after finding 15 indictments in 50 cases before it.

—A wheelbarrow was used in delivering the mail this morning in place of the mail wagon that was wrecked yesterday morning at the corner of Park and North avenues.

—On Wednesday evening of next week Gazelle Engine Company, No. 1, will hold an important meeting in their parlors at eight o'clock sharp, to which a full attendance of the members are requested.

—Rogers Bros. have just bought a large stock of ladies' and gentlemen's shoes to sell at $3, but to make trade lively for Saturday, they will sell them for $2.50. Do not fail to buy a pair and save fifty cents.

—Several boys played ball on the street yesterday, and during their frolic a horse was struck, almost causing a runaway. The boys were arrested, and this morning Judge Codington fined them each one dollar.

—Proprietor Mosher of the "Crescent Parlor," 23 North avenue, has secured a large lot of Reina Victoria cigars at $45 a thousand which he is selling at five cents. There is a great rush for these ten-centers at five cents.

—Two boys were playing leap-frog on West Fifth street last evening. One of them kept calling for a higher "back," and finally got one so high that he fell to the pavement, rolled over to the gutter, and cut open his cheek on the edge of the curb.

—A portion of the hose connecting air-brake apparatus on a Philadelphia and Reading train became detached as the train was passing through Plainfield this morning, and a delay of several minutes was caused while repairs were being made.

—Dixon's Tourists present the never-dying "Uncle Tom's Cabin," this evening, at the Amphion Theatre. To-morrow afternoon special ladies' matinee will be given, when "East Lynne" will be repeated. Saturday evening by special request, "Ten Nights in a Bar-room."

—Complaint is made against the odor of the water used in sprinkling Front street the past few days. The sniffing of noses was especially noticeable yesterday afternoon, and pedestrians who frequently meet the sprinkling cart are beginning to be known as the handkerchief brigade.

—The Young Plainfields won another base ball game from the Harned Academy nine, yesterday, by the score of 17 to 12 The Young Plainfields say they played "all around" the Academys, and stole bases "very easy." The Academys are accused of having hired outside players to beat the Young Plainfields. The batteries were: A. Vail, E. Vargas and E. Brown, for the Academys; and G. Mattis and Simmons for the Young Plainfields. The umpire was J. Weringer.

—Dwelling houses constructed of barns are not uncommon, but it remains for North Plainfield to give to the world a barn transformed from a dwelling house. After vainly trying to sell the tenement on the rear of the lot on which he has just built a new store and dwelling, and to have it moved away, Joseph Blatz has concluded to turn it to account himself, and by several alterations has made a barn which will doubtless seem quite palatial to the live stock which will inhabit its stables.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

J. A. Hill and family, of 33 Carlton avenue, will sail Tuesday for a coast trip South.

L. E. Howard, of East Ninth street, has returned from a business trip combined with a visit to friends, in Boston.

F. W. King, one of New York's prominent literary men, is stopping with his family at Force's hotel while a new home is being completed for them on Sandford avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Firman A. Long, of Somerset street, deny the statement of a Martinville correspondent that they were married by the "Rev. George Bowers." The Rev. Mr. Hagerty, of Mt. Horeb, was the officiating clergyman at their wedding.

One of the Things to Expect When Such Men Are Elected to Office.

Councilmen Hetfield, Roberts and Gallup, composing the committee on fire and buildings, with the board of engineers consisting of Chief Doane and Assistants Waters and Martin, made a tour of the city this morning and located the fire alarm boxes at the following places:

Front street and Park avenue, Front street and Grove, Front street and Plainfield avenue, Spooner avenue and Seventh street, Liberty and Fifth streets, Central avenue and Seventh street, Crescent avenue and Broadway, Broadway and Webster place, LaGrande and Woodland avenues, Front and Richmond streets, Second and Washington streets, Park and North avenues.

—"Where are you going, my pretty maid?"
"I'm an ad for the newspaper, sir," she said;
"An ad, for the news?" I asked, amazed.
"Not if I know myself, sir!" she said.

HYMENEAL.

Hamilton—Young.

Yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the First Presbyterian church, Dunellen, W. J. Hamilton and Mrs. Mary Young were married by the Rev. D. W. Skellinger, of Albany, the former pastor of the church. Mr. Hamilton is the manager of the telegraphic department of the New Jersey Central Railroad in the New York office, and is the Superintendent of the Sunday school where Mrs. Young is a teacher. The bride was dressed in a handsome traveling suit of dark plum color. Mr. Smith, of Somerville, presided at the organ. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton were driven to the station, and amid a shower of rice started for the West. They expect to spend their honeymoon in California, and will be gone about six weeks.

MARTIN—JOHNSON.

Colored society was out in full force and most correct style, last evening, at the wedding of Edward Alfred Martin and Miss Anna Johnson. The ceremony took place at the residence of Peter Gordon, 70 East Fourth street. The bride and groom were overwhelmed with compliments and congratulations, at the reception, and were showered with good wishes as they started off on their wedding trip. The Rev. Mr. Mitchell officiated.

VANCLEVE—SCHENCK.

Wm. VanCleve, of Brooklyn, was married by the Rev. C. B. Mitchell, Wednesday afternoon, to Miss Josie Schenck, formerly of this city, at the home of the bride's parents in New Market.

To-Morrow's Team Against The West Ends.

The Crescent nine to-morrow will be the same as last Saturday except that Schoneck will play first base in Wiegand's place, O'Rourke will go in the field instead of Lever, and Jones will catch. The batting order will be: Hatfield, right field; Martin, short stop: Lufbery, second base; Schoneck, first base; McIndoe, left field; O'Rourke, centre field; Jones catch; Lee, third base; Doran, pitch.

As to Somerville's nine, all sorts of reports are circulated to the effect that in addition to Gore, other members of the New York league team have been engaged including Sunday the great fielder, Hatfield, who is short-stop Ward's only equal, and Murphy and Hayes the phenomenal battery. Most of this is nonsense. Gore is retained at a cost of $60, and probably Gil Hatfield will take short-stop Reilly's place, but otherwise there is no need of any changes in the West End nine.

Of course the Crescents and their friends are still feeling bad at the unnecessary loss of last Saturday's game, but they point with pride to the fact that they are playing their season's team against a nine organized by the Somervillians within the last few weeks especially for the occasion. The only changes in Plainfield team have been the suspension of Wiegand for wretched ball playing, and the engaging of a change pitcher.

A Stranger Extracts a Loan From a Kind-Hearted Plainfielder.

A middle-aged man button-holed a Plainfield citizen, recently, and would not release him till a "temporary loan" had been effected. The stranger claimed to be connected with B. McGuigan & Son, metal workers, of Jersey City, whose card he presented. He had been working, he said, on Mr. Hicking's new house near Dunellen, and some one had stolen his pocket-book, which was filled with money, and other valuables, from the pockets of his garments, which had been hanging in one of the unfinished apartments. As soon as he was given the money he asked for he vanished, and he hasn't been seen or heard of since.

How a Dunellen Boy Made Money by Being Robbed.

A youngster in Dunellen has been breeding a fine flock of pigeons which he had planned to present to a friend, a sportsman, to be used as targets in the coming shooting tournament at the Middlesex Gun Club grounds. Last evening some one stole the entire flock, and for a time the sky of the generous-hearted fancier was dark. This morning, however, he arose bright and early, and by a bright bit of detective work discovered the robber in the person of a former playmate. Terms of restitution were made so satisfactory to the owner of the birds that now he has his pigeons again and a $5 gold piece to boot.

Can't Even Print What is Stolen, Correctly.

(From the Central Times of Wednesday.)

Rev. C. L. Goodrich is intending to preach a doctrinal sermon next Sunday morning, on "Why I am a Congregationalist."

(From the "news" of Thursday.)

The subject chosen by the Rev. W. R. Richards for his sermon next Sunday is "Why I am a Congregationalist."

An Evening Musicale.

A musicale was held at the residence of the Misses Flanagan on Liberty street, last evening, that was attended by a large number of invited guests. Singing and selections on the piano were the principal features of the evening's enjoyment Refreshments were served, and at an early hour this morning those present departed for their homes well pleased with the night's pleasures.

A Course of Self Protection, Merely.

"The country at large," said Congressman Geissenhainer the other day, in conversation with a Republican of this city, "does not fully understand our position in regard to the Venable-Langston case, and no doubt there are many who blame us for absenting ourselves from the floor, and so preventing the counting of a quorum. The question is this: The district is a Republican one, and the regular Mahone-Republican candidate was Mr. Arnold. Mr. Langston (a negro) ran independently, making a bid for the negro vote. Owing to this split in the party, Mr. Venable, the Democratic candidate, was elected by a plurality of 641 votes over Langston.

"Mr. Langston bases his claim to the seat on irregularities committed in two wards in Petersburg, but it is conceded that even if the entire vote of the whole city was thrown out, Venable had a plurality of 487 votes. In face of these facts the Republicans have as a matter of party policy, in order to increase their strength in the House, decided to unseat Venable after a two years' occupancy, and seat Langston; and they have made this the order of business so that nothing can be done until this question is decided.

"Our position is clear. We cannot be a party to the crime of unseating one of our own party who was fairly elected. In other words we will not assist our enemies to injure us. Consequently we absent ourselves. It is all that we can do. The Republicans have a clear majority of 16, and we say that if they wish to commit any such steal, they must do it without our aid."

Something Some of You Know Already.

If you have a telephone in your office or store, ring up "Central" and then go and wait on a customer. Pay no attention to the bell when "Central" rings back, but go to the telephone in about 15 minutes, ring up again, and make a kick if the operator is not there waiting for you.

Always speak in an undertone, in order to make "Central" ask you over what you said. If she does not hear you, tell her to "wake up," or "take the cotton out of her ears." She will then admire your originality, for she does not generally hear that advice more than 40 times a day.

Put your "plug" in before a storm, and be sure not to take it out again, but go around to the central office and offer to lick the whole telphone company for neglect of duty.

Take your time in answering your bell, or, what is better, do not answer it at all, but in about half an hour ring up and ask who called you, and get mad if "Central" has forgotten who it was. She has nothing else to do but remember.

Always ask "Central" to transfer the message for you. She likes to do this, as it helps to kill time for her.

Allow everybody who wants to, to use your telephone. Hang the receiver big end up, as in this way it gets full of dust, which makes another cause for complaint.

Bang on the transmitter with a lead pencil, as though you intended to knock it through the wall. This invariably makes it talk better. Refuse to pay toll messages, and if you are on a line with someone, always listen to their conversation, and be sure to want to use the line while they are doing so.

When you see the manager, tell him that if he cannot give you a better telephone or get that one fixed, you will throw the whole thing out of the window. When the inspector comes, deny that you have ever complained of the telephone and that it works like a charm.

Lastly, kick against everything, and cause as much trouble for the company as you can. They are delighted to have you do so, otherwise business would be monotonous.

Paste this on your telephone for future reference.

The Best Show Plainfield Ever Saw.

A light house at Music Hall, last night, enjoyed the best minstrel show ever given in this city without excepting even Thatcher's. Cleveland's company includes most of the best people in the business, and the result is an opening and olio that are unsurpassed.

Percy Denton, the interlocutor, one of the best of middle men, with Dougherty, Schoolcraft, Emerson and Fagan on the ends, make a merry quintette of fresh and witty conversationalists. The vocalists, Benedetto, Shaw and Nankeville, are also good. Fagan's spectacular dance and drill, are even more luxurious and novel than anything he has created before. Fields and Hanson are the peers of all other instrumental comedians, while the Craggs are most marvelous.

To the Victors Belong the Spoils.

The first of the Democratic employes in the postoffice to go, are carriers Joseph Shepherd and Peter Flynn. They were notified, Wednesday evening, that pursuant to orders from headquarters at Washington, they would be relieved from duty on Oct. 1. Postmaster Pope says he has no fault to find with them. They were appointed, however, under a Democratic administration. It is expected that Charles Stephens and Peter Weaver, who have been acting as substitutes, will take their places.

—The householders of Plainfield are constantly going into raptures over the choice wares displayed at Gavett's. Intending purchasers will be pleased to learn that a rich stock of new goods has just been received, including handsome jardinieres, cracker jars, fancy pottery, artistic lamps, fine glassware, and decorated china. The assortment is excellent, and the prices will suit all.

Councilor-Elect Tallman.

At the regular meeting of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., held in their hall corner of Front street and Park avenue, last evening, after the usual routine business was transacted the following officers were elected for the ensuing quarter:

Junior Past Councilor—Gilbert S. Martin.
Councilor—Charles W. Tallman.
Vice Councilor—Louis M. Dunavan.
Asst Recording Secretary—David S. Dunavan.
Conductor—Elias R. Pope, Jr.
Warden—Charles W. Taynor.
Inside Sentinel—Harry C. Dennis.
Outside Sentinel—William B. Hardy.

A Boroughite's First Poem.

A resident of the Borough, evidently a close observer of the happenings of waning Summer out-door life among his neighbors, immortalizes a recent incident of Washington Park life as follows:

Within a hammock snug they sat;
But how the two behaved
One could not tell, it was so dark,
Had it not been for the remark
"Oh, George, you must get shaved."

Secured the Kingleader's Head.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—Serious disturbances are reported from Morocco. A provincial Kaid, a governor, abducted a girl. The tribe to which the girl belonged attacked the Kaid, killed him, all his women and some of his male relatives. The Sultan's troops marched against the tribe, killed some and captured others and sent the ringleader's head to the Sultan.

Balfour Causes Another Arrest.

DUBLIN, Sept. 26.—Thomas J. Condin, member of Parliament for the eastern division of Tipperary, was arrested at noon at Limerick on a warrant sworn out at the time the warrants for the arrest of Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien were issued. Mr. Condin was conveyed at once to Tipperary.

Rheumatism,

BEING due to the presence of uric acid in the blood, is most effectually cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Be sure you get Ayer's and no other, and take it till the poisonous acid is thoroughly expelled from the system. We challenge attention to this testimony:—

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatic gout, being able to walk only with great discomfort, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters, without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months, and am pleased to state that it has effected a complete cure. I have since had no return of the disease."—Mrs. R. Irving Dodge, 110 West 125th st., New York.

"One year ago I was taken ill with inflammatory rheumatism, being confined to my house six months. I came out of the sickness very much debilitated, with no appetite, and my system disordered in every way. I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla and began to improve at once, gaining in strength and soon recovering my usual health. I cannot say too much in praise of this well-known medicine."—Mrs. L. A. Stark, Nashua, N. H.

SUBURBAN NEWS.

NEW MARKET.

The funeral services of Mrs. Asa Bush were held at her late residence yesterday morning at 9 o'clock in the presence of a large concourse of friends who held the deceased in high esteem. Her remains were taken to Jamesburg.

The district school has been refurnished with new Globe desks, a single seat for each scholar which not only adds to the comfort of the pupils but is conducive to better order.

Great and continued complaints are made as to mailing facilities here. Letters deposited in the New York office after 12 M., do not reach this place until the following day. The fact is the change of transit from the Central to the Lehigh has not been beneficial, the delays being annoying vexations and show a lamentable want of consideration to the community. The time was when this communication mailed to you in the morning would reach you in time for publication in THE PRESS on the same day, but deposited here at 8 A. M., I await your note to this to record the time of its receipt.

BROAD BRIM.

Sept. 25, 1890.

[The above was received in Plainfield at 2:30 P. M., of the day it was mailed.—ED.]

DUNELLEN.

The Rev. W. C. Stinson, the new pastor of the First Presbyterian church, is very popular with his congregation. The new parsonage being completed he moved into it early this week. His sermons are eloquent and able, and all predict for him a brilliant future.

T. L. Thomas and family returned last evening from their Summer's sojourn at Ocean Grove where they have a cottage.

The anniversary of the Y. P. S. C. E., of the First Presbyterian church, will be held about the middle of October.

A juvenile fife and drum corps is being organized in town. A number of the instruments have already been purchased. Mr. Diaz, of Somerville, has been engaged as a teacher. The boys are very much in earnest and our streets will soon resound with martial music.

There are two roller toboggans in town now, and they are extensively patronized by the young people.

Charles Apgar has been appointed organist of the First Presbyterian church.

There is a marked improvement in the sidewalks in town, especially on the main streets. The Borough Commissioners have ordered the walks to be widened and improved on the New Market road, and with the exception of one or two Rip VanWinkles—who are found in every town, and who oppose any improvement—the people respond promptly to the efforts of the Commissioners to make good roads and sidewalks. Some of the people are waiting to see what action the frost will have on the tar walks already laid.

There is a slight improvement in school matters. The trustees in defiance of the wishes of the largest taxpayers, re-engaged the old Superintendent, who lacks the necessary backbone to enforce proper discipline. In consequence there will be the usual addition to the Plainfield schools, and several families will soon leave town for the same reason.

Wm. Rider and family, who are spending this month at Milwaukee, are expected home on October 1.

ARGUS.

Crushed Stone Wanted, Not Mud.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—For several years strenuous efforts have been made by private individuals at their own expense to improve the condition of the Washington Valley road, and hundreds of dollars have been expended in crushed stone thereon. The new road master, recently appointed by the North Plainfield Township Committee, has commenced operations by digging the soft mud out of the ditches, and spreading it on the road to the depth of several inches over where tons of crushed stone were laid and spread. As one of the indignant taxpayers of the district I protest against such misuse and waste of the people's money, and ask the honorable committee to have the mud removed from the road, and such work in future prohibited. There should be no appropriation of money made for the road except for crushed stone, opening ditches and making water stops. Any other work at present is unnecessary and should not be allowed.

RUPERT W. ANDERSON.

Terribly Mangled by the Cars.

A well-dressed man attempted to board a fast freight train on the Central Railroad near Dunellen, yesterday, and fell under the wheels. His body was terribly mangled, but though unconscious he was still alive when found. On the fly-leaf of a note-book in his pocket was the inscription "James R. Francis, 30th and Penn streets, Pittsburgh, Pa.," and on the supposition that that was his name and address his senseless, bleeding body was conveyed to that city.

THE VICTOR'S TALE.

How the Crescents Were Defeated, as Told in Somerville.

(From the Somerset Gazette.)

Well, the West End club has won the series with the Crescents, and the base ball cranks of both towns are playing last Saturday's game yet. There were rumors and rumors during the week as to what sort of a snag in the shape of a a battery the West Ends would run against, and up to Saturday it may have been said that it was a masked battery. It was learned then that the Crescents had secured Doran of the New Haven club, and, what was the bitterest dose of all, our own O'Rourke, who, in the three games played with the West Ends previous to this series, had done magnificent work, and had become one of the idols of the Association. The knowledge of Doran's work in the Atlantic Association during the past season, in which he has several times closed out the opposing team with a single hit, operated to somewhat intimidate the West Ends, but with their usual "do or die" policy, Manager Mack went on a "hustling" tour and secured the services of Gore, the great batter and centre-fielder of the New York Players' League club. This acquisition more than atoned for the loss of O'Rourke and the West End members experienced quite a reversion of feeling when they learned of it.

Doran pitched a grand game for the Crescents, striking out the West Ends' heavy batters with ease up to the eighth innings. Harkins, although hit hard during the innings, was very effective at critical stages when a safe hit meant one or more runs. Carbonell almost immortalized himself by throwing out two runners at the plate who attempted to score from second base on single hits. The Crescents had no chance to make any specially brilliant plays, as their put-outs were all of the easy kind, and the hits made by the West Ends were all clean ones, though discouragingly few.

After Saturday's game Manager Leggett of the Crescents advised first-baseman Wiegand to take the first train away from town. He has since been released.

The latest news from the scene of carnage is that Doran, O'Rourke and Duffy are to be added to the Crescent team next Saturday. Duffy is a catcher from the Newark club.

Editor Demarest's unique and facetious account of the game in Monday's Press, deserves a place in the archives of base ball history. The Press sold on our streets like hot sausages and rolls at a Fair.

A very courteous letter from the Crescent management has been received, asking that the series be extended to five games, all to be played at Plainfield. The West End Association will not consent to any change of the original schedule.

It is extremely gratifying to note that the utmost good feeling now prevails among the spectators at this series, and perfect order is maintained. As long as this continues the games between the two clubs will be one of the greatest attractions in Central New Jersey, to say nothing of the financial benefit to both.

A large number of enthusiastic West Enders paraded the streets of Plainfield last Saturday night with brooms, etc. They hired a drum corps and came to Somerville where they indulged in another parade and a bon-fire. At the pow-wow around the bon-fire a telegram of congratulation from the Rahway Athletic Association was read.

The West Ends asked permission to take a brass band with them next Saturday, which should give an hour's concert before the game and serenade the winners after the game. Over $50 had been subscribed to defray the expenses, but the Crescents refused to allow it. The Plainfield Press says "the Crescent managers should most certainly grant the West Ends the privilege of bringing a brass band with them next Saturday, and should provide seats for them."

The Neighboring Old Women Tickled to Death.

(From the Rahway Democrat.)

The high toned Crescents cut a pretty figure last week in connection with the West End game. After being "done up" by the W. E.'s the week previous, they began to scheme to cripple the West Ends for Saturday's game, and by their peculiar tactics, so well known here, they induced some of the West End team to desert and when Saturday arrived the W. E.'s found themselves short two men. As usual such methods never pay, and the West End's secured George Gore, the celebrated professional, and by his great hit in the eighth inning four runs were secured and the game won by a score of 5-2.

All the Committees to Meet Together.

A meeting of all the committees of the Young Men's Christian Association will be held at the Association rooms next Monday evening, September 29, at eight o'clock. After a general conference in regard to improved methods of work, the committees will meet by themselves to perfect plans for future labors. It is important that every committeeman should attend.

When you have that tired feeling of exhaustion, and you have little ambition, your blood is thin and poor. There is nothing that will enrich your blood, bring back life and activity, like Hires' Root Beer. Nothing so nutritious and strengthening. Ask your druggist or grocer for a package. Makes five gallons, sparkling and delicious. Sold everywhere.

TOLSTOI AND THE BEAR.

How the Celebrated Novelist's Presence of Mind Saved His Life.

An incident is related about the celebrated writer, Count Tolstoi, which nearly cost him his life. He went out on a bear hunt with some of his friends, and, after selecting a spot which commanded a good view of the surrounding grounds, some of the more experienced hunters suggested that the snow had better be trampled down so that it would be easier for them to move about and get out of bruin's way and have time enough to take a shot at him if he should come upon them unexpectedly.

The Count, however, although up to his waist in the snow, objected to this and said that it was entirely unnecessary, since the whole thing consisted of shooting the bear and not wrestling with him.

They did not have to wait long, for the bear, which had just risen from its lair, was walking along to get out of the way of the hunters when it suddenly stepped out into the open space directly in front of Tolstoi.

He coolly took aim and fired, but the ball, for some reason or other, went wide of its mark. Taking aim again he fired, this time hitting the bear in the head, and the bullet lodged in the lower jaw and of course only made a very irritating wound, which made the bear so savage that, taking a few jumps, he was upon Tolstoi before he was able to realize it. Just as the bear came close enough to him he dropped down, and of course the bear went right over his body. Tolstoi's whole body sunk into the deep snow, and the only part that remained exposed was his head, which the bear tackled as soon as he had recovered from his surprise in seeing Tolstoi disappear so suddenly.

Tolstoi did his best to push his head down as low as possible, and elevated his fur cap for the bear to bite. Twice the savage animal snapped at it, and then, discovering his mistake, made a bite deeper down, this time taking a piece of flesh from the Count's right cheek.

Just at this moment his comrades returned, and by their loud yells succeeded in driving away the bear, who very slowly turned his back upon the hunters and walked into the woods, master of the situation.—London Telegraph.

TRAINING CHILDREN.

Teach Them to Use Their Minds as Well as Their Eyes.

It is reported that a distinguished New York lawyer in selecting a governess for his children said to her: "I do not care so much what studies you select for my children, but one thing I shall insist upon, and that is that you take special pains to cultivate their perceptive faculties. I want them to become observers, so that they can intelligently describe what they see." This instruction has been highly commended by some of the newspapers as containing sound educational advice, but it shows that the lawyer was not an educator. It is true that observation is the foundation of all knowledge, but it is nothing more than the foundation. It is not the superstructure. Observers are not always fine scholars, nor correct thinkers. Observation furnishes facts, but they must be used well or they are worthless. It is just as important that children should be taught to think as it is that they should learn to observe. Mere observation makes them Paul Prys, but no sages or philosophers. Teach children to use their eyes and their minds both, if you would educate them wisely and well. There is a period in life when observation is the main thing, but that period is not the most important in the life of an individual. We think the New York lawyer made another grave mistake in the education of his children, and that was in putting them under the care of a private tutor instead of sending them to school where they would come in contact with their equals, who would do more for them than their teachers. Emerson says, "you send your boy to college to be instructed by learned professors, but his schoolmates educate him." It is impossible for anybody to be well educated without the stimulus of rivalry and emulation. It is possible to develop talent in solitude, but not character. The greatest of the German poets, Goethe, said, "talent grows solitude, but character is developed in the stream of life." A boy or a girl educated under tutors is sure to be a one-sided character, and to have no real knowledge of life or of the world. Children of rich parents miss the best part of training and culture.—Cumberland Presbyterian.

A Millionaire's Frugal Lunch.

A large, elderly and fine-looking man with a black-silk cap on his head entered the restaurant on the top floor of the Mills building a few days ago and, seating himself in a quiet corner, ordered a plate of cold chicken, some bread and butter, and a glass of milk. This was his midday luncheon and he seemed to enjoy it. At another table, a few feet away, sat a young man, dressed with a scrupulous regard for the latest fashions. He was enjoying a much more elaborate meal than his elderly neighbor. Little neck clams, spring lamb with green peas, lobster salad, a pint of champagne, and a choice perfecto were necessary to his personal comfort, and he disposed of them all with a nonchalance which bespoke familiarity with that style of living. And there certainly was nothing out of the way in his manner of indulging his appetite. He paid for what he got with money honestly earned. He holds a responsible clerkship in C. P. Huntington's employ, and Mr. Huntington is known to pay good salaries to good men. The elderly man who ate the cold chicken and drank the glass of milk was Collis P. Huntington.—N. Y. Times.

DOROTHY CHAMBERS.

A Co-operative Room Plan For Eccentric Girl "Bachelors."

Dorothy chambers! did you ever hear of them? If you are a progressive young woman with a mission to accomplish or a vocation to pursue you must assert your independence by going and living in them. There is first a general sitting-room, which four young women unite in adorning with photographs and fried grasses and bric-a-brac; where they tie sashes on the chairs and necklies on the vases to their hearts' content. Out of this room open four "cubicles"—remember, you must call them nothing but "cubicles," whether you know what the term means or not. They are only little nooks where each girl preserves the sanctity of her own tooth-brush and hair-pins, where she has her crying spells all to herself, and dreams her dreams of future greatness on a single bed with band-boxes beneath it and wearing apparel hung round about. When she can pause long enough in her wild career after fame and emancipation and things, long enough to eat, she satisfies her inner woman with food served in a restaurant on the ground floor. That is a "Dorothy," as they have them in London, built on the plan of chambers for men, and the girls declare it's awfully jolly. There is a kind of brave, stoical heroism which deserves canonizing in the woman who dwells thus alone with her kind and hides her anguish from an unfeeling world. It requires a female Mark Tapley to be any thing like jolly when sharing the somewhat dreary companionship of her own sex and missing the salt and spice and spur of man's proximity. Women living continually without men are apt to develop an alarming penchant for wrappers, loose shoes, weak-tea, sentimentality and sweetmeats that is any thing but hilarious in effect. Of course it sounds like heresy to say so and is almost unwomanly to utter such radical sentiments. When Adam found himself alone in the garden he made such a time about it that a companion was created for him, but I suppose if Eve had been fashioned first she would have gone drooping and moping about the garden to this day, never daring to acknowledge that a man would be an agreeable companion, and working herself in a great state of excitement over the study of the habits of some bird or bug that she cared nothing about or the investigation of some plant or flower growth. As a little boy said of the Creator: "God knew what He was about" when He made man first.—N. Y. Sun.

SAMBO'S ARGUMENT.

The Sleeping-Car Porter's Side of the Popular Tip Story.

A sleeping-car porter of more than average intelligence was drawn out on the story that employes in positions like his live in palaces when not on a run, wear diamonds, and give receptions at certain seasons.

"You would not expect me to confess that I am making money above my salary, even if it were true," he said. "I think that the story of our wealth originated with the man whose soul was tucked under the wings of the eagle on a quarter of a dollar. Suppose we have a dozen sleepers on each run, and that is above the average; out of that number it is safe to say that four will be women and children. That leaves eight passengers for us to 'work,' as the saying is. Out of that eight maybe four will hand us from ten cents to twenty-five cents, and we have more of the former than of the latter. The tip averages ten cents the year round. Say we make a dollar a run out of passengers—I mean the sleepers—we call them sleepers to distinguish them from the other passengers. There is a dollar. I suppose you think the porter puts that in his pocket. Well, if he is an old man on the road and has influence at headquarters he keeps all he can get—I don't deny that. But let me tell you something that isn't generally known. There is a spy on every train that goes out of Chicago or runs into it. I don't mean to say that the company puts a spy on every train, though it is sometimes done. But the spy is there just the same. He may want the job of porter for himself or friend. He reports every inattention and shortcoming of the man who has the job. Or the spy may be a spy for revenue only, as is frequently the case. The spy may be in any position from train-boy up, and the minute the porter finds out who he is he begins to pay him tribute, unless, as I said before, the porter is solid at headquarters. To make a long story short the porter has to pay out half he makes to hold his job. That's so, and every porter knows it. The newspapers have lots of fun at our expense, but they wouldn't think it was so funny if they had the job for awhile. I am not kicking, for I am one of the solid ones. But I know the business from the bottom up."—Chicago Tribune.

The Reward of Knowledge.

A Brooklyn manufacturer paid a bill without a murmur the other day simply on account of the way it was worded. His engineer found that the hot water pump would not work and sent for a machinist. The latter bothered with it half a day and said it must come apart. This meant a stoppage of the factory for a long time. It was suggested that a neighboring engineer be sent for as he was a sort of genius in the matter of machinery. He came, and after studying the pump awhile he took a hammer and gave three sharp raps over the valve. "I reckon she'll go now," he quietly said, and, putting on steam, "she" did go. "The next day," says the manufacturer, "I received a bill from him for $25.50. The price amazed me, but when I had examined the items I drew a check at once. The bill read this way: 'Messrs. Blank & Co., Dr. to John Smith. For fixing pump, 50 cents; for knowing how, $25.' Had he charged me $25.50 for fixing the pump I should have considered it exorbitant. But 50 cents was reasonable, and I recognize the value of knowledge, so I paid and said nothing."—Chicago Herald.

WOULD-BE SLEUTHS.

Youths Who Aspire to Be Full-Fledged Detectives.

The Mournful Tale of Joel Radkin—He Came to Chicago, Only to Find That His Genius Wasn't Appreciated There.

There is probably no occupation which for the romantically inclined dime-novel fiend possesses such a charm as that of the detective.

To the brave boy with nerve of iron and sagacity unparalleled, who sits on the shady side of a straw-stack ten hours out of the twenty-four reading tales of "Fang-Tooth Jim the Jumper," "Handsome Harry the Hustler," or "Scar-Faced Scully the Scout," the life of the detective is crammed full and running over with poetry. In fact, his lot is cast but a few miles this side of Paradise.

The idea, says the Chicago News, of being the very brain which dictates the movements of the strong arm of the law is to the heated imaginations of these amateur grangers something sublime. To rectify the wrongs of the innocent and helpless, to pursue to conviction the villainous perpetrator of the deeds of darkness, to hound to the gallows foul murderers, is, thinks the heroic embryo, the acme of earthly glory.

Such being the case, it is not strange that so many applications are received by the detective agencies for positions. There are scattered through the country agencies which advertise for men to do detective work in the counties of their residence, and it is this sort of an institution which generally "catches" the grangers. Advertisements are sown broadcast in the country papers, and upon application from an ambitious youth, he is cheerfully accepted. The applicant is at once informed by mail of his appointment as a detective, and requested to advance the sum of five dollars as payment for his star, credentials, etc. This the future Pinkerton is always ready to do, and upon sending in his cash he receives a large glittering tin star, a beautifully worded certificate of appointment, and instructions to lie low and await developments.

The agency, in addition to the above, generally vouchsafes the information that an important case is developing in the new detective's locality which will shortly be placed in his hands. "Only this and nothing more," for no matter how long the young sleuth waits for further instructions, they come not. It is a straight case of "soak," sufficient to cure the detective fever in most cases, and, as a general thing, the victim settles down to farm life and sets up a country grocery, with nothing to remind him of his youthful folly but his fading credentials and rusting star. In some instances, however, the would-be sleuth makes a more systematic effort to reach the much-to-be-desired goal, and makes application in person to the bona-fide agencies in the large cities. Such applications are not of rare occurrence in the agencies of Chicago, and many amusing incidents growing out of them can be told.

The applicants classified as dime-novel readers are almost exclusively fresh from farms or country towns, where the excessive quiet renders a desire for almost any sort of excitement natural. The youths, for they are always young, generally have an exaggerated idea of the important figure they are to cut in their new sphere which makes their ignorance more laughable than it would otherwise appear.

One of the most verdant of these specimens was Mr. Joel Albatross Radkin, Jr., from Switzerland County, Ind., who not long since applied for a position at one of the prominent detective agencies of this city. Joel was a picture, a chromo, a landscape. He was built upon that slim, slender plan which has been disguised by some inhuman punster as the "raillery of nature," and was about as inartistic a piece of architecture as one would see in a day's journey. An extremely small head, light blue eyes, a long, pointed nose, shocky straw-colored hair, a wide mouth, a form like a clothes-horse, and Joel Albatross is described. Joel is, in his neighborhood, accounted a literary phenomenon, for not only has he read "heaps and piles" of the Seaside Library and other dark tales, but he has even, wondrous to relate, written several Indian stories and two or three poems, a stanza from one of the latter being hereby published as a proof of the young man's genius:

"Oh, blest be the West, the far away West;
The land of the sword and guns,
Where the brave heroes the dark robber mows
Down, and also the Injuns."

Such talent could not long remain unnoticed, and Joel soon became the sage of his township. But he longed for a more glorious field in which to earn fame and fortune, and determined to seek it in our own windy city. Accordingly he gathered together what fire-arms he could scrape up in the neighborhood and landed in Chicago.

He immediately sought out one of the agencies here, and firmly grasping the old army musket which he carried entered the presence of the superintendent.

"I want to be a detective," he calmly announced, a ha-the-villain-still-pursues-her expression stealing over his noble countenance. "I'm from Indiany, and I ain't no slouch of a detective, you bet," continued Joel to the superintendent, who stood aghast, gazing at the apparition. "I've been a modling my cayreer arter Deadwood Dick, and am good enough in detectin' now to commence biz."

"Think so?" inquired the official, regaining his composure. "So you're from Indiana, hey? I would have supposed from your general appearance that you were from New York or London."

"Is that so?" said the delighted heir of the Radkins.

"I thought this here outfit of mine would fetch 'em," he continued to himself. "I ain't no dern fool, and I knowed this here muskit and butcher-knife was the proper thing fer a detective. Wall, mister, can you give me a case to begin work on immediately to once?"

"Well, don't be so fast. Suppose you give me some of the experience you have had in this work."

"Wall," said Joel, leaning his gun in a corner and sitting down on the superintendent's desk, "I hev had a right smart of experience, I kin tell you. I have run down more villyuns than any other feller in Switzerland County. One time there wuz a feller stealing pap's watermelyons an' I determined to run him to the earth. (That's what they say in the story books.) So I disguised myself with a pair of rope whiskers and man's green goggles and went out after dark one night, an' I laid for the villyun. He came, I saw an' he run like thunder. But he dropped a sack in his haste. With a stealthy tread I crept to where it lay, seized it and bore it away in triumph. It had on it Si Bradley's name, and ever afterward I knowed who it was who stole them melyons.

"Then one day I captured a feller what stole a buggy whip. I seed him take it, an' it only took me three days to prove it, and get it back. Oh, as I said before, I ain't no slouch."

"Perhaps not," said the superintendent, "but I feel that our agency is not a fit place in which to utilize your remarkable talents. I would suggest that you go back to Indiana armed with firm determination and that musket, and henceforth consecrate your life to the killing of fools. Should that gun chance some day to shoot out of the wrong end, then so much is gained. No, there is no opening for you, except the one which the carpenter, foreseeing your visit, kindly provided. Please take advantage of it as soon as possible; turn the knob to the right."

Joel did so with a dazed and dreamy expression filling every nook and corner of his extensive countenance. As one in a dream he took the first train for Indiana, where he is probably even now engaged in ferreting out deep-laid plots against hen-coops and melon patches with all the skill ever displayed by a professional from Scotland Yard.

MR. RADKINS ASKS FOR A JOB.

"That fellow," said the official who related the story, "was a fair sample of the granger applicant for positions. They come here in all grades of verdancy and ignorance, eager for excitement and renown, generally leaving about as Mr. Radkin did. It takes a mighty smart man to be a detective, the principal acquirements being the ability to keep one's mouth shut. We get most of our men from the ranks of the police force and places of that order. Even with that sort of a man it takes at least a year's training to make a reliable detective, and you can imagine the labor it would require to manufacture a first-class man out of such material as Joel. That sort of fellow may generally rely on being given the key to the street."

Youthful Depravity.

"Papa," he asked, "don't wasps build their nests of mud?"

"They do, my son," said his father.

"Are wasps good for any thing?"

"So far as we know, Willie, they are not."

"Then the mud is wasted, isn't it?"

"I presume it is."

"Then it's just like our Irene, isn't it?"

"How so?"

"Because it's wasp-wasted?"

And the strong man, who had always felt hopes that Willie some time would enter the ministry, went out to the coal-shed and wept.—Chicago Tribune.

NOISY IMMIGRANTS.

Anxious to Learn the Language—The Increase in the Parrot Trade—Where the Birds Come from and Their Value.

The Ward Steamship Company enjoys the distinction of being the line which brings the noisiest immigrants that are received at this port, says the New York Tribune. But Superintendent Weber has not yet called on Collector Erhardt to prohibit even one of them from landing, and as they all, at least, try to learn the language of the country, the presumption is that they make good American citizens. Yet seven or eight thousand of them have already been landed at this port this summer. That fact has so far escaped the newspapers, and they come in hundreds. It was on Tuesday that three or four hundred arrived, and they had to discover themselves to several visitors to the Ward steamer, in order to make their presence generally known, and this they did in their own way. They were probably trying to give their impressions of the country when they were first approached. They succeeded in attracting attention, at all events, for they raised such a hubbub of whirring and fluttering, punctuated with squawks and squeaks underneath their tarpaulin cover, that the visitors naturally inquired what caused the noise.

"Parrots," replied a dark-complexioned man, who seemed to feel as strong proprietary interest in the birds as a large and vigorous Thomas cat who was prancing gayly around the scene. "See!" said the dark man as he threw back the tarpaulin, disclosing to view swarms of young Mexican and Cuban parrots, who fluttered wildly and screeched in a dozen keys as the light entered their cages. They were pretty birds and had been caught in their nests only a fortnight or so before the steamer sailed from Havana.

"There are only 300 or 400 of them," said the parrot-tender in a tone as if he generally considered parrots in the abstract rather than in the concrete. "On the last voyage," he continued, "I had 900 to take care of," and he said it as if the caring for 1,000 parrots was a mere bagatelle. "Was I alone? Certainly, except that Thomas here volunteered his assistance after we left Havana, when he killed a big rat that wandered too near the cages. One healthy, vigorous rat will kill four or five parrots or a dozen canaries in one night. He will eat a parrot's brains and suck its blood in no time.

"Parrots don't have brains? It is a curious fact that the parrot has been so closely identified with history. Aristotle wrote about parrots. I've read it in an encyclopedia. Nero's explorers whom he sent to Africa discovered parrots and brought them back to Rome, where the Romans kept them in tortoise-shell cages Some Romans fed the lions with parrots. But when the Romans began to eat the parrot, then began the decline of the Roman Empire. Now, do you know (confidentially) that the South Americans, some of them I don't say all, eat parrots, and I don't know but that accounts for the South American troubles."

The parrot-tender was getting excited, but he calmed down when his visitors asked how the business of importing parrots to this country has developed. "It has grown to large dimensions within the last twenty years," he said, "and is a big business. There are two large establishments in New York City, Bartels' and Ruhe's, who import from 5,000 to 10,000 a year from the South Americas, Mexico and Cuba. This year there has been so much rainy weather in the parrot countries that breeding was interfered with, and the result has been that there is a falling off in numbers. The old birds nest in holes in high trees, and the rain drowns the young ones.

"We catch parrots when they are young, only a few months old. Indians and natives climb the trees and 'pull the nest.' They take the birds to the seaports, and we buy them there. We are not worried over reports that parrots are becoming scarce. That is not true. Bringing the birds here causes us the worst trouble.

"First we have to look out for the rats, and second the weather. We stow the parrots away in a warm place and cover the cages with a tarpaulin. They are very susceptible to changes in the weather. I have had nearly an entire consignment die on a voyage. We feed them on pilot bread and sugared water when they are young. I don't give old parrots pilot bread, but feed them on hempseed. Well, when we get our birds safely in port they are distributed wholesale to small dealers throughout the city and country, who retail them. The gray, or African, is the most expensive parrot, but it is rather rare.

"It is the best, too, but many people think that the Mexican parrot is the best talker. The Mexican is a large bird, and has a green and yellow head. There is also the Mexican double-yellow head. I have a Mexican bird that can sing 'Peek-a-boo,' and I would not take $300 for him. A valuable parrot is in the Brazilian Amazon, a green bird with a little blue above his head. But speaking of these parrots we got from Mexico and Cuba, the Cuban is the most numerous and cheapest. They sell from $24 to $36 a dozen. They have white heads, red throats and green bodies, and don't learn to speak very plain. The Mexicans bring from $3.50 to $5 apiece, the Africans $10, and the single yellow heads from South America $5.

"The blue head Amazon is scarce now, and I think that the Indians are eating them. Their flesh is exceedingly delicate. Last year about 15,000 parrots were imported to the United States, of which 8,000 or 10,000 were from Cuba, and the rest were from Mexico and other countries. We get only a few hundred from Africa. France sends to Africa for parrots, and we export many parrots to England, Germany and Belgium.

"You will find the parrot every where, and he makes a good citizen. The last time I was in Holland I saw one that was 150 years old, but by George, he was a cucatoo. Still, he was a species of parrot."

THIS IS QUEER.

The Trick Is Simple, But It Is Puzzling After All—Try It.

Take a strip of paper of any convenient length and breadth, bend it into a ring, giving it a half-twist on the way, and uniting the ends with gum. It will then appear as above.

Now, if you divide this ring lengthwise along the dotted line, what result will follow?

At first sight, it certainly looks as if you would produce two similar rings. Take a pair of scissors, and try.

You will find, when you have cut through the length of the ring, that instead of having two you still possess one ring or band, but twice the length of the original one, and with a double twist or "kink" in it difficult to describe. On repeating the cut, you will, however, obtain two bands, curiously linked together and inseparable.

The experiment may be varied, with equally unforeseen consequences, either by commencing the first cut at a distance from the edge of the ring equa' to one-third of its breadth, and continuing twice round until the band is divided, or by giving the paper an entire twist before gumming.

A little consideration will perhaps enable you to account for these singular results, the strangeness of which, I may add, has been thought to afford some sort of illustration of what is called the fourth dimension—a condition of existence other than ours, with regard to which men of abstract science have recently indulged in some remarkable speculations bearing on the nature of the spiritual world.

For the information of those to whom such speculations are new, I will briefly explain that what we know as space is contained in three dimensions—viz., length, breadth and height, and by these three dimensions all our movements are circumscribed.

But it is conceivable that another race of beings may exist who can move and see in a fourth direction (which we may describe as inwardness, but which is only known to us in theory). Such a condition of existence, although supernatural to us, yet may be normal and natural to spiritual beings.

At any rate, the possibility of this fourth dimension has become a matter of speculation to certain able mathematicians, and the subject has even a religious value, as affording an answer to those who deny the existence of anything which is outside the sphere of sense and experience, by showing that the supernatural is not necessarily opposed to the convictions of the highest scientific minds.—Rev. J. R. Bartlett in Golden Days.

WHO ATE THE PEARS?

Two Children Didn't Want Any Dinner on Account of Them.

Will is a long-legged, crop-headed boy of five; Josepha a chunky, sturdy-limbed, curly-pated lass of three. If it wasn't such a long word I would tell you that they were inseparables; that is, whenever you see Will's sharp little nose poked round a corner, you may be sure Josepha's fat, bare feet are twinkling along behind him.

They live in the country, and their play-ground is a big, open place, bounded on one side by a stable, cow-house and blacksmith's shop, and on the other by the corn-crib and tool-house. There they collect at least ten other little children, belonging on the big farm, and have royal times, to judge by the noise they make.

We got a bushel of fine pears the other day, and Will and Jo at once petitioned for some to take to "the chillun." So I filled their two little buckets with as many pears as I thought a dozen children ought to eat, well knowing they would be fairly divided.

It occurred to me once or twice after they left, that the tea-party was astonishingly quiet, but children can play quiet games, sometimes, I said to myself, and thought nothing of it. When nurse brought them in for their mid-day nap, I was engaged with company, so I did not see them until our two o'clock dinner. They came down to the dining-room looking clean and rosy after a bath and nap, but strangely solemn. There were no exclamations at sight of the sliced tomatoes, and instead of falling upon the fried chicken like little starved bear cubs, Josepha rested her short chin meditatively in her pink palm, and Will looked as if life were not worth living.

"I don't think I want any dinner," said the head partner; "I don't fink I wants any," echoed the junior member of the firm.

"Why, what's the matter?" I cried in surprise.

"Well, you see," said Will, gloomily, "the chillun had all gone away, every one of 'em."

"To tamp-meetin'," prompted Jo.

"And so," continued the little boy in a depressed voice, "we had to eat all the pears by ourselves!"

And they really had eaten a bucket of pears apiece! I don't know why they didn't die of cholera morbus, but somehow they didn't, and the only evil that came of it was their not having any more pears for two weeks.—Youth's Companion.

"No More Doctors for Me."

"They said I was consumptive, sent me to Florida, told me to keep quiet, no excitement, and no tennis. Just think of it. One day I found a little book called 'Guide to Health,' by Lydia E. Pinkham, and in it I found out what ailed me. So I wrote to her, got a lovely reply; she told me just what to do, and I am in splendid health now. She informed me that she likes to receive such letters of confidence, as they appeal to her as a mother, and how glad she is to have the records of her life's experience among women made available to all women. These records are the largest in the world, and contain facts that cannot be found elsewhere. Thus will her noble work be perpetuated."

"Why, Are You Sick?"

"I know precisely how you feel; it is that nervous, irritable feeling, your back troubles you, and when you try to read a little your head aches. Isn't that so? I knew it. Oh, bother the doctor! Get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and take it faithfully as I have done. I've been through this thing myself, but am never troubled now."

"I am Sure it Would Help Them."

Thousands of delicate young ladies, employed in fashionable dry goods, millinery, and other stores, others in mills, factories, workshops, etc., where through the long day they are constantly on their feet. Among this class some of the worst cases of female diseases occur, and when their ill-health becomes apparent they are at once discharged.

The society girls who are whirled along in the excitement of fashionable life, and who overlook those minor ailments, that if not checked are death to health and beauty.

Actresses, singers, and others of the profession, do not always think; they rush into the tide of popularity regardless of all save fame and fortune. How often we read of some favorite actress, "Ill in London, nervous prostration," etc.

Prudent women, who best understand their ailments, find in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a remedy for all those distressing ills that require prompt and effective treatment as a guaranty to good health.

THE DEFENSE WEAK

The Testimony for Birchall Very Inconclusive.

CORONER'S JURYMEN TESTIFY.

The Witnesses Contradict Themselves on Many Points.

A Web of Circumstantial Evidence Encircles the Prisoner—He Is Paler Than Usual and Takes Little Interest in the Trial—The Case Expected to Go to the Jury on Monday.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Sept. 27.—Reginald Birchall, alleged assassin, sat in court and smiled all morning. The leading witnesses for the Crown had been heard. They had told some startling stories, which, like a vast web, seemed to have encircled the prisoner. He didn't seem to care a rap, however.

Birchall was interested in the array of young woman who had struggled into court with streaming umbrellas and ill-smelling waterproofs. He looked paler than usual when Mr. Blackstock started in to paint his case in rosy colors, as though that was the sickening part of his ordeal.

The Defence.

Mr. Blackstock opened the case for the defence. He said: "We entertain very strong opinions as to the insufficiency of the Crown's case, but will not discuss that at present, for obvious reasons. He introduced the certificate of Birchall's marriage in England to Florence Stevenson on November 19, 1888, proving that if in England then, he could not have been in Blenheim swamp in October of that year as the witness testified."

John Rabb, who spoke with a decidedly German accent, was the first witness. John is a character in appearance and one of the most picturesque witnesses yet seen in the box. He said: "I live about half a mile from the spot where the body was found; could see from my house to the road opposite the spot; on Tuesday, the 18th, heard two shots fired and saw two men coming out of the swamp and walking west; one shot went off right after the other.

Several of the Coroner's jurymen testified that they had visited the swamp the next day after the body was found and that there were tracks of two men in the snow entering the swamp where the body was found, going in on one side and out on the other side. These tracks, the witnesses testified, were old ones. But the cross-examinations by Mr. Osler made these men contradict themselves on many points and made them admit there was no sleet in the holes, but light snow, when it was a fact that there had been sleet falling on the night of the 18th.

Three other witnesses testified to having sworn at the Coroner's inquest as having seen a man resembling the deceased selling silver polish around Woodstock on or about the 17th of February; others that they had seen him selling jewelry, clothing, etc. Mr. Blackstock asked the indulgence of the court till Monday to prepare his case to go the jury, to which his honor acquiesced.

The general impression here is that the defence so far presented is weak in the extreme and that the case will go to the jury on Monday at the latest.

VICTIMS OF THE WIRE.

Two Young Men Meet With a Sudden Death in Massachusetts.

WINCHENDEN, Mass., Sept. 27.—Edward Tryan, aged 18, and George Barnard, aged 20, were instantly killed last night by an electric light guy wire coming in contact with an incandescent circuit on Pond street.

The wire had been taken from the Boston & Albany depot to allow a building to be moved, and was left hanging in a coil by the side of the pole. Both young men had hold of the wire. Barnard's hands were badly burned, and it is supposed that Tryan attempted to assist him and himself fell a victim.

Word was telephoned to the station, where the current was shut off so the men could be released. They belonged in Granville Corners.

Failures During the Week.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Bradstreet's reports 179 failures in the United States during the week, against 167 in the preceding week and 180 in the corresponding week of 1889. The Middle States had 53; New England, 31; Southern, 20; Western, 47; Northwestern, 21; Pacific, 6; Territories, 1. Canada had 31, an increase of 1 over the previous week.

Wants Damages for Both Parties.

WATERBURY, Conn., Sept. 27.—Mrs. S. M. Camp of Bridgeport has sued E. A. Camp of this city for divorce and alimony, asking damages and alimony of $50,000. In addition she sues Mrs. L. E. Pearsall of Fulton Market, New York, for alienating the affections of her husband, E. A. Camp, whom she employs in New York city as business manager.

Declines to be a Candidate.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Sept. 27.—Hon. Milton Delano, Congressman from this district, has sent an open letter to the Republican positively declining to be a candidate for re-election, on the ground that he cannot afford another term in Washington.

Died of Bright's Disease.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—William Paton, a well known retired merchant of this city, died of Bright's disease last evening, after an illness extending over two or three years. Mr. Paton was born in Edinburgh, Scotland in 1818.

FOULLY BUTCHERED

The Murder of Annie LeConey Startingly Recalled.

MRS. JOHN MILLER THE VICTIM.

Slashed and Mutilated While Returning to Her Home.

Robbery the Motive for the Terrible Crime—Overwhelming Proof Against the Fiend—The Body Discovered by a Searching Party—The Suspected Murderer and the LeConey Tragedy.

CAMDEN, N. J., Sept. 27.—A startling murder, peculiarly resembling in many features the cruel butchery of Annie Leconey a year ago, stirred the people of the same vicinity. Annie Miller, the wife of John Miller, a young farmer, was found with her head almost completely severed from the trunk, partly concealed in a clump of bushes a half mile from her home.

That she had had a frightful struggle for life was evident at every turn. Though the rain had beaten down, it had not obscured the indentations in the earth. Her left hand had been caught in the teeth of her assailant and shockingly bitten.

Mrs. Miller had gone to Moorestown in the morning and was returning to her home. She got off at Merchantville, and took a short cut across fields and a piece of woods.

Little Nellie De Hadroy and her brother passed Mrs. Miller on the road between 2 and 3 o'clock, and they saw her walk toward the dense woods. About a hundred yards ahead of her they saw a negro also enter the woods. That was the last seen of Mrs. Miller alive.

She failed to appear at the farm house, and a searching party soon discovered the awful truth.

Francis Lingo, a burly negro, against whom there was a strong chain of circumstantial evidence in the Leconey murder, and who was the first man arrested for that crime, had been at work on the farm. He quit early on account of the rain, saying he was going to Philadelphia. He did not go, and was found at his house. He answers the description of the man the people saw go into the woods. He was arrested and taken to Merchantville.

A piece of old blue flannel shirt found at the scene of the murder was fitted into a torn place in his sleeve and he identified the fragment. He was committed to the county jail. Coroner Stanton took charge of the case and empaneled a jury of farmers to hold an inquest.

TIPPERARY QUIET.

O'Brien and Dillon to Leave for America on Thursday.

TIPPERARY, Sept. 27.—A deluge of telegrams from England, Scotland and America has poured in upon the Nationalist leaders at Tipperary expressing sympathy with the prisoners and disgust at the brutality of the police.

Colonel Caddell, the presiding magistrate at the trial, seems determined to deprive the accused of all facilities so far as lies in his power. He refused to allow the police ranks to be inspected in order that the Nationalists could pick out the men who had shown the most conspicuous brutality in the street attack upon the members of Parliament. This will probably make it impossible for the sufferers to obtain any redress for the assaults committed upon them.

The session of the court for the trial of the conspiracy cases lasted only a few minutes. When the hour for opening came the presiding magistrate announced that it would be impossible to go on with the cases as the judge of the county court required the building. Mr. Healey protested against the delay, but he was overruled and court adjourned.

The address with which the Government counsel, Mr. Ronan, opened the prosecution was a regular campaign speech; a rehash of all the crimes and alleged crimes that have occurred in Ireland for years past. It made evident the fact that the charges against the prisoners are mere pretexts, and that the movement is directed against the Parnellite party as a whole, and is a political, not a criminal, prosecution.

The arrangements of Mr. O'Brien and Mr. Dillon are that they are to sail on Thursday next for America. So the matter resolves itself into a race of time between the two sides, or, as Mr. O'Brien says, "between the counsel for the Crown and our ship."

Mr. John Morley, who has been personally investigating the condition of affairs in Ireland, departed for England.

Seized By the Sheriff.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27.—The Prouty and Barr boot and shoe company of 837 Market street has been seized by the sheriff on judgments aggregating $53,151. The firm declined to make any statement or give any details except those on the records.

PEOPLE MURDERED.

Women and Children Killed by the Troops in Goa.

CALCUTTA, Sept. 27.—It is reported that the troops in Goa are committing the wildest excesses, shooting people indiscriminately.

Several popular leaders have been arrested and shot in their residences. The residences of others are besieged and a lively fusillade proceeds between besiegers and besieged.

Numbers of people have fled to the sanctuary of the cathedral in old Goa. It is rumored that the Governor-General is in hiding in the palace, and is deaf to petitions from the inhabitants. Many women and children who fled thither for protection have been bayonetted by the palace guard.

Several dynamite bombs have been thrown into the palace by a band of citizen soldiers. The Governor justifies the acts of the troops, on the ground that a revolution has been declared. It estimated that 300 persons were killed and wounded in two days' fighting.

Meetings of Goanese have been held in Bombay to denounce the Government of Goa and to ask for British annexation.

TRIED TO DIE IN HIS CELL.

Three Attempts at Suicide by a Prisoner in a Newark Police Station.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 27.—William Hilderbrandt, a six-foot German living at No. 35 Ridge street, made three attempts on his life while confined in a cell at the Second Police Precinct. Hilderbrandt threatened to break the windows of the station and was promptly locked up, and a few moments later was found suspended from a cell bar.

He was cut down and again attempted to end his life by choking himself with his handkerchief. The third time he brought his suspenders into requisition, but was foiled, and he was sent to the county jail.

"The Old Folks at Home."

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—A movement is on foot to erect a monument to Stephen G. Foster, the composer of "The Old Folks at Home" and many other celebrated American songs. William J. Noble, a former resident of Pittsburg, is interesting himself in the matter and has conditionally arranged with D. E. Shehan, the sculptor, to fashion the statue. It is expected that before many months the monument will be erected in Allegheny Park, Pittsburg.

Mrs. Fremont Don't Need Further Aid.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 27.—Mrs. Jessie Benton Fremont, the widow of Gen. John C. Fremont, has addressed a letter to the editor of the "Times" in which she expresses great gratitude for the timely aid rendered during the recent financial straits of herself and daughter. She states further that in view of the passage of a bill granting her a pension the emergency has been tided over and she desires no further financial aid.

Von der Ahe Getting Even.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 27.—Von der Ahe is getting even with some of his men who are alleged to have signed Brotherhood contracts. Shorty Fuller, the famous little shortstop, was fined $100 yesterday and laid off for the season. He is charged with drinking a glass of beer, but the real reason is that he signed a contract with Comiskey.

Corporal Tanner an Editor.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Sept. 27.—Corporal James Tanner assumed editorial control of the Republic, a monthly illustrated magazine devoted to the interest and entertainment of the old soldiers. He will continue to reside in Washington, where he has a lucrative pension practice, and will conduct the literary department from there.

The Atlantic Squadron.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 27.—The vessels of the North Atlantic Squadron are ordered here for speed and turning trials Thursday Oct. 2.

M'AULIFFE WHIPPED

Fairly Knocked Out by Slavin This Morning.

HE ONLY LASTED TWO ROUNDS.

Thousands of Dollars Changed Hands on the Result.

The American Contingent Heavy Losers. Both Men in the Pink of Condition. The Battle Took Place Before the Ormonde Club—Slavin Carried from the Room on the Shoulders of His Admirers.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The postponed fight between Joe McAuliffe, the pugilist from the Pacific Slope, and Frank P. Slavin, the strong boy from the Antipodes, took place at the Ormonde Club, at 4 o'clock this morning.

Two rounds were fought and Slavin was declared the winner.

In the first round the men advanced to the centre of the ring when time was called.

Both men looked in the pink of condition, as if fit to fight for a man's life.

After brief preliminary sparring, during which no damage was done, Slavin lunged with his right rather low.

McAuliffe countered with his left, but missed the blow, which would have been disastrous to the Australian had it landed.

McAuliffe quickly recovered and planted his left effectively, following the blow with his right.

An exchange of blows followed, McAuliffe having decidedly the best of it when the men broke away.

The spectators were highly excited, and the friends of the American cheered him wildly.

Slavin caught a heavy blow from McAuliffe's right on the chest. This roused him, and he promptly retaliated, the exchange ending with McAuliffe's falling to escape punishment.

The second round had still nearly one minute to run when McAuliffe was laid sprawling on the sawdust totally unable to rise in ten seconds. He had to be assisted to his corner. The fight was declared over and Slavin's friends rushed into the ring, lifted him on their shoulders amid immense cheering. Slavin is a perfect demon in the prize ring and any American who comes here to fight him and win must be a first class left-hand hitter, as Slavin gives lots of opportunities away by the too frequent use of his right hand.

McAuliffe's friends are crestfallen and lost heavy on the fight. Richard K. Fox and Charlie Mitchell are out hundreds of dollars.

To Decide Their Political Course.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 27.—The British American Association of Massachusetts has issued a call for a special convention in Boston, October 14, to consider the adoption of a platform for political action to decide what course the party will follow in the coming campaign and to give endorsement to such candidates as shall be considered true to American institutions and honest Government.

THE TARIFF AGREEMENT.

The Senate Reciprocity Feature Preserved in the Bill.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—The conference report on the Tariff bill provides that the new law shall go into effect October 6, 1890.

The Senate reciprocity feature is preserved in the bill, but the date for it to go into effect has been changed from July 1, 1891 to January 1, 1892.

The duty on binding twine of all kinds is put at seven-tenths of a cent per pound, and the provision for this article is made to apply to binding twine made in part from istle or tampico fibre, manilla, sisal grass or sunn.

The sugar schedule provides that all sugars not above No. 16, Dutch standard, all tank bottom, all sugar drainings and sugar sweepings, syrups of cane juice, melada, concentrated melada and concrete and concentrated molasses and molasses shall be placed on the free list. This is the House provision, subject, however, to the restrictions of the reciprocity feature which empowers the President to suspend the free admission of sugar, molasses, coffee, tea and hides under certain conditions.

The conference changed the time for the bonded period to go into effect to February 1, 1891. The provision relative to the bonded period allows merchandise deposited prior to October 1, 1889, to be withdrawn at the present rates of duty before the time the period goes into effect. It is also provided that when duties are based upon the weight of merchandise deposited prior to October 1 the duties shall be levied upon the weight of the merchandise at the time of its withdrawal.

Mrs. Clarkson Very Ill.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—The wife of ex-Assistant Postmaster-General Clarkson is lying ill with malignant diphtheria at his residence here. Her condition is so serious that Mr. Clarkson has not left her bedside for two days and a physician is in constant attendance, but to-day some improvement is noticed. Mrs. Clarkson is one of the loveliest women in Washington society, as well as one of the most popular.

Death of a Member of Parliament.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The Hon. Alfred John Francis Egerton, member of the House of Commons for the Eccles division of Lancashire, which he represented as a Conservative since 1885, is dead. He was the brother of the Earl of Ellesmere, and was formerly a lieutenant in the Grenadier Guards.

WHITE HOUSE DECORATION.

A Number of the Rooms Much Improved in Appearance.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—The work on the interior decoration of the White House that has been in progress during the past two weeks has been completed, and as soon as the paint dries the house will be ready for the occupancy of the Presidential family. The improvements made in the mansion are quite extensive, and the dingy appearance of many of the rooms has given way to a bright and artistic arrangement of soft colors peculiarly pleasing in their entirety.

The main corridors, in which is located the private stairway, has been subjected to the most elaborate decoration. The walls are finished in plastic combing of ecru with an elaborate frieze in plastic roughing with metallic ornamentation. The private dining room has been finished in old gold of an elaborate pattern, and the small anteroom on the same floor in old rose. On the second floor the President's apartment is finished in yellow and buff, with extensive ornamentaiton about the windows and borders in bright gold, which blends so harmoniously with the other tints that the effect is peculiarly pleasing.

Mrs. Dimmick's room, at the front of the building, is in blue and cream colors combined in a pattern selected by Mrs. Harrison. The room occupied by Rev. Dr. Scott has been frescoed, papered and painted in soft cream colors, and the official rooms have also been thoroughly renovated and finished in delicate tints. Altogether the effect is artistic in every respect and has been approved highly by Mrs. Harrison and the President. The rooms that are open to the public have not been changed.

An Insane Woman's Awful Fall.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 27.—In attempting to escape from the Monroe County Insane Asylum Ellen McCandless, one of the inmates, fell a distance of nearly forty feet and sustained injuries from which she died a few hours afterward. In some way Mrs. McCandless had obtained possession of a file and sawed two bars of the iron grating in the window of her room. By bending the other bars she made an aperture just large enough to admit her body. She tore her bed clothing into strips and formed a rope of them. The woman was 65 years old and had been an inmate of the asylum since 1885.

Fighting for a Japanese Murderer.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Lawyer Roger Sherman, who tried so hard by legal means to save the life of William Kemmler, has taken a second step toward saving the Japanese murderer, Jugiro, now imprisoned at Sing Sing. Mr. Sherman has cited Warden Brush of Sing Sing Prison to appear before the United States Supreme Court and show cause why he should kill Jugiro by electricity. He claims that under the treaty Jugiro is a citizen of Japan and is not amenable to the laws of the United States.

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. FORCE, Publishers and Proprietors.
J. A. DEMAREST, - - Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—The Sunday evening service at the Methodist Episcopal church, has been changed from 8 to 7:30 o'clock.

—The application of Chas. Greader, of Somerset street, for a wholesale liquor license, was granted by the Court at Somerville yesterday.

—Wetting the crosswalks is provided against by city ordinance, yet the watering carts daily violate this provision for the comfort of pedestrians.

—Robert Robinson, a gentleman of color, became befuddled with intoxicants last evening and went to sleep on the wrong man's doorstep. The police locked him up over night.

—Even Plainfield is not without its road hogs. Yesterday a man driving a team attached to a big heavy truck deliberately turned out of a road where there was an abundance of room, purposely crowded a bicycler into the gutter, ran his horses into him, and threw him to the ground, damaging both machine and rider.

—The meeting held in Hope chapel last evening under the auspices of the Hope Chapel Temperance club, was well attended. The services were conducted by the Rev. G. K. Newell, who spoke earnestly on the subject of temperance, chosing his text from the Epistle to the Romans. Messrs Gray and Firstbrook, also spoke. The pledge was signed by several young men.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Bertha Grundie, of Ravenna, Ohio, is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. L. Adams, at Force's hotel.

Rumors that F. E. Miller, owner of Netherwood Hotel, will reopen the Park House this Winter, are not true.

The latest addition to this city's professional men, is A. P. Roberts, formerly of Philadelphia, who has opened dentistry parlors at the corner of North and Park avenues.

Gen. Schwenk, of the Holly Grove Farm, Plainfield, has been awarded several premiums for the superiority of the choice herd of Jersey cattle exhibited by him at the State Fair at Waverly.

Mr. R. P. Moore now a resident of Fanwood and formerly one of the soloists of the vested choir of Calvary church, New York city, will assist the choir at the morning service at the Holy Cross church to-morrow. Early Communion will be celebrated at 8 A. M. Morning prayer and sermon at 11 A. M., and evening prayer at 5 P. M.

Apropos of an article entitled "Old Geographers," M. S. Simpson, M. D., of this city, sends to the Philadelphia Ledger, of Thursday last, a transcript from "An Account of the State of the Roman Catholick Religion Throughout the World. Written for the use of Pope Innocent XI [1670-1686, M. S. S.], by Monsieur Cerri, Secretary of the Congregation de Propaganda Fide. Translated from an Authentick Italian MS., by Sir Richard Steele [1716]."

Reckless Riding on the Public Streets.

A citizen whose indignation has been aroused at the alleged carelessness of some of the city's employes has asked for the ear of the Mayor, the Captain of Police, the Chief of the Fire Department, "the appreciated Street Commissioner," and others interested, through THE PRESS. The burden of his complaint is against the driver of the horses used in drawing the street roller over the new layers of crushed stone in the neighborhood of Park avenue, Seventh and Eighth streets. Every day this week, he says, as soon as work has stopped at noon and night, one of the men has mounted one horse, dashed rapidly down Park avenue, and caused the mate of the team also to gallop wildly along, riderless, and free to do whatever damage it pleased. Several narrow escapes from the hoofs of the flying steeds are reported, and the people who have witnessed the reckless racing are unanimous in asking that it be stopped.

Must Wait for the Next Grand Jury.

The friends of Henry Hess, of North Plainfield, who is accused by his wife of attempting to poison himself and child, are indignant because he was not given a chance to be freed—or indicted—by the Grand Jury in session this week. The jury is said to have waited half an hour after all other cases had been disposed of, to examine the witnesses against him, but they did not appear, and, indeed, had not been summoned. Hess himself did not reach the county seat until after the jury had been discharged. He is now a prisoner at Somerville, and must wait for the next Grand Jury to act on his case.

New Market's Mail Troubles.

A PRESS subscriber at New Market writes as follows:

"THE DAILY PRESS does not reach me till the second day after publication. For instance, Wednesday's PRESS does not arrive at this office until Friday morning, despite the fact that it is mailed promptly from Plainfield. No better illustration can be produced to show up the absurd mail facilities under present arrangements. Formerly, when our mail matter came via Dunellen on the Central Railroad, no such delays occured. Thirty-six hours is consumed for mail matter to travel 3½ miles."

WILD WHOOPS FROM THE ENEMY.

A Somerville Paper in a State of Mind Over the Crescents' Lost Game.

(From the Somerville Democrat.)

Turn that calcium the other way! Who are the people? We are the people. What's the matter with us? We're all right. Rah West, Rah End, Rah, Rah West End. Wonder if Plainfield is going to play Norwich again for the Inter-State championship. If so we'll persuade the Blue Fronts to try conclusions with the Brooklyns at the end of the season for the World's Championship. Seems to be just about as much sense in one, as in the other.

The Crescents moped around the field,
Up rose the West End whoop.
The West End boys came out on top—
Plainfield was in the soup.
Run the West End's pennant up,
Smooth down the Plainfield's mound.
The West Ends topped the highest notch,
Crescents are in the cold, cold ground.
The Somervilles cheered both loud and long,
As if of sense they were bereft,
And why? The score stood 5 to 2
And Plainfield had been left.
The boys they took the field that day,
They said, of course we'll win it;
When battle smoke had cleared away
The Crescents weren't in it.

This isn't exactly poetry, but then it was substantially what was sung by our boys when they struck town on Saturday night and headed by fife and drum, started up Main street, blazing brooms held high in the air, feet keeping time with happy hearts and throats—well, throats weren't in it. The boys had left their voices and a defeat in Plainfield. As each train reached town after the game, a procession was formed, and those who had not been fortunate enough to witness the game, cheered their returning townsmen. The climax of enthusiasm was finally capped when the team came home on the 7:35, escorted by a member of the Crescent club, Mr. George White, who had kindly furnished the West Enders with a trio of colored musicians. The club was cheered all along the route, George Gore, the hero of the hour coming in for no small share of it. Gore, Gore, the name sounds familiar. Not Gore of the Giants? The same, and thereby hangs a tale. On Friday night a telegram was received from O'Rourke, saying that it would be impossible for him to play. The general impression was that he was sick, and nothing more was thought of the matter, until a well-founded rumor came floating Somerville-wards that he was to catch for the Crescents. The rumor was soon substantiated by the Crescent management, who claimed that they had hired an outside pitcher, who was to furnish the other end of the battery and had engaged O'Rourke. To hire away a player from a club with which a game was to be played was something without parallel in the history of Somerville-Plainfield base-ball. The West Ends were hot, and the more they thought of the matter, the angrier they grew. Hot words passed between the West Ends and the Crescents on the train on their way from New York to Plainfield. Everyone seemed excited and in the last car of of the 10 o'clock a warm argument was carried on. Every one seemed to be talking except Mr. Burnett, the Crescent manager, who seemed to feel his position, and a tall handsomely dressed man, who sat in a corner of the car, sucking quietly on the head of his cane, with a faraway look in his eyes. No one seemed to know him, although occasionally a West Ender would stop for a moment to chat with him. The populi, however, knew just a little more about him, when three hours later he drove the ball far into left field and won the game for Somerville. It was Gore.

OBITUARY.

William Johnson.

William Johnson, who is well-known in this city, where he was a frequent visitor during his residence among the Hills of Somerset, back of North Plainfield, and who will be affectionately remembered by the surviving members of the old anti-slavery movement and by the elder generation of the Methodist Episcopal church, in New York city, died yesterday morning at his home, No. 354 Stuyvesant avenue, Brooklyn. He was born May 8, 1815, at Kingston-on-Hull, England, and was educated to follow his father's profession of architect and builder. Before he fully reached the age of manhood he came to America and for many years made his home in New York city, where he was associated in the construction of many notable houses, hurches and other buildings. His first work in this country was in the erection of the well-known row of brick and marble houses on the North side of Washington Square, between Fifth avenue and University place, which for more than half a century have been a landmark of New York city.

Mr. Johnson early became actively interested in the anti-slavery movement, of which he was for years a leader, and to which he devoted a large share of his time and means. His office was an important station on the "Underground Railroad," and he personally aided in the forwarding to freedom of many fugitive slaves. A reminiscence of one of the most romantic and exciting of these episodes was not long ago published under the caption of "A Slave-Hunt in New York." Mr. Johnson was from early years a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and was active and influential in its work in New York city. He was among those who most strenuously opposed the too-prevalent subserviency to pro-slavery sentiment, and was a member of the Wesleyan Methodist organization, which was formed at the Utica convention nearly fifty years ago, as a protest against any neutral or indifferent attitude on the slavery question. He was a man of great intellectual force and scholarly tastes. All his life he was an indefatigable collector and reader of the best books, and he amassed a large library, containing, besides standard modern and classical works, a considerable collection of the earliest printed books of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries. He was a congenial companion of many of the old "Knickerbocker" literati of New York city, and was a frequent contributor to the press of essays on current topics.

Mr. Johnson suffered much in the financial crisis of 1857, at which time he was heavily interested in the lumber trade, and in the Fall of that year went to New Providence, N. J., to live. He remained there until last year, when he removed to Brooklyn. He was twice married, and had six children. Of the two sons of his first wife, the elder, William Gervais, died at sea when a young man, and the younger, Samuel Justin Johnson, now lives in Philadelphia. His second wife, Alathea A. Coles, survives him with her four children, Darley C. Johnson, of the United States Assay Office in New York city; Wordsworth C. Johnson, of New Providence, N. J.; Sarah Imogene Johnson, of Brooklyn, and W. Fletcher Johnson, a New York newspaper man.

The funeral will be held at Mr. Johnson's home to-morrow afternoon, and the burial will be at Greenwood.

A Young Republican of This City Tells Why Uncle Sam Cannot Secure the Latin-American Trade.

The Washington, D. C., Post, of last Tuesday, says that "Charles Bullman, an expert mining engineer of Plainfield, N. J., who has spent the largest part of the past seven years in South America, is at the Ebbitt. In addtition to his professional skill he is a keen observer of events and talked interestingly of the Southern end of the continent."

Mr. Bullman was bred in this city and brought up in the Plainfield public schools. He lives on Third place. He votes the Republican ticket, yet told the newspaper man: "Had Gen. Barrundia been aboard a ship flying the English flag, do you think he would have been butchered?" They would never have dared to perpetrate the outrage. In all South America there is a wholesome respect for the rights of an English subject. The Gautemalan government would have not ventured to board an English vessel.

"A citizen of the United States feels keenly the disadvantage he is under by the indifference in which his Government is held in almost every section of Latin America.

"I am directly interested in Colombia, which is beginning to make considerable headway in the development of its mining and agricultural resources. Mr. Cherry, of SanFrancisco, has contraced with the Colombian government for the completion of a railroad between Buenaventura, a seaport on the Pacific, and Cali, in the Cauca Valley. The route lies across the Andes, and will open up a magnificent country to commerce. Now, all their products, hides, coffe, and cacao have to be transported on mules over the mountains.

"Of all the South American countries Chili is by long odds the most progressive and prosperous. There are no blacks or Chinese there. The people are wonderfully bright, and are leaders in everything. I am a firm believer in reciprocity with all these people, but must confess that it is hard to see how it can be brought about. A great difficulty in the way is that the governments down there have no other way of raising revenue than by import duties. Some also have export duties. There is no tax, generally speaking, on landed estates, as in this country. A man may own 1,000,000 acres of land and not pay 1 cent of taxes. We ought to sell them more of our products, but this is out of the question as long as they can buy European goods at less cost."

Donald Downie's Property Seized for Debt.

Donald Downie, the English traveler and lecturer, is in financial difficulties which may prevent him from fulfilling engagements in Somerville and other places where he is booked for early dates. Just after his lecture on Japan at the Warren Union Mission chapel, Thursday evening, Constable Bauerschs levied on Mr. Downie's stereopticon, views and other paraphernalia, to satisfy the $20 claim of his assistant, Edward O. Ackerman, a former Plainfielder, for wages, and the claims of parties who have furnished Mr. Ackerman with board under Mr. Downie's promise to be responsible. Mr. Downie has promised to settle the debts, and when the promise is fulfilled the goods under seizure will be restored. If he does not pay within a stipulated time the goods will be sold.

Mr. Downie has been granted the privilege of using the stereopticon plates at his lectures in Somerville, on the strength of the promise that he will settle up this evening.

A Valuable Lot of Old Choice Wines.

Some time since we stopped at Passaic, N. J., and were really surprised to see the amount of Mr. Speer's stock of grape wine on hand; it is almost fabulous. Four storehouses are filled, and tiers upon tiers of casks, up and down stairs, and in some cases huge vats, occupy every available spot, leaving only little alleyways, through which to walk. It is a vast quantity of wine. None is sold until it has acquired the age of four years, and the buildings, 1, 2, 3 and 4, are of the first, second, third and fourth years vintage. Our druggists have supplies of the oldest of the above wine direct from Mr. Speer.—Paterson Guardian.

A Female Impostor in Town.

A well dressed woman, a stranger in Plainfield, has been making her living, the past few weeks, by imposing on the sympathies of residents in the neighborhood of the Bryant school. She has led a life of leisure and has secured a good income by telling various pitiful tales which never fail to extract from twenty-five cents to one dollar from each listener. Sometimes she begs outright, claiming to want the money to go to the dying bedside of a son in New York city, and sometimes she merely asks for a loan, saying that Plainfielders for whom she has worked owe her, and promising to pay the money back as soon as she could collect what was due her. She has in every instance failed to return the loan, and finding her to be a fraud, her victims are taking steps to have her arrested.

Nay; But We Heard the Somervillians Also.

(From the Bound Brook Chronicle.)

The blowing of steam whistles for the fire Saturday night was heard in Plainfield, the citizens there thinking it came from Somerville, where the people were hilarious over the victory of the West Ends.

The Indictment of Mrs. Drake.

Mrs. Newton P. Drake, of North Plainfield, was indicted yesterday by the Somerset County Grand Jury on the charge of abusive treatment of her stepson. She will enter a plea of not guilty, and will be given a trial at an early date.

THOUGHTS FOR TO-MORROW.

Some Blunt Words With Which Sam Jones Has Edified the Crowds at Round Lake

Sam Jones has concluded his Summer engagement at Round Lake. Thousands of people went there to see him. Here are some of his latest sayings:

"To be a Christian you must be a prohibitionist. I don't mean a third party man; but you must be a man that is against everything that favors whiskey, and in favor of everything that is against it." To this some of the preachers shouted "Amen," when Jones said: "If you say 'amen' to that you can never vote the Republican ticket again."

"I'm so glad that I don't preach like other preachers; and I'm so glad that whenever any one else tries to preach like I do he makes an ass of himself."

"Most preachers could learn from the old darkey down South, who said: "My sermon will be divided into three parts—de text, de subject matter, and the arousements; and, seeing it is so warm, we'll leave off the first two parts and take to the arousements."

"I've never said a vulgar thing in the pulpit, never. When a horse has sore spots on him he thinks a curry comb is vulgar, but when he is sound he likes it."

"The dog barks and whines at the moon, but the moon shines on; and so your uncle Jones is going to let folks scold and howl, and he will try to just shine right on."

"The homes of this country are the key to success, or to failure. And as many homes have been turned over to worldliness and folly, multitudes are going to the devil."

"A man will pay a dollar a day to have his horse trained aright, and be careful to have it sheltered from every danger; but we let our children come up as they will."

"The thing now most to be dreaded in your home is yellow-backed literature."

"Don't let bad children into your yard, even if their parents are rich."

"You say I don't preach the Gospel; but you, poor soul, you wouldn't know the Gospel if you should meet it coming down the road."

"Nine-tenths of the old people are after the dollars, and nine-tenths of the young are after a good time, and it is hard to tell which are the biggest fools."

"If God loves everybody, then will not everybody be saved? No; for love never saved anybody. If it did, not another mother's son would ever go to a drunkard's grave."

"A man gives his wife $50 to buy a new dress, and she needs it; but she takes the money to buy coal and pay rent for some poor woman. She has more religion than one who rides to a missionary meeting in a $600 carriage and then pays her monthly subscription of 10 cents."

"It takes two things to make a Christian; first, to realize that God loves you, and second, for you to pitch in and love God all you can."

"God never forces a crown upon anybody who doesn't want it; if He did, the rascal would go and sell it the first chance he got."

"The happiest fellows in the world are the ministers. (Then, turning to those on the platform). True, you don't get very big salaries; but you get all you are worth."

"If a man begins to give liberally, folks begin to think he is losing his mind."

Death of a Pioneer Meat Merchant.

David Sutton Mundy, who some months ago suffered a stroke of paralysis, and who died last week Thursday at his home near Springdale, was the first butcher to run a wagon through Washington Valley to Plainfield. He began business in 1845, and never missed a day during the whole 45 years until afflicted last Spring. The funeral took place Sunday afternoon at the Mt. Horeb church, Pastor Haggerty officiating. The church was filled with relatives and friends from New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, New Brunswick, Plainfield and Martinville. Mr. Mundy leaves a wife, to whom he was married 41 years, five sons and two daughters. He was 69 years and 6 months of age.

Failed to Find Indictments Here.

The Somerset County Grand Jury examined into the following cases from North Plainfield and dismissed the complaints without finding indictments:

The case against Eugene Hoerster, on the charge of illegal liquor selling.

The case against Ernest and Bernard Hengel, charged with assaulting Marshal Becker when he prevented them from kidnapping a child in the Borough.

The case against Otto Hartmann, accused by his sister, Henrietta Goetze, of inhuman treatment.

Diehl—Vanneman.

George A. Diehl, of Bloomington, and Miss Lina Vanneman, of Somerville, were married at the residence of the bride's father, Elias Vanneman, on Main street, Somerville, Thursday evening, in the presence of a numerous company of friends. The Rev. Wm. M. Trumbower officiated. The happy couple will reside on Grant avenue, Plainfield, where Mr. Diehl is engaged in the Potter Press Works.

The last week's meeting of Better Day Reading was largely attended, and pronounced by all to have been of more than usual interest and profit.

The President of the Woman's Temperence Aid Society is ill and still absent from town, but the prompt response to the call for a meeting, Thursday, Sept. 25, and the interest manifested, indicate an increased determination to work for the cause to which this band is pledged. The meetings will continue every Sunday at 9:15 A. M. and 4 P. M. Also a Mother's meeting will be held every Thursday at 3 o'clock in the auditorium of Reform Hall. Need it be said that the cause needs the aid of every Christian? The enemy is strong.

A Plainfielder Now the Sole Proprietor.

Last week's Hotel Gazette contains a fine reproduction of a photograph of Geo. B. DeRevere, of this city, and a sketch of his busy and successful life. He is now proprietor of the Union Square Hotel and Hotel Dam, New York, and Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City. The paper says:

The Union Square Hotel and the Hotel Dam, Fourth avenue and Fifteenth street, Union Square, this city, have passed into the sole proprietorship of George B. DeRevere, who for the past five years has been the junior member of the firm of Dam & DeRevere, and for the past eight years proprietor of Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City. When Mr. DeRevere bought a half interest in the Union Square and Hotel Dam as one of the proprietors of the houses he paid $75,000 and on September 8 he paid about $75,000 more for his partner's half interest, and the firm of Dam & DeRevere has been dissolved by mutual and friendly consent. The sum of $150,000 would seem to be a very reasonable price for such a magnificent and profitable enterprise as the Union Square and Hotel Dam, the first with its 110 rooms and the Dam with its 140 rooms, making a total of 250 rooms, all fully furnished, including a lease which runs to the year 1897.

The late Andrew J. Dam, Sr., who built the Hotel Dam, said it cost $210,000 to build, and $75,000 to furnish; and the Union Squre $200,000 to build and $75,000 to furnish, so that the enterprise represents an outlay of about $600,000.

During the eight years that Mr. DeRevere has been proprietor of Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City, he has made over $100,000 there, and his son, Geo. B. DeRevere, Jr., superintends the running of the house and buys the supplies during the absence of his father. It must not be forgotten right here that Mrs. DeRevere is one of the most famous hotel women in America.

When you have that tired feeling of exhaustion, and you have little ambition, your blood is thin and poor. There is nothing that will enrich your blood, bring back life and activity, like Hires' Root Beer. Nothing so nutritious and strengthening. Ask your druggist or grocer for a package. Makes five gallons, sparkling and delicious. Sold everywhere.

A Desecration.

This is the bitterest pang I ever bore—
To think that I will scrimp reverence
Because I've lost you. All that fiery pain
Has burned itself to ashes. Heart and brain
Have both quiescent grown; and if you stood
Before me now I would not feel my blood
Leap turbulently through my veins. Ah, no!
Nor would I turn again in voiceless woe.

It hurts me, dear, to think I do not care:
That I can look on life and find it fair;
That in my ears once more its music swells,
Sweet as the literance of silver bells.
I'm half incredulous to think that I Am glad to be alive, and you not by.
O my one-time beloved! once I thought
Not Heaven itself could soothe my soul dis traught!

And now, behold! before my race is run,
I smile in the mid-heavens to see the sun
In splendor shine. Nor does the thought of you
Obscure the golden glory from my view!
And yet, I think that I would rather feel
The agony of passion's burning wheel
Than this content—to me it shameless seems,
And like a desecration of lost dreams!

—Susie M. Best, in Boston Transcript.

A Western Idyl.

He shot the globes while the gas jets beamed
And considered it fun, of course;
And throughout his reckless life he seemed
To covet his neighbor's horse.

He was known as the Terror of the Plains—
Wild eyed with a wild mustache—
And he frequently held up railroad trains
When he needed a little cash.

He carried a gun in length a foot—
'Twas a toy in his horny hand;
Gun powder into his drink he put
And he spoke of his grit and sand.

His face was a maze of shining scars
That changed in the shifting light,
For a fight he would always thank his stars—
He was always sick for a fight!

On his watch-chain often a victim's ear
He would wear, that he might provoke
A laugh that would echo far and near,
For he tenderly loved a joke.

When he kicked the bar with his big top-boot,
Desperadoes with fear would quake,
And into the woods headforemost shoot,
If the doorway they could but make.

On the street they'd regard him with smiling eyes
And to bow they would take great pains,
In the hope that they mightn't antagonize
The Terror of the Plains.

Just once was he seen with a smile of peace
Spread over his knife-etched face;
All were filled with joy, and they couldn't cease
To enjoy its halcyon grace.

It was seen when the morning began to peep
O'er the mountains and down the slope,
On the day that he softly fell asleep
On the lower end of a rope.

—R. K. Munkittrick, in Once a Week.

CROSS AND IMPATIENT.

Two Bad Traits Possessed by Too Many Young Persons.

Let Us Have More of "the Music That Can Deepest Reach and Cure All Ills by Cordial Speech" in Our Homes, and Lead a Happy Life.

"I believe," exclaimed a bright little woman one day, "that I would rather have a really wicked person in the house, if he would only be good-natured than to live with the best one who was cross."

This was extreme, says Harper's Bazar, but any one who has ever endured the society of an irritable companion for many days will feel a sympathy with even this strong statement. Such a companion is a species of torture.

It sometimes seems as though almost every duty were more forcibly impressed upon the young than the duty of amiability. In many quarters this virtue is absolutely at a disadvantage. The cross ones are likely to get a reputation for greater ability than the pleasant ones. "Fools," we are told, "are always amiable."

We plead for a reform, and so pleads everybody who happened to be in a certain house in an inland town, where a handsome and fashionable young woman was stopping with an aunt who had every claim upon her tenderest consideration.

"Are you going out to the cliff?" the young woman would demand of her aunt.

"I don't know yet," the aunt would respond, wearily.

"Oh, dear, I wish you could ever make up your mind!" the niece would fret.

"But I must wait and see how I feel after my dinner," the invalid aunt would protest.

"If it wasn't that it would be something else," the niece would exclaim, petulantly. "You're always waiting, always undecided. I get so sick of it!"

The aunt bore her young charge's (or superintendent's) vagaries almost too sweetly; but the hateful little bicker and impudence of the latter were unendurable to the outside listeners, before whom she took no pains to control herself. Yet this young girl was a member of a church. She would not have lifted her hand against her aunt, yet she gave her daily worse insults than a physical blow.

"The blow a glove gives is but weak.
Does the mark yet discolor my cheek?
But when the heart suffers a blow
Will the pain pass as soon, do you know?"

It is to women that the poets are always giving praise for their amiability. It was a woman to whom belonged those

"Sweet lips whereon perpetually did reign
The summer calm of golden charity."

But it is doubtful whether women are really so equable as men. Xantippe and poor Rip's wife are types of a very large class.

It is reasonable to expect that women should be less amiable than men. Emerson says: "All healthy things are sweet-tempered." It is only within a few years that women have begun, as a class, to take proper care of their health. Even now they are not expert in the art, and more than half our women are semi-invalids. A woman's mode of dress, her diet, her in-door and monotonous life, have all been against her. Women are more conscientious than men. They ought to have more principle about keeping a pleasant face on; but when the whole nervous system is ajar from insufficient nourishment and close air, an angel could not always keep her temper. It was only she who "felt so pretty and so pleased all day" who "could not take the trouble to be cross." When one is baffled and thwarted all day, crossness becomes a luxury that most women are too prone to indulge in.

But oh! how it spoils and degrades family life!

"See a word, how it severeth!
Oh, power of life and death
In the tongue, as the Preacher saith!"

We may not all of us be able to cultivate the highest virtues—constancy, generosity, magnanimity—but we can all keep a civil tongue for those around us, and put on a pleasant expression if we try. Amiability has been poohpoohed at too long. It is the source of more comfort and pleasure in any home in which it is practiced than many a more vaunted virtue.

"The music that can deepest reach
And cure all ills is cordial speech."

By all means let us have more of it in our homes.

—A pack of hyenas is reported by the Indian papers to have appeared near Monghyr. The animals are making great depredations. One night a child of about two years of age was carried away. In the morning the head and two hands were found.

THE COVERED WAY.

An old time wooden bridge with covered way
Spans a bright river running to the bay.

This side, rough stones and thorns and poor men's huts,
And weary paths, ill kept, hub deep with ruts;

Beyond, the city streets, and gilded spires
That peal their bells, and flame in sunset fires,

That sweetly call and beckon from afar
To all who dwell this side the river bar.

Along those pathways, daily, as I walk,
I see two children go with quiet talk.

But when the river bridge at last is nigh,
They tarry, smiling, kiss—then say "good-bye."

One passes out of sight. The other turns
And wanders homeward mid the rocks and ferns.

And daily as I pass and see them so,
I think of other partings men must know;

And smile to think how safe the covered way
From Earth's dim paths to an eternal day.
—Rev. Chas. S. Newhall, in The Advance.

CHRISTIAN COURTESY.

Two Illustrations of What Our Conduct Should Be in God's House.

The editor of the Sunday School Times recently asked Robert J. Burdette to reply to the inquiry of a correspondent who wished a "few points on church etiquette." His reply is in a characteristic vein:

How shall we behave ourselves in church? Oh, well! it depends somewhat on the church we attend. Each has its own rules, carefully codified, for the guidance of the members in their attitude toward each other and toward strangers who may seek to worship with them. These rules are hung up in the pews, on the walls of the church, on the front of the pulpit, over the choir, everywhere in plain sight. They are not printed on cardboard, but are made "plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it;" and that is just what he wants to do sometimes. The regular occupants of the pews, by manner, by expression of countenance, by significant gesture and action, translate these unwritten rules so clearly that every man may hear them speak in his own language, and the "wayfaring men, though fools, need not err therein"

The next time your journey leaves you stranded in the great and delightful city of New Chicorkadelphia on the Sabbath day, if you should go to the Church of Saint Indolence—I can recommend it as having the slowest singing and the softest pew cushions, with a preacher to match, in the city—you will see the following "Suggestions to Worshipers:"

"Fall or slide into the pew nearest the aisle.

"Stay there.

"Do not sit erect, but lop. Rest one elbow on the arm of the pew, and support the side of the face with the outspread hand. If the cheek can be pushed up in folds and wrinkles, so as to wholly or partially close one eye, all intelligent expression will be destroyed, and the attitude of utter and disrespectful laziness will be heightened by the charm of imbecility or natural stupidity.

"Do not rise during the singing of the hymns. The fact that you played tennis or base ball all Saturday afternoon, or walked four or five miles around a billiard-table Saturday night, entitles you to a little rest Sunday morning. This is the day of rest, and you are no Sabbath-breaker.

"Take advantage of the long prayer, when other people should have their eyes closed and their heads bowed, to adjust yourself into a position of limp and lounging listlessness that you can endure comfortably through the sermon.

"Extend your legs as far under the pew in front of you as you can make them reach without sliding off your seat.

"Gracefully and politely cover your mouth with your hand while yawning during the sermon. If the minister is looking at you, cover the mouth with both hands, and, at the close of the yawn, bring your jaws together with a cheerful snap.

"It is a mark of the highest culture and best breeding in refined society to look at your watch frequently during the service. After looking at your watch, always turn your head and gaze longingly and earnestly toward the door.

"Do not move if a stranger, accompanied by his wife and daughter, attempts to enter your pew. Permit them to climb over your legs, no matter how much they annoy you. This is the Lord's house, and all His children are welcome. It is not Christian, and it may even be questioned if it is really polite, to put your knees up against the back of the pew when a family of strangers attempt to enter. It is practiced in some churches, but we have never openly encouraged it here.

"Do not annoy strangers who may enter the church by looking at them, or even glancing in their direction. Nothing is more embarrassing to a sensitive person than to find himself an object of attention, under the eyes of strangers in a strange place. If he really wants a seat, he will find one without the obtrusive interference of other people. Some of the ablest scholars in our denomination believe the employment of ushers to be a relic of paganism and a legacy of Romanism, if, indeed, they are not the Scarlet Woman himself.

"At the close of service remark aloud, but to yourself, that you are hungry as a shark, and set off for home at a brisk trot. The house of the Lord is no place for idle chatter and worldly gossip with strangers."

He then describes the imposing edifice of the "Church of Saint Dives of Gilt-edge" and its methods:

But last of all, it may be by some mistake you stumble into the church of the Samaritans. You have no dealings with these fellows, and you would back out as soon as you see where you are going; but the Samaritans are wide awake, with some very informal notions about church etiquette. The sexton, standing on the porch sees you are a stranger, and the minute you pause hesitatingly in front of the church you are his. He hypnotizes you with a cheerful nod and a beckoning hand, and passes you on through the wide-open door almost before you know it. An old deacon in the vestibule has you by the hand at once, and introduces you to "our church clerk," adding as he reaches your part of the introduction: "I don't exactly know your name,"—as though he used to know it like a book, and has a pretty good inkling of it now, but can't quite place you. An usher at each door is ready for you—there is a perfect picket line of sextons and deacons and ushers along the front of the church of the Samaritans; not to keep people out, but to bring them in; it isn't a fort, it's a hospital; it's a man-trap baited with Christian courtesy, and the man who is caught there never tries to get away. The older you are the better seat you get; if you just hint to the young fellow who is leading you forward that your hearing is a little "near-sighted," he'll get you the best seat in the house, if he has to ask a resident Samaritan to give it up to you. You get comfortably seated, and somebody pushes a hassock toward you; a child from the next pew hands you a hymn-book; an old lady puts a Bible into your hands. The minister looks at you as though he had seen you before and was glad to see you again.

Before you get fairly out of the pew, after service, somebody has you by the hand, telling you he is glad to see you there, the pastor is asking you to come again, the usher is telling you the hour of evening service, the superintendent is giving you an invitation to stay to Sunday-school, and when, a little ashamed of the way you felt when you tried to back out, you say, rather meekly, you are a member of the Church of Jerusalem yourself, they say, reassuringly: "Oh, that's all right; there isn't much difference between the Samaritans and the Church of Jerusalem now; lots of your people drop in and see us on their way to Jericho;" the deacon tells you "he got the best wife in the world out of the Church of Jerusalem;" and so you have a good time, and go away with such a glow at your heart that if it wasn't Sunday, and in town, you'd take off your coat.

You see, it is just here; the Samaritans feel at home in their church, and consequently they know just how to make strangers feel at home there. It is their Father's house, and they conduct themselves there as easily, cordially, naturally as children at home. A church of that sort has a home-like atmosphere the visitor recognizes and enjoys. Any guest can tell the family living-room from the "spare-room" with his eyes shut. The trouble with some of our churches is that the members frequent them so seldom they have a cat-in-a-strange-garrety feeling themselves when they do go, and are consequently awkward and constrained in their efforts to make the stranger feel welcome—very much as I should probably act if, being a chance visitor at the palace, I should attempt to receive Queen Victoria's guests in the drawing-room, while she finished her luncheon of bread and honey in the kitchen.

Get acquainted in your own church; feel at home there yourself; get into the habit of frequenting the house during the week; and on Sunday attend both services and the Sunday-school—see how easily the "workers" of the hive and the little people receive and entertain guests—and you will soon find yourself as cordial and warm-hearted as those fellows over in the Church of the Samaritans, and won't ask for a letter of introduction and countersigned credentials before passing a hymn-book to a stranger. And remember always the injunction of Peter, "an apostle of Jesus Christ," writing "to the strangers scattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia and Bithynia:" "Finally, be ye all of one mind, having a compassion one of another, love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous."

CHOICE SELECTIONS.

—The unrest of this weary world is its unvoiced cry after God.—Munger.

—The more honesty a man has, the less he affects the air of a saint.—Lavater.

—The religion that don't make people religious is not a good kind to have.—Ram's Horn.

—Busy lives, like busy waters, are generally pure. Stagnant lives, like stagnant pools, breed corruption.—Nicholas.

—Prayer is not eloquence, but earnestness; not the definition of helplessness, but the feeling of it; no figures of speech, but conjunction of soul.—H. More.

—What are sciences but maps of universal laws? And universal laws but the channels of universal power? And universal power but the outgoing of a universal mind?—E. Thompson.

—Our daily life should be sanctified by doing common things in a religious way. There is no action so slight or so humble but it may be done to a great purpose, and ennobled thereby.—George Macdonald.

—David hid God's word in his heart as a preservative from sin. Let that word only be cherished in the heart and it will purify our desires and strengthen us to resist evil. John declares: "I write unto you, young men, because ye are strong, and the word of God abideth in you, and ye have overcome the wicked one."—Standard.

—The personal appropriation of God is indispensable to our peace. It is those who can say "My God" who find true rest. "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on Thee." The belief that God is great, wise and good is common, and a belief that His providence watches over and cares for all is generally entertained. It is necessary that we have a more conscious sense of His love than this. Each Christian ought to realize that all that God is He is willing to be to Him, so that He can accept every promise as made by God to himself.—Christian Inquirer.

THE BOWSERS.

Mr. B's Excited Ideas About Spontaneous Combustion.

SOON after supper the other evening, Mr. Bowser slipped upstairs, and as his action looked very mysterious to me I followed him. I found him overhauling the clothes basket.

"Mrs. Bowser," he began by way of explanation, "do you know that we have had a close call—a dozen close calls—from being burned alive in our beds?"

"Lands, no! What do you mean?"

"I mean that there hasn't been an hour in the twenty-four since we moved into this house that it was not liable to take fire. In other words, we have been slumbering on the edge of a volcano."

"Why, Mr. Bowser!"

"Nothing but the hand of Providence has prevented a great disaster," he continued, as he dumped the last of the clothes out of the hamper.

MR. BOWSER KICKED AT THE CAT.

"But what has that hamper to do with it?"

"Every thing. Mrs. Bowser, did you ever hear of spontaneous combustion?"

"Of course."

"Well, there hasn't been a day that all the elements necessary to spontaneous combustion haven't been present in this hamper. Also, in various other places in this house. I shudder over our narrow escape."

"You—you haven't gone and got another fire-escape, have you?"

"There you go! Always ready to throw up something! I suppose you'll call this a notion of mine?"

"What has spontaneous combustion got to do with our clothes hamper?"

"Every thing. Here are the elements right here to start a fire. Here are cotton, wool and silk crowded together in a temperature of at least ninety degrees. Nothing could be more favorable."

"I don't believe it!"

"What! What!" shouted Mr. Bowser holding up a pillow-slip in one hand and one of baby's stockings in the other. "You don't believe in spontaneous combustion!"

"Under certain conditions, yes, but those conditions can not be found here. Some one has been working on your imagination."

"Oh! They have! On my imagination!" he softly whispered. "When every scientist and scientific publication believes in spontaneous combustion—when it is practically demonstrated every day in the year, when it is a fact is as well known as that a horse has teeth, you stand there and tell me that I have been played on! Mrs. Bowser, will you have the kindness to go down-stairs?"

I went down, and he took every article from the hamper and spread them out on the floor. Then he went through every clothes-closet and bureau drawer, and it was fully two hours before he came down and heaved a great sigh of relief, and said:

"There! We shall not be burned alive—not to-night!"

"There was no danger," I replied.

"There wasn't, eh! Mrs. Bowser, I—I—!"

His emotion overcame him, and I got opportunity to say:

"Why don't other people's houses burn up through spontaneous combustion?"

No answer.

"I haven't seen any thing in the papers about a clothes-hamper explosion."

Mr. Bowser gritted his teeth.

"If it has got to that pass that the sheets off the spare bed can't come in contact with the baby's stockings without striking fire, we'd better fill the cellar with tin boxes."

Mr. Bowser kicked at the cat, but missed her by about two feet.

"But there'll be a fire, of course. You have overlooked an old vest somewhere, and it will get down off its hook and walk over to one of your old shoes and arrange for a bonfire. I shan't sleep a wink to-night."

Mr. Bowser circled around the room three times with great dignity, and then went off to bed. When he was out of the way I went out and had a talk with the cook. The result was that we brought an iron kettle into the front hall, got out some cotton-batting, and as I went upstairs, she whispered to me:

"I understand, ma'am. In exactly half an hour I'm to touch it off."

Mr. Bowser was in bed, and though I spoke about the cool wave, baby's cold and other things, he had nothing to say. I wasn't hurt, however. I got into bed and waited. It wasn't over ten minutes until the odor of burning cotton was plain enough in the room, and I sat up and gave Mr. Bowser a dig and asked:

"Don't you smell smoke?"

"Smoke!" he shouted, after a sniff or two. "I smell fire!"

"Perhaps the cook lighted the gas with paper."

"Perhaps the confounded house is afire! (he jumps out of bed) of course it is! (he goes to the door) she's all ablaze down-stairs! Fire! Fire!"

"The baby!" I shouted as he danced around, but he was gone, carrying his pantaloons and one shoe under his arm. He ran down the hall, shouting "fire!" at the top of his voice, came back and grabbed his necktie and shouted again, and the next I heard of him he was in front of the house yelling like an Indian. Half a dozen men were going by, on their way home from some sort of convention, and they rushed into the house and soon located the fire. I heard Mr. Bowser telling them that he had long expected it, and that he had the most careless wife in the world, and that he hadn't slept sound for three months, and then there was a pause. They had found the kettle with the smoking cotton.

I didn't hear Mr. Bowser laughing with the rest. Perhaps he tried to, and it was a failure. It took all the rest of the beer in the case to get the men out, and they also ate up all the cheese and crackers, but when they had gone Mr. Bowser came upstairs. He struck every step with the tread of a Roman Emperor. Baby and I were in bed and apparently sound asleep. He came in, walked twice around the room with his hands under his coat-tails, and then loomed up over the bed and said:

"Mrs. Bowser, I have come to kiss my child good-bye before I go."

I didn't say any thing.

"Mrs. Bowser, I shall take the child with me!"

I didn't answer.

"Mrs. Bowser!"

At that moment the cook come down the hall and asked who was there.

"It's I," answered Mr. Bowser.

"And what are you doing?"

"N-nothing."

"Then you'd better be in bed and let the poor missus and baby and me get a few winks of sleep! Such a house! Such carryings on! Such spontaneous combustuous kick-up-a-fustabus! I give you notice, sir, that I quit me place before the dishes are washed in the morning!"

She went off to bed, and Mr. Bowser made two more circles of the room, kicked the footstool under the bed and then crept into his accustomed place and was snoring away in the usual manner in less than fifteen minutes.—Detroit Free Press.

VICTIMS OF GASTRONOMY.

Onion, Coffee, Water-Melon and Bread-and-Butter Fiends.

"I was for many years a victim of the onion habit," he said. "Onions to a man who likes them are irresistibly fascinating. It was always a temptation to me to eat them at every opportunity. When I was forced to go out a day, and so was obliged to deny myself the onions, my sacrifice caused me actual misery. One of my tricks was to eat a late supper after working hard until long past midnight. Of this supper sliced onions with a salad dressing formed no unimportant part. I discovered that the more onions I ate the less I was able to resist the cajoleries of their flavor, and, determining to free myself from this servitude, I deliberately sat down one night to cure my unsavory passion. I sliced the biggest and strongest ones that I could find, made my own dressing and then set to eat them. I ate until my throat was on fire and my stomach was a furnace. I ate until tears poured from my eyes. The biggest and strongest one of all I saved for the last and as I devoured that I wept bitterly. But I was without pity toward myself and remorselessly and fiercely ate on. I have not eaten an onion since that night. I do not like them."

While on the subject of the onion habit the writer ventures to mention another no less terrible in its chains of slavery. A bachelor, who works late at night and so does not arise at an early hour, has for years had his coffee in bed immediately upon awakening. He declares that if he is forced to dress without having had his coffee he is unable to eat breakfast. He suffers from a severe headache all day and goes to bed miserable. He admits that he has not the courage to try to break himself of the habit. Wives and mothers doubtless feel no sympathy for this slave.

Another case is that of a man who was passionately fond of watermelons. Coming from San Francisco to New York once he acquired a violent "watermelon thirst." The ride across the hot plains of Nevada had left his throat with a wild craving for watermelon. At North Platte, Neb., he was able to buy a sickly green watermelon for $1.25. He returned to his sleeping car armed with his melon and six bottles of beer. He ate the melon down to the rind, drank the beer that afternoon and spent the night on an exploring trip similar to one of Dante's. That watermelon, he says, was his last. He could forgive the beer, but the melon—never!

And now men in three instances having shown themselves poor, weak creatures, the tools of the whims and fancies of a depraved taste, it is only fair to speak of the case of a woman who is the wife of one of the best-known men in New-England. Before going to bed at night she always eats a thin slice of bread and butter. She avers that without it she could not sleep. She never eats more than one slice, but that one slice is actually necessary for a peaceful slumber. She is a striking example of a victim of the bread-and-butter habit.—N. Y. Tribune.

ALL SPEAK ENGLISH.

Business Men on the Continent Compelled to Learn the Language.

On the continent, both Brother Jonathan and John Bull and their families become your traveling companions. The English are the more numerous because they can cross from London to Germany in one day and to Switzerland in two days; but the Americans are nevertheless a multitude. Two-thirds of the passengers on the Rhine steamers are English and Americans. The majority of those who ascend the Righi and Pilatus are of the same nationalities, and the steamers on the beautiful Swiss lakes could not exist without them. There is no occasion to trouble yourself about your ignorance of the language along the Rhine or in Switzerland. If you can't speak their language, and it is very rarely that an American or Englishman can speak any but his own, the natives will speak yours. The Germans, the Swiss and the French are far better linguists than the Anglo-Saxons are. I doubt whether there are five hundred Americans and Englishmen who can fluently speak a foreign language; but in the more frequented parts of Germany and Switzerland about every fourth man can understand English.

The inhabitants of the picturesque portion of the Continent are compelled to learn English. The Anglo-Saxon travel has become so great that it is a business necessity. I have been informed that a hotel in Switzerland or the Rhine country will not employ a clerk, waiter or porter who does not speak English. I know that during a sojourn at many hotels in these countries I have never yet been unable to make known my wants in my own language.

In Switzerland the tide of Anglo-Saxon travel is enormous. The Swiss owe the English and us a great debt of gratitude; for without the two people it would be very difficult for them to make both ends meet. Switzerland is very picturesque and beautiful. It seems as if nature had crowded all her grandest effects into this little country, and I have not yet met a person who did not find the land of the Swiss to be all that fancy painted it; but snow-capped mountains, tremendous gorges and deep, blue lakes can not, of themselves, contribute much to the support of human life. It is only through the strangers these mountains draw that their inhabitants are able to live in frugal comfort.—Cor. Louisville Courier-Journal.

Been a Good Boy.

Willie (down in the country writing home to his father)—And I have been a good boy, too, papa. I haven't run away for a week.

Willie's Mamma (adding a postscript)—Willie has been confined to the house for a week with a very sore toe.—Chicago Tribune.

—A Pittsfield hardware dealer tells of a man who entered his store the other day and asked to look at some nippers or pliers. Some were shown him, whereupon he calmly affixed a pair to one of his teeth, pulled the molar from his jaw, laid it with the nippers on the counter and asked the bill.

THE OPERATOR FLED

His Blunder Responsible for a Fatal Wreck.

EIGHT PERSONS WERE KILLED.

Two Freight Trains Run Into Each Other at Full Speed.

They Met on a Sharp Curve—An Engineer and Fireman Terribly Mangled—One Man's Body Crushed to a Pulp and Roasted by Fire—Twenty-three Loaded Cars Completely Demolished.

ZANESVILLE, O., Sept. 29.—One of the worst wrecks in the history of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad occurred ten miles west of here at midnight. Eight men were killed, one terribly injured and property to the amount of $100,000 destroyed.

The wreck was caused by the failure of Francis Keelty, operator at Blackhand, to deliver orders to an east-bound freight, side tracking at that station until a west-bound train passed. The two trains collided on a sharp curve just outside of a dense wood and neither engineer saw the other train until within a few yards of it.

Train Hands Terribly Mangled.

The engineer and fireman on the east-bound train jumped, the latter escaping uninjured, but the former, John Kelp of Newark, had a leg cut off near his body and is not expected to live. The engineer and fireman of the west-bound train were instantly killed, the former being terribly mangled by the splintered cars which were rained into the tender. His blood and brains were scattered over the ground for several feet around. The fireman was caught between the engine and tender and crushed to a pulp. When taken out the body was roasted by the fire from the engines.

List of Killed.

The list of killed is as follows: John Buckingham, engineer, Newark, O.; John Cochran, residence unknown; Benjamin Smart, brakeman, Gratiot, O.; Glenn Bash, Zanesville, O.; Thomas McCreary, Newark, O.; George W. Stoneburner, Zanesville, O.; William Firestone, fireman, Newark, O. One unknown. The dead were removed to an empty car as fast as recovered and taken to Newark for preparation for burial.

A large force of men were set to work clearing the track of the debris. Twenty-three loaded cars were completely demolished. The operator fled as soon as he learned the awful result of his carelessness and has not yet been apprehended.

Two Men Killed in Pennsylvania.

CLARION, Pa., Sept. 29.—A south-bound freight train on the Pittsburg & Western Railroad leaped the trestle at Shepperville, near this place, at 1 o'clock, killing Fireman Silas Elder and Brakeman Shreckengost and presumably fatally injuring Engineer Frank Wood.

WANTED FOR FORGERY.

"Lord McKenzie's" Way of Obtaining Money at Perth Amboy.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Sept. 29.—Edward W. Hicks, alias Lord Hugh Edward McKenzie, who created a sensation near this place about two years ago by marrying Farmer Johnson's daughter, is wanted for forgery.

After he left here he went to Perth Amboy, where he secured employment with Editor Kempson. He was overcome by the heat last summer, and when he recovered said he was going to visit his father in the West Indies. It has been discovered that he procured money from Mr. Kempson's father under false pretenses and forged the name of a collector employed by Mr. Kempson. Hicks is supposed to be at Kingston, Jamaica.

Death of Mrs. Hannah Cook.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Sept. 29.—Mrs. Hannah Cook, who in 1819 started the third power loom put up in this city, died yesterday in the 87th year of her age. She was at the time of starting the loom 14 years old. Mrs. Cook was also the discoverer of the skeleton which was celebrated by Longfellow in his poem "The Skeleton in Armor." The skeleton was found in a sank bark and was destroyed in the Atheneum fire in 1843.

An Engineers' Strike Expected.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 29.—T. J. Gau, Chairman of the Grievance Committee of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, is in the city to attend a conference of the leaders of that organization. He intimates that there is serious trouble brewing among the engineers, and that a sensation may be developed at Ft. Wayne, Ind. Matters have arisen, he says, that must tie up all the Ft. Wayne roads unless a speedy settlement is reached.

An American Schooner Seized.

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 29.—A telegram from Charlottetown, P. E. I., says: E. J. Hodgson, Q. C., acting under instructions from the Minister of Justice, has taken proceedings in the Vice-Admiralty Court for the condemnation of the Gloucester fishing schooner Davy Crockett on a charge of committing a breach of the fishery treaty of 1818. The vessel will be immediately seized by the marshal of the Vice-Admiralty Court.

Major McKinley's Race for Congress.

CANTON, O., Sept. 29.—Among those who will take part in the election of Major McKinley for Congress are Messrs Sherman, Forakes, Grosvenor, Hoar and possibly Ingalls, Frye and Blaine; that it will be a campaign of National concern and that the fight will be waged upon the tariff issue.

THE BIRCHALL TRIAL.

The Prisoner Will Probably Know His Fate To-Night.

WOODSTOCK, Sept. 29.—It is the opinion of the counsel in the Benwell-Birchall case that the prisoner at the bar will know his fate to-night. The evidence is all in and the case will go to the jury during the afternoon. It is thought that it will not take long for them to agree on a verdict.

Birchall still maintains his self-control. He arose at 7 o'clock and was ready at 8 for the breakfast sent in from the Commercial Hotel, which was served in his hotel. Birchall ate with a hearty relish. He first disposed of a dish of milk and oatmeal, with an abundance of brown bread, and then fell to with a sharp appetite on some poached eggs and bacon, fried potatoes, two cups of coffee and numerous slices of buttered toast. Then he lit a cigar and turned his attention to his papers and letters.

Since Saturday Birchall has assumed a new position in his discussion of his trial. Previously he spoke confidently about the prospects of being acquitted; now, however, the most he seems to hope for in his conversation with Turnkey Forbes and the other jail officials is a disagreement of the jury.

TIGHTENING THE COIL.

Discovering New and Strong Evidence Against the Suspected Lingo.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 29.—A good deal of evidence was found yesterday which goes to strengthen the theory that the negro, Lingo, was the murderer of Annie Miller, who was found in the woods near Merchantville, with her head severed from the body. Among the most material circumstances was the finding of a deep gash and several scratches on one of Lingo's hands, which, from his failure to properly account for them, has deepened the conviction of the authorities that he is the assassin.

Lingo made a statement in which he attempted to explain the cause of the gash by saying that his knife slipped while he was cutting corn. The scratches he claimed to have received from the nails of a child he was fondling one day last week. His demeanor while he was giving this explanation was not such as to impress the authorities with its truth, and they now feel certain that they have the murderer of Annie Miller, if not the assassin of Annie Leconey.

Mrs. Wuchter's Long Fast.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Sept. 29.—One hundred and eighty-two days of involuntary fasting, without a morsel of food or a drop of water, is the record made thus far by Lehigh County's now famous but unfortunate invalid, Mrs. Adam Wuchter, up at White Hall, seven miles above here. Her condition has changed but slightly for the worse since last Saturday.

Erie Train Men Conferring.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—A committee of forty-three, representing over 10,000 men employed in train service on the Erie system, is now in this city for the purpose of conferring with the officers and securing a new schedule of hours. The committee is headed by its chairman, A. B. Youngson, and C. Chapman, its secretary.

Drowned Herself.

HYDE PARK, Mass., Sept. 29.—Mrs. Hayes, wife of Dr. Charles C. Hayes, drowned herself in the Neponset River during the morning. She was 50 years of age. Her body, which was recovered, will be taken to Madison, Wis., where her father, ex-Governor Mills of Wisconsin, resides.

Clerical Changes.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Sept. 29.—Rev. Dr. W. L. Phillips, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of this city, has accepted a call to the First Congregational Church in New Haven, Conn. He will be succeeded by Rev. Boyle, now pastor of the Park Avenue M. E. Church of New York city.

Arrested for Abduction.

TROY, N. Y., Sept. 29.—Eva Lee, a flashily-dressed woman who it is understood lives on 128th street, New York, is in jail here on a charge of trying to abduct young girls. She was arrested at the Union Depot as she was about to leave for New York with three Troy girls.

Will Raise the Boycott.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Sept. 29.—The Trades' Council has decided to raise the Fleischmann boycott, but to retain the boycott on Vienna bread. It is expected that the boycott, which has been on more than a year, will be lifted in all large cities.

Baby Hamilton in New Hands.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Baby Beatrice Hamilton passed last night in this city, and she will hereafter be cared for by the executors of the estate of Robert Ray Hamilton whose tragic death in the Yellowstone region recently ended a career replete with sensational episodes.

WASHINGTON TOPICS

The Tariff Bill Before the Senate To-Day.

OPPOSITION FROM THE WEST.

The Bill Expected to Go to the President To-Morrow.

The Deficiency Bill to be Taken Up and Passed—No Definite Plans for Work in the House—The Rules to be Suspended and Bills Rushed Through—Adjournment Day.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The conference report on the Tariff bill was taken up in the Senate to-day, and speeches on it are being made by Senator Aldrich for the Republican conferees and by Senator Carlisle for the Democrats. Senator McPherson, who has been detained from the Senate Chamber by illness for some time, has said that if he is well enough he will speak in opposition to the report, and Mr. Gorman may make some remarks in opposition. Mr. Ingalls, who was in the chair during almost all of the debate on the bill, may make a speech. He is not quite certain whether he will or not.

The Western and Northwestern Senators who are displeased with the binding twine schedule have said that they will demand a hearing, but the friends of the bill hope to persuade them not to interfere with its passage. Senator Paddock has said that he will vote against the conference report, and he says that a number of Republican Senators will vote with him.

It was whispered about last night that if the number of Republicans in the negative was sufficient to endanger the adoption of the report the friends of the bill had an assurance of negative support from two of the Democratic Senators, who will absent themselves without being paired, against the bill.

The chances are that the bill will go to the President to-night or to-morrow morning.

The Senate will make an effort to clear up a few odds and ends of legislation while the bill is before the President, notably the conference report on the Deficiency bill and the conference report on the bill to relieve the Supreme Court, if they are ready for consideration. An effort will be made also to call up the Labor bills now on the calendar. It is likely the Senate will amend the House resolution for adjournment so as to make the time for adjourning Wednesday or Thursday, or perhaps a little later.

WORK BEFORE THE HOUSE.

Bills on the Speaker's Table to be Passed by Unanimous Consent.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The House managers have no definite plans for the week beyond providing for discussion on the conference report on the Deficiency Appropriation bill, which will be presented to-morrow. Several committees are anxious to get days to dispose of bills in their charge but the requests will probably not be granted, and it is likely that the House will spend some time in passing bills on the Speaker's table under suspension of the rules by unanimous consent.

Bills on the Speaker's table consist of Senate bills and House bills with Senate amendments. It is possible that a conference report on the bill to relieve the Supreme Court of the United States will also be presented and considered.

The Three New Warships.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Considerable interest is manifested in naval circles over the results of the bids that are to be opened at the Navy Department on Wednesday for the construction of three great battle ships and a swift triple screw steamer for the navy. About $15,000,000 has been appropriated for these vessels, and the conditions of their construction are sufficiently favorable to induce bids from all active vessel builders. It is not unlikely that the vessels will be divided among the bidders, as Secretary Tracy is anxious to have them completed as soon as possible.

Bills Vetoed.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—President Harrison has vetoed only five bills this session of Congress, all comparatively unimportant. In the first session of the Fiftieth Congress, Mr. Cleveland vetoed 128 bills.

Mr. Gompers' Lieutenant Resigns.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, has received the resignation of Vice-President William Martin. Mr. Martin is a resident of Pittsburg, and until recently he was general secretary of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers. He was also a school trustee in Pittsburg. His reasons for his resignation is the fact that he has been elected general manager of the Commercial Company (Limited) of that city.

ON THE HOMESTRETCH.

The Contest on the Diamond to End This Week.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—This week will see the conclusion of the championship of the most remarkable championship season in the history of the National game. The closeness of the race for the pennant in both the Players' and National Leagues have made the games interesting, but they have not been nearly as exciting as in 1889. Then the New Yorks were not declared the champions until the last game had been played.

This season the question is positively known now and was anticipated fully a month ago. Brooklyn, Boston and Louisville will carry off the honors in the League, Brotherhood and the Association. They all have a large margin. In the League and Brotherhood second place is still in doubt, although Ward is almost certain to follow the Bostons over the line, and Anson's men have the best prospects of finishing next to the Grooms. Even as close as the New Yorks are to the Brooklyn Players' and Philadelphia is to Anson, the interest is not very great.

This is far different from the state of affairs existing twelve months ago when popular interest was at its height. That the local clubs are unable to get first or second place may have something to do with it, but even in Brooklyn there is little rejoicing over the result. The whole story is that the division of interest between League and Brotherhood has almost ruined the season, and has caused the great contrast between the present year and any former one since baseball established its claims to be called the national game.

None of the clubs has of late attracted such attention as the Chicagos. The remarkable record during the last forty-five games played is probably surpassed only by the famous Cincinnatis, who in 1886 played the season without losing a game. The old man of baseball has made friends by the score by his wonderful fight against odds that would have completely overwhelmed an ordinary captain. There was not one baseball enthusiast in a hundred who would, last spring, have picked out the Chicago colts as a possible quantity in the League race. With his crowd of youngsters the team looked to be outclassed in League company. Anson's strict field discipline, his ability to instill into his followers the energy and hustling qualities so essential to a winning team have told, and he is now right up in the swim battling for the second honors.

Cleveland made a good rally recently, and Cincinnati, Philadelphia and New York are now coming down the home stretch in fine form. Boston has fallen by the wayside, owing to its crippled condition. Philadelphia has a chance of beating the Chicagos out of second place, and the "Reds" may come in third, but no other changes can take place during the week.

Kelly's men played good ball until they were positive the pennant was won. By winning four games in succession in Chicago and Cleveland they made sure of first place.

Ward is still holding his Wonders down to their fine work. Ewing, on the other hand, is allowing his men to become careless. They can scarcely get a worse position than they have at present, and it is doubtful if his team can oust the Brooklyns out of second place.

President Byrne of the Brooklyns says that a meeting of the National League will be called in New York on October 8 to consider the proposed "deal" by which Cincinnati is to go to the Brotherhood.

THE CZAR ESCAPED

A Train He Was Supposed to be on Wrecked.

PLANS OF THE CONSPIRATORS.

An Obstruction Tightly Wedged in Between the Rails.

A Critical Moment for the Dockmen in London—Suicide in a Cathedral—Spanish Republicans Express Sympathy With England—A Dinner to Michael Davitt.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 29.—Another attempt has been made upon the life of the Czar. This time the conspirators planned to wreck a train by which it was believed the Czar intended to travel from St. Petersburg to Warsaw.

An obstruction was placed upon the track in the shape of five sleepers, which was tightly wedged in between the rails. The train which was supposed to be carrying the Czar crashed into this barricade of sleepers and was thrown from the track.

No details of the outrage have been obtained, and it is not known whether any arrests have been made in connection with the affair.

A SERIOUS SITUATION.

A Critical Moment for London's Giant Labor Organization.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—The critical moment in the history of the Dockers' Union is approaching, the moment which will mark the beginning of a life and death struggle between this most remarkable of labor organizations and its natural enemy, the most gigantic organization of capital, the Shipowners' Federation.

Three vessels from Australia, loaded and manned by non-unionists, are due to arrive in London this week. If the dockers refuse to unload them a general lockout is certain to follow. If they do unload them they abandon the principle of unionism and forsake their brethren in Australia.

A lockout at this particular time would be a serious blow for the men, as their funds are depleted by their liberal donations in aid of the Australian strikers.

The Shipowners' Federation has enough non-union men on its lists to form a working force, and the only trouble would be to secure sufficient police aid to protect the new men for a while from the violence of the locked out union men. The unionists realize the gravity of the situation, and the matter will be fully debated at the first annual congress of the organization, which will be in session from to-morrow to Thursday.

Meeting of Spanish Republicans.

MADRID, Sept. 29.—A meeting of 4,000 Republicans was held in the largest theatre here to express sympathy with Portugal in her controversy with England. The action of the Spanish Government in increasing the military force on the Portuguese frontier was taken in view of the strong Republican feeling in Spain, and to guard against any possible demonstration in aid of the Portuguse Republicans in case of an outbreak against the Lisbon Government.

Davitt's Paper a Success.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—Michael Davitt and his editorial staff of the Labor World were banquetted last evening by the United Democratic Club. The boom with which the paper started out has more than been sustained. The circulation is rapidly increasing, and the venture is already one of the most remarkable of modern journalistic successes.

Tragedy in a Cathedral.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—The morning service at St. Paul's Cathedral yesterday was interrupted by a horrible tragedy. During the service a man named Easton, who was in the congregation, committed suicide by shooting himself twice with a revolver.

A Long Voyage.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—The steamship Yorktown has arrived here, 166 days from New York. The voyage was a stormy one. Boatswain James Weston was lost overboard during a squall on July 1st. A boat which was sent out to attempt his rescue was capsized, but the crew were saved. James Carr, a seaman, has lodged complaint with the police that Weston's death was caused by the second mate, Thomas Nolan, deliberately cutting the line to which Weston was holding while over the ship's side doing some work that Nolan had ordered him to do during the storm. Three other sailors corroborate Carr's statement.

Society Shocked.

JOHNSONBURG, Pa., Sept. 29.—Dr. H. H. Smith, a well known resident of this town, and his wife, whom he married last June, have separated, and society is shocked. Mrs. Smith was a Miss Maud Miles, of Ridgway. A short time ago she discovered letters which proved that the relations between her husband and a Miss Altenburg, a clerk in his furniture store, were not what they ought to be, and that the affair which had begun before her marriage had not been ended by that event.

She at once decided to leave the doctor, and he has gone to Salamanca, N. Y., the former home of Miss Altenburg. Miss Altenburg is also said to be in Salamanca.

New York's County Clerk Dead.

NEW YORK, Sept 29.—County Clerk Edward F. Reilly died at his home, No. 6 Attorney street, at 6:30 o'clock. Death resulted from typhoid malaria.

A BID FOR SULLIVAN.

Richard K. Fox Offers to Match Him Against Slavin for $25,000.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—Billy Madden, in an interview about the fight, says: "My opinion is that Joe McAuliffe hasn't put enough of the devil in him. If he had only fought the second round as he did the first, he would have knocked Slavin out, but then you see, it wasn't on time."

When asked if American boxers must not now take a back seat, Madden said: "Not a bit of it. I believe that in John L. Sullivan America possesses the champion fighter of the world. Why Dick Fox is ready to match Sullivan against Slavin for $25,000, if Sullivan will agree to be trained by me. You see Slavin owes his success to his being able to last a bit longer than Joe, and he was dead beat himself at the finish. If McAuliffe had fought Slavin with the same spirit that Slavin showed, he would have knocked him out.

"It was a fair and square fight, and the man who says it wasn't don't know much about the matter. There never was a fairer fight inside the ropes."

Richard K. Fox agreed with what Madden had stated, and made this offer:

"If John L. Sullivan will box Frank Slavin and allow himself to be trained by Billy Madden I will back him to win $25,000, Sullivan to take the winnings if victorious, this offer to remain open for two weeks from date, and the money to be deposited with the Sportsman or Sporting Life newspapers."

Slavin refused to confirm the report that he had promised his future bride never to fight again.

It is currently reported that warrants have been issued for the apprehension of Slavin and McAuliffe. Inspector Harvey Chisholm has been entrusted with the warrants, and it is expected that the men will soon be in custody.

Sullivan Says It's a Bluff.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Sept. 29.—John L. Sullivan says he has no use for Fox. The offer, he says, "is a great big bluff, and anybody who knows Fox can see through his game without half trying."

FIGHTING ITALIANS.

Two Factions Face Each Other With Revolvers and Stilletos.

HAZELTON, Pa., Sept. 29.—There are two factions of Italians in this city and surrounding country—those who belong to a secret order, and those who are opposed to it. There is a great deal of bad blood between them.

Last night both factions met at a raffle, and late in the evening began to fight. Revolvers and stillettos were produced, and for a time things looked desperate. They were finally ejected from the hall and renewed the fight on the street. The non-society men were victorious.

One of them while on his way home on the outskirts of town was fired upon from ambush and his body and limbs riddled with two charges of birdshot. He had a miraculous escape from death.

Joe Permento, who bears the reputation of being a bandit at home and upon whose head there is a price, is being looked for by the police.

The society was recently organized and is not looked upon with favor by the people, who class it with the highbinders and Mollies.

WAR ON BISHOPS.

A Pennsylvania Congregation Opposed to Having Any Prelates at All.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Sept. 29.—The war of the bishops, which convulsed the Christian Evangelical Association of the United States last winter and spring, and resulted in the successive expulsion of all three of the rival bishops, Messrs. Dubbs, Bowman and Esher, has taken on a new phase in Pennsylvania.

A majority of the congregation of the Ebenezer Church of this city are opposed to having any bishops at all, and in order to place themselves beyond the authority of any that may hereafter be chosen by the association, they have applied to the civil court here to have the church charter so changed that the control of the church property and its ecclesiastical management may be transferred from the association to the congregation itself. A vigorous minority, who are not opposed to bishops, object to this procedure, and for several weeks they have kept up the liveliest sort of a fight against the majority faction.

The Adams Express Reduce Wages.

ERIE, Pa., Sept. 29.—The Adams Express Company gave its messengers and office men notice here of a reduction in their salaries and of a reduction in the force. The messengers on the Philadelphia and Erie and Pittsburg Railroad were reduced $10 a month and the office men from $5 to $15 a month. There is a disposition on the part of the employes to resent the action of the new vice-president, E. C. Wier, by leaving the company.

A Jealous Wife Shoots Herself.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 29.—Mrs. Ezra H. Judd blew her brains out with a 32-calibre revolver in the Orange street restaurant of her husband. Her two minor children were witnesses of her death. She quarrelled with her husband about the breakfast, and while he was in another room she shot herself. Jealousy was the cause of the suicide. Judd is the proprietor of several cheap restaurants, and has been intimate with one of his cooks.

Explosion of a Dry-House.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 29.—One of the fulminate dry-houses of the Winchester Arms Company exploded at 10 a. m. with a terrific report. No one was injured. The watchman, who had just left the building, was about 100 feet away, and was thrown down by the shock. Fortunately the house, a small one, was some distance from the larger buildings, otherwise great damage would have been done.

They Didn't Know What a Good Road It Was.

The ten-mile handicap road race of the Brooklyn Bicycle club, which was to have been held Saturday on the Westfield-Fanwood course, over the new county road, was postponed on account of the rain, it being erroneously supposed that the road would be muddy. Capt. W. Fuller states that the race will be run next Saturday rain or shine.

The entries to he race include Fred. Comingsby, J. M. Schoefen, E. A. McLeum, Howard Spelman, C. F. Quimby and N. H Rohmisour, all members of the Brooklyn Bicycle Club and wheelmen of national reputation. Mr. Comingsby will attempt to break the ten-mile road record of America. Dr. Gale has tendered the use of the Westfield club house to the visiting wheelmen. The local clubs will be out in force to render such assistance as they can. The event promises to be very interesting.

PLAINFIELD GETS A MEDAL.

But Capt. Martin Had to Fight to Make It Second Instead of Third.

The Elizabeth Wheelmen ran off their ten-mile handicap road race, open to all residents of Union county Saturday. From the start to the finish the men were well strung out, the handicaps not developing any close finishes. The winner proved to be a dark horse—James Blake of the Union County Roadsters, with five minutes handicap; he crossed the tape in 37 minutes 14 seconds; Stanton M. Smith, Plainfield Bicycle Club, with five minutes handicap, was second; time 39 minutes 32 seconds; Rufus Whitehead, Union County Wheelmen, four minutes handicap, third, time 40 minutes 35 seconds; A. F. Calkins, Elizabeth Wheelmen, two minutes handicap, fourth, time 47 minutes 20 seconds. Calkins virtually started from scratch, and made a good race.

A bitter war of words was waged in the matter of distribution of prizes. The members of the Union County Roadsters entered protests against the awards, in consequence of one of their members J. Blake making the best actual time as well as winning the contest. They claimed that their man was entitled to two prizes, in view of his performance, which was disputed by the donators of the trophies, the Elizabeth Wheelmen, and also by the referee, Captain Frank L. C. Martin of Plainfield. It took some three-quarters of an hour for the settlement of the difficulty, it being decided that the first man in, having made the best time, should receive the time medal, the second man, Stanton Smith, the winner's medal, and the third and fourth men the third and fourth medals, respectively. This did not meet with the Roadsters' approval, who say they will still protest.

J. E. Murray, also of the Plainfield Bicycle club, was the only Plainfielder besides Mr. Smith included among the thirteen contestants. He made a good run.

Passed His Allotted Time.

Thomas Oliver is now living in South Plainfield at the age of seventy-two. He was born in the old Oliver house on Main street, Rahway, where John Cornwell now lives. His father's name was Thomas Oliver, and Thoms Potter was his stepfather; he says he has traveled pretty much all over the World; was in the Mexican war, and the war of tae rebellion: was never sick in his life, except a few weeks in his childhood when he had smallpox. He is well preserved, hearty and in good health except his feet which have been lately affected with rheumatism. His mother died, and he left Rahway about sixty-four years ago, and has been roaming about ever since.

Encroached on a Neighbor's Land.

Isaac Lederer, the dry goods merchant, has achieved so much success in Plainfield that it has become necessary for him to enlarge his already extensive establishment. When his plans for building an addition were in progress, however, it was found that the building on the Pruden estate, adjoining, projected over on his land, and was in the way of the proposed extension. He notified the executors of the estate, who were at first inclined to dispute the claim that they were trespassers, but after surveyors had rendered their decision corroborating Mr. Lederer the executors yielded, and the building which trespassed has been cut away seven inches and is now outside of Mr. Lederer's line.

Just Escaped With a Broken Collar Bone.

William Edgar and his brother Alonzo, who were driving from their home in Westfield to Elizabeth, Friday morning, were almost killed by an express train at "Park Lane" crossing, Roselle. It was just about 11:30 o'clock when they reached the track at the crossing, and the 11:09 from this city for New York due at Elizabeth at 11:26, was making up lost time. The engine did not strike the horse that the Edgars were driving, but rushed by so close to its nose that the animal was dashed to one side in a heap. The buggy was smashed and Alonzo's collar bone was broken. Yet the brothers had more to be thankful than sorry for.

The Plainfield Cornet Band to Make Merry.

Members of the Plainfield Cornet Band are working zealously for the success of their first entertainment, which will take place at the Amphion Theatre on Wednesday evening of this week. The programme will consist of singing, dancing, recitations, solos, and the laughable farce, "Three Married Men," with Martin J. Dixon and Miss Jessie Wallack of the Tourist Co., in the leading roles, assisted by local talent.

Previous to the entertainment a parade will take place, starting from the Hall to Park avenue, to Front street, to Madison avenue, and countermarch, to Peace street, to North avenue and thence to the Hall. Tickets are on sale at Guttman's cigar store.

A Young Girl's Grief

At seeing her charms of face and form departing, and her health imperiled at her critical period of life, was turned to joy and gratitude after a brief self-treatment with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It purified and enriched her blood, gave a healthy activity to the kidneys, stomach, bowels, and other organs, and her return to robust health speedily followed. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

—A lost cashmere shawl is advertised elsewhere.

Anxiety Deferred Until Saturday Next.

Rain on Saturday caused the postponement of the third game of the Crescent-West End series, although both teams were in town and the b-nd played ——. The game will take place next Saturday on the Crescent ground.

The New York Sun of this morning says the West Ends had Gil Hatfield and George Gore of the New Yorks, Jack Farrel, the old-time professional, John Galligan of last year's New Havens, and Catcher Bowes of the defunct Brooklyn Association team.

A FAITHFUL DOG.

True to His Trust Even After His Beloved Master's Death.

A touching incident, which happened not long ago in a Maine village, illustrates once more the fidelity of a good dog. A working-man had a handsome Newfoundland which he had reared from a puppy, and to which he was much attached.

The dog returned the owner's affection, and was extremely fond of following him to his day's work. The master did not encourage this, but sometimes the Newfoundland would creep along in the rear until he was too far from home to be sent back, and then would come to the front with every sign of delight in his own cleverness.

One morning he had followed in this way to a house where his master was at work upon the roof. To keep the dog from straying away the man put down his coat and his dinner-pail and said:

"There, old fellow, you followed me without leave, and now you may stay and watch my things."

The dog lay down as he was directed, and the master went to his work. In the course of the forenoon the man fell from a scaffold and was killed. His body was carried to his home, where his wife was lying ill, but no one could induce the dog to leave his post beside the coat and dinner-pail. For two days he remained, refusing to eat, and showing his teeth whenever any attempt was made to remove the things of which he had been left in charge.

At the end of that time, the wife of the dead man, herself too ill to leave her bed, suggested that the dog would perhaps obey her little son, a boy of two years and a half, just old enough to talk plainly.

The boy was taken to the place, and moved by the loss of his father and the excitement of the moment, ran to the dog, put his arms about his shaggy neck, and burst into tears.

The dog seemed to understand that this was no ordinary fit of weeping. He licked the child's hair soothingly, and when the boy took up his father's coat and pail, the faithful creature followed submissively at his heels as if he recognized the little one now as his master.—Youth's Companion.

AN HISTORICAL MEDAL.

Peace Offering Made to the Choctaws By President Adams in 1825.

Mr. Alexander H. Handlan, manager of M. M. Buck & Co.'s railway supply house, has in his possession a relic which he values very highly. The medal was given to the Indians by President John Quincy Adams in 1825 as a peace offering The jewel is of solid silver, is three inches in diameter, and weigh six and one-half ounces. The obverse side bears an engraving of President Adams, the picture being surrounded by the inscription: "Given by John Quincy Adams, President of the United States." Under this are the figures 1825. On the reverse side are a pipe and tomahawk, denoting peace and friendship. Under this are clasped hands, a three-button military sleeve of the period, and the bared arms of an Indian, indicating that they represent the President and some Indian chief. The medal is secured by a large silver ring in the top, from which is pendant a large piece of blood-stained tape—red tape.

Mr. Handlan was put in possession of the medal in this way: In 1866 his brother, Augustus H., was in business in Fort Smith, Ark. He credited an unknown Confederate soldier to the extent of $24, and as security this medal was given him. The soldier disappeared—not, however, before telling the jewel's history. In 1864, being then in the Confederate army, he left Fort Smith and returned homeward on a leave of absence, with the privilege of taking his gun with him, through the Choctaw Nation. He met an Indian alone on the way, and they exchanged shots. The fight finally became a hand-to-hand one, and the Choctaw was choked to death. The soldier searched the pockets of the Indian, who proved to be a chief, and, among other things, found the medal in question.—Globe-Democrat.

Artificial Edible Snails.

A dainty, dear to the palate of Parisians, is in danger of disappearing. "Beware of escargots!" is the latest warning to epicures, "unless you know where they have been gathered." The escargot is the edible snail, the consumption of which has often been used as a reproach against Frenchmen by those who have never tasted the dish. Burgundy is the district where these luxuries are supposed to be found in their prime, and when a boastful bourgeois gives a dinner party he is generally careful to inform his guests that he has had the escargots brought direct from Burgogne. They are fattened in the vineyards of that delightful province, but since it has become customary to put sulphate of iron to protect the vines from phylloxera and other pests the escargot has become harmful and dangerous. It has been found from experiments that after eating leaves which have been treated with this decoction the snails are poisoned and die in two days. Of late years a large quantity of spurious escargots, made of milk and flour and flavored with the requisite seasoning, has been palmed off upon the market. There is little doubt that this industry will be extended considerably by this new curtailment of the supply of the real article.—St. James' Gazette.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Over half of the extensive stock yards, plant and property of the Anglo-American Provision Company, an English syndicate, was destroyed by fire. The most conservative estimate of the loss is $700,000, the highest nearly $1,000,000.

Rheumatism,

BEING due to the presence of uric acid in the blood, is most effectually cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Be sure you get Ayer's and no other, and take it till the poisonous acid is thoroughly expelled from the system. We challenge attention to this testimony:—

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatic gout, being able to walk only with great discomfort, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters, without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months, and am pleased to state that it has effected a complete cure. I have since had no return of the disease."—Mrs. R. Irving Dodge, 110 West 125th st., New York.

"One year ago I was taken ill with inflammatory rheumatism, being confined to my house six months. I came out of the sickness very much debilitated, with no appetite, and my system disordered in every way. I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla and began to improve at once, gaining in strength and soon recovering my usual health. I cannot say too much in praise of this well-known medicine."—Mrs. L. A. Stark, Nashua, N. H.

THE CITY'S REPLY TO CAREY.

Corporation Counsel Marsh Says the Latter Neither Denied That He Was Guilty, Nor Made the Idle Claim That the Charges Were not Sufficient Cause for His Expulsion—And As to Carey Being Tried by the "Injured Parties" Themselves. Mr. Marsh Says That Obscene, Profane and Indecent Language Used in the Presence of Gentlemen Does Not Injure the Gentlemen.

Following is the brief of Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh in answer to the argument before the Supreme Court by Frank S. Bergen, Esq., denying the right of the Mayor and the Board of Police of this city to suspend Policeman Carey from duty for three months without pay, for the use of obscene, profane and indecent language. The points made are so clear as to lend a general interest to the document, and everyone will be entertained by a perusal of it and surprised to find a brief so readable to common mortals. It is also safe to say that the majority—including those who like THE PRESS are well aware of the ability and acumen of astute Counselor Bergen—will be completely convinced that this time he has met a lawyer on the other side who has effectually answered him.

NEW JERSEY SUPREME COURT.

THE STATE, TUNIS J. CAREY, Prosecutor, vs. THE BOARD OF POLICE OF THE CITY OF PLAINFIELD, Defendants — On Certiorari.

BRIEF FOR DEFENDANTS.

THE PROCEEDINGS UP FOR REVIEW.

For "using obscene, profane and indecent language" while in the discharge of his duty as policeman, the prosecutor was tried before the Board of Police of the City of Plainfield, adjudged guilty and suspended from duty for three months without pay, and the resolution of the Board designating him as "the regular policeman who should act as captain of police," was revoked.

The prosecutor, by his counsel, cross-examined the witnesses produced to substantiate the charge, but made no defence on the facts whatever, and in the reasons assigned for reversal it is not denied (doubtless because this court would not weigh the evidence), that prosecutor was in fact guilty as charged. Nor is the idle claim made that the charge, if substantiated, is not sufficient cause to justify suspension or even expulsion from office.

The only questions raised by the reasons assigned for reversal relate to the authority of the Board of Police, the qualification of two of its members, and the regularity of the procedure.

All of the proceedings brought up for review in this cause were conducted by the Board of Police without the assistance or advice of counsel. The Board acted as practical business men investigating the question whether a policeman of the city, over whom the city ordinance gave them jurisdiction, had misbehaved himself in office. Their view was that they were competent to decide that simple question from the evidence that might be submitted, and they preferred to let the guilt or innocence of the policeman be established by the sworn statements of witnesses, unaided by prosecuting counsel, even though the defendant appeared before them championed by one of the most astute counselors of this bar. The Common Council of the city, in fact, expressly instructed the Corporation Counsel neither to prosecute or defend, but to hold himself in readiness to advise the Board upon any legal question which they might see fit to submit to him. See case page 33, l. 29. The Board did not think it necessary to take his advice on any of the questions raised.

The Board of Police, in endeavoring to strip the proceedings of all technicalities, and to investigate the matters before them in a practical, common sense way (just as they would, as private individuals, determine whether an employee had or had not so demeaned himself as to require dismissal from service), were doubtless guided by the exposition of the statute governing the case, given by the Supreme Court, in

Devault v. Mayor, of Camden, 19 Vr., 433, 434.

In that case, in the opinion by Dixon, J., it is laid down:

"The technical rules that have been judicially adopted with regard to inferior criminal prosecutions are not to be applied to this investigation, for while it is proper that proceedings to deprive persons of common rights for alleged crimes should be confined by somewhat strict limits, the removal of incompetent or ill-behaved officials from their exceptional positions of authority and responsibility should be easy and prompt, and no forms should be requisite which are not in themselves substantial safeguards of justice." The brief then quotes from the charter and city ordinances, the sections pertinent to the case, and continues as follows:

The provisions of this ordinance have been strictly followed in the proceedings brought up for review, and the findings and orders of the Police Board in the premises have not been disturbed by the Common Council.

I propose to take up seriatim the reasons assigned for reversal, to be found on page 37 of the case.

THE FIRST REASON ASSIGNED.

The most important question sought to be raised by the prosecutor is that contained in the first reason assigned.

If it were true, in any just sense, that Elmore D. Moffett acted at one and the same time as party and judge, his conduct would be utterly indefensible, and his vote would, of course, be a nullity. The case, however, shows that while Mr. Moffett did sign the charges upon which said prosecutor was tried, he did so believing that he was merely performing the ministerial act of reducing to writing the complaints against the prosecutor then already made by other parties.

See Case, page 28.

The charges preferred had been made to the board orally by other parties (Case, page 28, lines 9 to 13), and Mr. Moffett swears that he did not consider himself a party to the case against Mr. Carey (Case, page 28, lines 6 to 8), except in the capacity of a judge—as a member of the Board, and he further testifies that he sat on the trial with a mind free from bias, prejudice or fixed opinion adverse to the defendant on the charges preferred; that he had not prejudged the case; that he had no animosity against Mr. Carey, and never had had; that he had repeatedly and invariably said that he could not say what would be the result until he had heard the evidence; and that if the charges had not been proved, he would have rendered a verdict of not guilty.

If counsel had been consulted by the Board, doubtless a different mode of procedure would have been advised, but it is respectfully submitted that assuming Mr. Moffett's testimony to be true, the proceedings in this matter should not be declared invalid simply because Mr. Moffett did not adopt the circuitous method of procuring some one else to sign the formal charges.

The misconduct alleged against prosecutor in this case took place in the presence of two members of the Board of Police, and for aught that appears in the case, no one outside of the Board could be found who was willing to sign the formal charges. Suppose that there were no witnesses to the alleged misconduct but those who were members of the body required by law to try the defendant, will it be pretended that the defendant must needs go scot free under those circumstances? Or suppose that such other persons as were present with members of the tribunal appointed to try the defendant, were personal friends of the prosecutor, and should refuse to sign the charges, is it rational to hold that however flagrant the offense, it was committed with impunity?

If Mr. Moffett or the Board had instructed some third party to sign these charges would the question in the case be one whit different! And yet the latter method of procedure has the sanction of this court.

See Ayres vs. Newark. 20 Vroom, 170, 172.

In that case the charges were made by the Chief of Police not voluntarily, or on his own motion, but by the direction of the commissioners who were to sit as judges on the trial, and the Supreme Court held:

"There is no objection to this action by the Chief of Police and the Board of Commissioners. Their proceeding was a mere form to put the charge in shape for a proper investigation."

THE SECOND REASON ASSIGNED.

The second reason assigned for reversal, it is submitted, is without foundation in law. The use of obscene, profane and indecent language by the prosecutor was misconduct in office, not because it was addressed to any particular person or persons, but because it was an offense against good order, against the entire community, against the laws of the State. If such language had been used in the presence of a justice of the peace, and addressed to such justice, the defendant could have been convicted upon view of the justice. Other instances of conviction upon view of a magistrate are a familiar exercise of judicial power, and the validity of such convictions has never been questioned.

THE THIRD REASON ASSIGNED.

The third reason assigned does not appear to be supported by the return to the writ or the evidence. See Case, page 7, where it is stated that the objections were presented, that the Board voted upon the same and overruled them.

The Court will infer, in the absence of any return upon the point, that the objections were overruled after full consideration. If prosecutor desired to show that there was no consideration given to the objections, he should have obtained a rule of this Court requiring the Board to make return as to whether or not any consideration was given to the objections referred to, or a rule to prove by evidence aliunde that no such consideration was given.

Omnia praesumuntur legitime facta donec probatur in contrarium.

But if the Court should consider the testimony taken, it is submitted that the evidence on cross-examination of prosecutor's witness, John Johnston (See Case page 24, from line 19), shows that counsel for prosecutor was then given opportunity to submit any papers, and to make full argument upon the facts alleged in his challenge, and that he failed to produce any proof whatever to support such facts, and that the Board, after full hearing, in the exercise of their judicial power overruled the challenge. Here follow abstracts from the cross-examination of Walter I. Clarke, Edward B. Daly and John Johnston, all witnesses for Carey, proving that the Board of Police gave Carey's counsel opportunity to submit anything he chose to offer.

Mr. Johnston's cross examination closes as follows:

"Q. Did the Board cut him [Mr. Bergen] short or tell him to stop talking?

"A. I think they didn't.

"Q. They heard him out, didn't they?

"A. I think they did."

Judge VanSyckel speaking for the Court of Errors, in Wilkison v. Trenton, 7 Vr., 499-505, says: "No evidence has been taken to show the principle adopted by the Commissioners, and we must therefore presume that they acted rightly."

THE FOURTH REASON ASSIGNED.

It is submitted that the statement alleged in this reason, that Messrs Moffett and Hetfield voted to overrule the challenge of their right to sit is not supported by the return or the evidence. The prosecutor failed to point out to the Board what method of procedure should be adopted in disposing of his challenge, and the Board, it will be inferred, in the absence of proof to the contrary, acted in accordance with the principles of justice.

But assuming, for the sake of argument, that Messrs Moffett and Hetfield voted upon the question—from all that appears in the return, the Court must infer that there was a majority of the voters of said Board in favor of overruling the challenge, independent of the votes of Messrs Moffett and Hetfield. All the return says on the subject is the following: "Moved that the challenge of Mr. Bergen be filed and the same overruled. Carried." See Case, page 7, line 11.

But even if there were not, independent of the votes of Messrs Moffett and Hetfield, a majority of votes in favor of overruling the challenge, does it follow that the challenges were not properly overruled? Suppose that prosecutor had seen fit to challenge the entire Board, who could vote then whether to sustain or overrule the challenge? If by challenging the right to sit of a sufficient number of the Board to leave only a minority of votes in favor of sustaining the qualifications of the challenged members, an accused policeman can escape trial before the properly constituted authorities, no policeman, however unlawful his conduct may have been, need have any fear of removal from office for cause.

THE FIFTH REASON ASSIGNED.

The assertions contained in the fifth reason that Messrs Moffett and Hetfield entertained hostility and prejudice against the prosecutor, in respect to the matters alleged in the challenges, and were not impartial and indifferent as to the guilt or innocence of the prosecutor, find no adequate support in the evidence of prosecutor's witnesses, and are fully and explicitly met and denied by the sworn testimony of Moffett and Hetfield.

See Case, page 27, line 20, and pages 30 and 31.

The evidence as to what may have been said by Messrs Moffett and Hetfield on the trial of Joseph B. Miller has nothing to do with their action on the trial of the prosecutor. Assuming that the marks attributed to them on the occasion of the Miller trial had relation to the matters on which the prosecutor was to be tried, it has been shown that any prejudice then existing in their minds against the prosecutor, must have been completely removed before the prosecutor was tried. See the sworn testimony of both Moffett and Hetfield, to which reference has already been made. Whatever Messrs Moffett and Hetfield may have seen or heard or said prior to trial of prosecutor, this Court may safely accept their testimony to the fact that they had in no sense prejudged the defendant, but on the contrary entered upon the investigation of the charges against the prosecutor with minds free from bias, prejudice, or fixed opinion as to prosecutor's guilt or innocence.

THE SIXTH REASON ASSIGNED.

It is submitted that the return and the evidence show that the prosecutor was given a fair trial, and that the requirements of the statute of March 25, 1885, were carefully observed, under the construction placed upon that statute by the Supreme Court in

Devault v. Mayor of Camden, 19 Vr. 433, 434, and in Ayers v. Newark, 20 Vr., 170-173.

The opinion on page 173 of the case first cited, construes the statute as follows:

"A fair trial does not mean that all the formalities shall be observed that are used in the trial of criminals for minor offences in courts or by magistrates. The policeman under charges is not regarded by this statute as a criminal, but a public servant or agent whose efficiency and fitness for the discharge of his duties may be questioned at any time in the interest of the public, and no mere forms tending to chicanery and delay, rather than substantial justice, should be regarded. The purpose of the law is to secure the services of reliable men to preserve the public peace, not to keep inefficient and litigious men in office until all the forms of criminal cases are observed, and every ingenious objection answered."

The striking paragraph in the brief of counsel for prosecutor, on page 3, is a begging of the question. Counsel there says:

"One of the principal questions in the case, if it can be called a question, is: Whether a person can have 'a fair trial,' and 'every reasonable opportunity to make his defence, before his accusers and enemies, claiming to be the injured parties, sitting as judges.' The mere statement of the proposition seems to answer it."

The words italicised (the italics are mine) assume the things to be proved.

That the Board of Police have not been proved to be, and in fact were not "the accusers and enemies of the prosecutor," has been already shown. Other parties were the "accusers" in fact, and the signing of the charges was, as Judge Scudder remarks in the case of Ayers v. Newark, Supra, "a mere form to put the charges in shape for a proper investigation." To infer that Messrs Moffett and Hetfield were "enemies" because in the performance of their sworn duty, they proceeded to put prosecutor on trial for misconduct committed in their presence, is gratuitous. As well accuse the judge of the Court of Oyer and Terminer of being an enemy of a criminal because the judge in instructing the Grand Jury respecting their duty in investigating the crime with which the criminal stood charged, denounced the crime, and declared the accused ought to be indicted if sufficient evidence were produced.

Second—Messrs Moffett and Hetfield did not "claim to be the injured parties." They were not in fact injured by the language used by the prosecutor. The injury was to the prosecutor himself and to society, as in the case of intemperance or suicide. It is a novel proposition that the use of obscene, profane and indecent language in the presence of gentlemen is an injury to them, in the sense intended by opposing counsel. True, their sense of propriety would be shocked, but so it would if prosecutor had in their presence committed an assault upon some stranger. If his contention on this point is sound, then a policeman may curse and swear ad libitum, if only he takes the precaution to do it in the presence of the body having power by law to punish him for the offence.

THE SEVENTH REASON ASSIGNED.

It is conceded that the point made in that part of the seventh reason which alleges that the Board of Police had no power or right to remove the prosecutor from office is well taken. But attention is called to the fact that the Board of Police did not attempt to remove the prosecutor from office. Neither does the ordinance in question attempt to confer such power upon the Board of Police. That ordinance expressly limits the power of the Board to a suspension from office for a period of not more than three months, and preserves to the Common Council the sole right of removal from office.

The statute of March 25, 1885, relied upon by the prosecutor, relates solely to removal from office. Prosecutor's view would extend the words of the act to include suspensions even pending trial before the Common Council. It cannot be supposed that by the act in question a policeman is given the right to violate any criminal law of the State, and to remain continuously exercising the functions of his office, until after he shall have been tried and convicted and expelled from office.

The charter of the city of Plainfield gave ample power to the Common Council, and such administrative boards as might be created in pursuance thereof, to temporarily suspend from duty a policeman charged with such flagrant misconduct as that alleged in this cause, and the legislature cannot be held, in the absence of clear expression, or necessary implication, to have intended to curtail this useful and necessary power.

It would be subversive of all discipline in the police department, if, despite the gross misconduct of policemen in the very faces of the Board having control, there was no power to temporarily suspend such an officer until opportunity for the Common Council to determine whether that officer merited expulsion, or whether any proceedings should be taken with this end in view. The legislature cannot reasonably be held to have intended any such result.

The act governs expulsion. Suspension is a different thing. The legislative intent clearly appears to be that a policeman should not lose his office, or, in other words, that he should not cease to be an officer, without first having a fair trial upon the charges preferred against him. If such was the intention of the legislature, that intention has not been contravened by the action of the Board of Police of the city of Plainfield.

The rescission by the Board of Police of their resolution designating prosecutor as the regular policeman who should act as captain of police, was not a removal from office within the meaning of the tenure of office act. If there were in Plainfield an office of Captain of Police within the meaning of the act, that office would have to be filled by nomination by the Mayor and confirmation by the Council. See Charter amendment 1874, Sec. 1. No such officer was ever nominated by the Mayor or confirmed by the Common Council. The Board of Police had no power to create the office, or appoint to such an office. Prosecutor was nominated and confirmed as a regular policeman, and took the oath of office as such. The title given him by the Board of Police must for the purpose of this suit be regarded as a mere decoration. The Board was powerless to create any office.

It is submitted that as the alleged office of captain of police has no existence under the charter and ordinances of the city of Plainfield, prosecutor cannot in legal contemplation have been removed from such office.

One important fact should not escape the attention of the Court, namely, that the entire Police Board, to the qualifications of the majority of whose members prosecutor makes no exception whatever, unanimously agreed that the prosecutor had been proven guilty of the charges preferred against him. See Case, page 9, line 34. The Board disagreed solely as to the penalty to be imposed. Id.

It is respectfully submitted that nothing in the reasons assigned require the setting aside of the proceedings had before the Police Board of the city of Plainfield, whereby for the use of obscene, profane and indecent language, the prosecutor was temporarily suspended from office

SMITH'S KICK.

An Episode of the Late New York Central Strike.

[Written for This Paper.]

None respect the recent strike on the New York Central was far from being a failure, as I will endeavor to show.

About seven o'clock p. m. Friday, August, 1890, A. D., there could have been seen sitting in a car in the Third avenue elevated train, at City Hall station, a middle-aged gentleman, wearing a tired look, a high silk hat, and also the peculiar name of Jones. He was, and is, for he still lives, the proprietor of one of the numerous hostelries in the vicinity of the Grand Central depot.

Although Jones is far from being rich himself, he nevertheless has a great veneration for those who are. In fact, the Jones family had been rich, and he himself was born with a silver spoon in his mouth; but reverses came, and he went into business in order to find something to eat with the spoon.

Jones is an individual of marked conservative tendencies, and he regards what he is pleased to call the "lower classes" as a dangerous element that is liable by strikes and similar labor demonstrations to knock the keystone out of the arch upon which rests our entire social fabric. Jones is the friend of capital, which he invariably spells with a large C. Socially Jones, although not a millionaire, is a capital fellow. The tired look on Jones' face, and to which I have already alluded, was caused by a note about to fall due, to meet which he was somewhat unprepared. The truth is Jones' hotel is not very popular. In the language of a competing landlord, "as a competent hotel it stands without arrival."

While Jones was sitting in the car waiting for the train to start another middle-aged gentleman entered. It was Smith, who is moderately prosperous and who lives at Mount Vernon.

Smith is, and has been, a strong personal friend of Jones. There is only one point on which they disagree, and that is in regard to the relations of capital and labor. Smith, although no office-seeker, is the friend of the laboring man, or, rather, was, the friend of the laboring men. Why he no longer is the friend of labor will appear if the reader will make an earnest effort to keep on reading this sketch.

On this occasion Smith, the chum, so to speak, of horny-fisted toil, was extremely anxious to reach his home in Mount Vernon, as he had an appointment that evening with a man appropriately named Wriggles, a real estate agent, of whom Smith wanted to buy a vacant lot adjoining the Smithsonian mansion. There was another party in Mount Vernon who was after that lot, hence for Smith the delay of the train was almost sure to result in the defeat of his most cherished scheme.

Smith, the radical friend of toil, took the vacant seat by the side of conservative Jones, and they conversed pleasantly about the leading topics of the day until they reached that of the cloakmakers' strike. Smith said that the striking cloakmakers were fully justified in resisting their employers, while Jones maintained that no matter what concessions were made to them they would still ask for more, and in an abrupt and insolent manner. "Owing to their tendency to gush and spout and create a bad odor, flare up and go off when they ain't loaded, these strikes remind me very much of a gas well," remarked Jones.

"When it comes to strikes," said Smith, impressively, "you will almost always find that the strikers have real grievances that fully justify them in quitting work."

"In my opinion," retorted Jones, the advocate of capital, "more trouble is caused by men who can get work, but refuse to work, than by those who want work, but can not get it."

"My sympathies," replied Smith, "are invariably with the strikers, and I am not only willing, but anxious, to assist them against the grinding monopolies and bloated bondholders."

"Grinding monopolies!" sneered Jones; "the only grinding monopoly I ever knew was when the Italian organ grinders in New York got up a 'combine.' And as for bloated bondholders, I've seen lots of bondholders who held plenty of stock and were not bloated at all, while it has been my misfortune to have known men who never held any thing except whisky, and who were really bloated. Smith, do you know that at times I think you are a little off?"

"Of course I'm off, because I'm opposed to monopolies," replied Smith, peevishly.

"A monopoly," resumed Jones, with a cynical smile, "is the rival establishment over the way, but, as soon as you get possession of it, it mysteriously ceases to be a monopoly. The anti-monopolist is often the fellow who would like to put himself in the place of the millionaire. My dear sir, there are lots of millionaires who work harder than their clerks."

"That's the way it should be, when you take into consideration how much more pay they get," said Smith, scoring a point.

"It is no use talking. The more you concede to strikers the more they will demand. If, for instance, there was a strike on this road, and Superintendent Hain were to grant an inch the strikers would take the ell; but joking aside: I'm in favor of putting down strikes by the strong arm of the law. It would be mercy to the strikers, for in the long run the striker soon exhausts his resources and has to strike his friends for money. The only time they are successful is when they strike for fewer hours and it results in their not working at all."

"Jones, we should beware of those who do not show their love for humanity by their every-day acts and utterances. You have no milk of human kindness in your composition. My plan would be to treat the strikers with kindness," said Smith.

By this time the train had reached the Forty-second street station, and Smith and Jones hurried into the cross-car, the former remarking that he would not miss the 7:30 train for Mount Vernon for five hundred dollars in gold. As the cross-car approached the Grand Central depot, Jones, who was looking into the street, said with a puzzled expression on his face:

"I wonder what's up. It must be a riot. The whole street is blocked with people running around as if they were crazy."

Smith and Jones descended as soon as possible into the street, which was suffering from a congestion of excited pedestrians, struggling with grip-sacks and suppressed excitement, with occasional outbursts of crude profanity.

"What's the matter with the mob?" asked Jones of Brown whom they met, and with whom both were well acquainted.

"There are no trains running. The railroad employes have struck," replied Brown.

"What!" gasped Smith, thinking of his appointment at Mount Vernon, and turning as pale as a piece of antique tripe.

"There will be no more trains to-night. The railroad employes struck at 7:15."

"No train to Mount Vernon?"

"I don't think there will be any trains for two or three days, if the strikers can prevent it."

"Oh, the malignant hyenas!" howled Smith, the former friend of the laboring man, "they are toads with devilish arts; they are a disgrace to the nineteenth century, they are—they are no good! No train for Mount Vernon! I never realized before what a National calamity these strikes are."

"When it comes to strikes you will always find that the strikers have real grievances that justify them in quitting work," calmly replied Jones, quoting the very words of Smith, the ex-friend of the working-men, and winking at Brown.

"What is the name of that whelp of sin, the blatant sneak who ordered this strike?" asked Smith, gritting his teeth.

"I'm not sure whether it is Powderly, or a fellow named Holland," replied Brown, punching Jones in the ribs on the sly, for Smith's crankiness on this subject was well known to all his friends.

"Whoever he is, he is a reptile with sneaking ambition. He ought to be lynched. No train for Mount Vernon! This settles the labor question. I'd like to have him in some secluded dell for about ten minutes. I'd give him some points about strikes that would startle him. Are you sure, Brown, that there is no train for Mount Vernon?"

"WHAT" GASPED SMITH, "NO TRAIN TO MOUNT VERNON?"

"I am."

"Where is the militia! What are the police doing!"

"My way would be," quoted Jones, with a sanctimonious grin, "to treat the strikers with kindness. I tell you, Smith, beware of those who do not show their love for humanity by their every-days acts and utterances. However, hard-hearted as you are, come along with me over to my hotel, and I'll take care of you for to-night."

When they reached Jones' hotel, the people were seen standing in line as if tickets for a Patti concert were for sale. The number of passengers who had to remain in town in consequence of the strike was so great that Jones' hotel was crowded like a Harlem flat, and he, taking a leaf from the book of the railroad companies, advanced the local rate for board and lodgings, thereby reaping a rich harvest, which enabled him to meet the note, causing a permanent, sunny, bright smile to spread out over the Southern frontier of his face and curl up under his ears. Appreciating the fact that this windfall was due to the strikers, Jones is not so severe on them as he was. He thinks now that the strikers in this isolated case had a real grievance, and he censures General Webb for having acted harshly in refusing to confer with the men. Jones says now that labor, as well as capital, has its rights.

On the other hand, Smith, whose worst fears were realized, for Wriggles wriggled out of the bargain and sold the coveted lot to the other party, says that he hopes his right arm may cling to the roof of his mouth if he has another good word to say for the cause of labor, that the laboring man knows no more about gratitude than a double-nosed pointer does about the refraction of light.

If the strike had been as successful in other respects as it was in changing the sentiments of Smith the humblest brakeman would soon be able to stand the expense of running a great religious daily in New York and indulge in all other luxuries of the metropolis.

ALEX. E. SWEET.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

HIS FIRST SPREE.

It Taught Him a Wholesome Lesson Which He Never Forgot.

Pretty Mary Owens! How sweet she looked that balmy May evening. Fair, modest, innocent, yet as proud and self-reliant in her bearing as a young queen.

This evening in question she seemed troubled and perplexed. "Marry me now, Mary;" said the handsome young man at her side. "Time is precious, and I may lose you, you know. True, the marriage must be kept secret for awhile for reasons I can not explain. As we love one another, what matters it, though?"

"I have never told you I loved you, sir," said Mary, coloring to the roots of her hair, and flashing an angry glance from her tender blue eyes! Yet the trembling lips told too plainly that the heart was interested.

"No, dear, not in so many words, I know; but women are very transparent, and men of the world keen-sighted, and all that. Don't get angry. You know you love me, little Mary, and I simply adore you. One kiss, now, before we part."

"You are insolent, James Lee! Something is the matter with you. I perceived it the moment you opened your mouth to-night. You have been drinking!"

"Not enough liquor has gone into my mouth, little one, to drown a mouse. Only a small bottle of wine to celebrate the birthday of a friend; but I tell you, Mary Owens, your cruelty will drive me to drink two more on my way home. Your conscience ought to trouble you at the thought of that." And James Lee smiled sarcastically, showing his handsome white teeth, whose beauty was lost on Mary, smelling, as she did, the fumes of his wine-laden breath.

"It would kill your mother, James, if she knew it. You know what you promised her when you left home to come here."

"How you can harrow a fellow when you have a mind to, you little mite of humanity! Why bring my mother in at this time? Blessed old soul! Never mind! Good-bye, petite—you'll feel in better humor, I hope, when I call to-morrow evening." And James Lee turned on his heel and strode down the path, but not before he heard the tearful yet determined voice of Mary say:

"I shall not be at home to you, James Lee, until you prove yourself a man of your word! As I mean never to be the wife of a drinking man, your coming would only be wasted time for us both."

James Lee strode on with unsteady steps and a hot pain throbbing at his temples, until he reached the saloon where he had left his friend.

"What is the matter with you, Jim? you look shaken up," said the latter.

"Don't ask me! Yet I might as well tell you. I am a fool; yes, worse than a fool. I have lost the sweetest girl that ever drew the breath of life, and all for that accursed stuff over there. She saw me in liquor, and she won't have me."

"Cheer up, old fellow," said Sam Howe, who with friends had been celebrating his twenty-first birthday. "Good riddance, say I. Think of marrying her and losing your blessed liberty."

"Another bottle of wine for liberty, sweet liberty!" and the revel went on.

Meanwhile Mary, uneasy and heart-sick, crept early to her little chamber, excusing herself to her anxious mother and two sisters. She read a chapter in the Bible and prepared to retire, and it was not until she knelt down by the side of her little white bed that the floodgates of her sorrow opened; and then she wept as if her heart would break.

"Lord bless and save him I love," was the import of her fervent prayer, before she slept the sleep of innocence.

The faint streaks of the golden dawn dyed the fleecy clouds ere the revellers started for home, after borrowing a tin horn and two old flags from the landlord.

"I'm twenty-one! I'm twenty-one! Hurrah for liberty," screamed out Samuel Howe, staggering along. "Let's go past Widow Owens' cottage, Jim; we'll let 'em know what liberty is."

"No, Sam, I won't do that," said James, who still had some shame left; "but we'll go down through the field back of the house and cut across lots."

Widow Owens, who was an early riser, was dressing, when she was startled by a fearful din at the back of the house, as also was "Ben," the old bull, who had been turned out early by the hired man to get his breakfast in the field.

Mrs. Owens pitied the young revellers (not recognizing them), but Ben did more than that. He was mortally offended at their encroachment on his domain. The flags were bad enough, but the tooting of the tin horn as an accompaniment to: "We won't go home till morning," made him mad with rage, as with head down and hoofs pawing the ground, he made for the intruders. There was a maudlin cry, then a shriek, then one man was seen running for dear life, having stumbled over the fence, while the other lay white and still on the ground, his life-blood staining the green grass below!

Mrs. Owens saw it all from her chamber window, which was in the back of the house; and going down softly, without waking Mary, bade John, the hired man, after securing the bull, to bring the sufferer into the house.

"It is James Lee, marm. He's pretty badly hurted, but he knowed me, and begged me not to bring him in here."

"Never mind, John; bring him in, with the help of the stable boys; lay him in the spare chamber, and then go for the doctor."

James Lee, being badly gored by the mad bull, lingered a long while in agony, but he did not die.

Mary did not see him until he was out of danger, the doctor fearing the consequences; but one day in the early autumn he asked her the all-important question: "Will you be my wife?" after signing the pledge of total abstinence; and with tears in her tender blue eyes she consented.

"I have had a terrible lesson," he said. "It was my first spree, and it shall be my last."

He kept his word.—National Temperance Advocate.

HEATHEN AND LIQUOR.

A Work in Which the Good Men of All Nations Can Unite.

We copy with satisfaction the following paragraphs, which we find in a late number of the Christian Standard of Cincinnati. They speak well for the cause of humanity:

It is encouraging to know that there is in Great Britain a committee (of which the Duke of Westminster is president) whose object is prevention of the demoralization of heathen races by the liquor traffic. Christendom has discovered that it is not only highly profitable to sell rum to the thousand millions of our race which are still under the bondage of appetite, but also that the easiest way to defraud them of their possessions and destroy their spirit of independence, is to make them drunk. The committee presented a memorial to Lord Salisbury requesting that it be presented by the British representatives to the Brussels anti-slavery conference. The memorial urged that, with reference to all the native territories, the laws and customs of which prohibited the manufacture and importation of intoxicating liquors, any European government which assumed the administration or protectorate of the territory should take all due steps to maintain and strengthen laws so beneficial, and that in native countries where such laws had not obtained, prohibition should be introduced as speedily as possible.

At the third annual meeting of the committee in London a few weeks ago the chairman stated that since the conference at Berlin in 1885 it was satisfactory to find that this question of the supply of alcoholic drink to native races had come very much to the front, largely owing to the declarations of our own ministers at home and the expression of an adverse public opinion abroad. While the liquor for the native races came mainly from Germany and Holland, a quantity was conveyed in British ships from Germany, and hence this country had not clean hands in this matter. Mr. Caine's exposure of the prevalence of drink shops in India had led to inquiry on the part of the Indian Government, of which they might soon expect to hear the result. The native races who were unable to protect themselves looked to the governments of the civilized countries of the world to protect them. The chairman moved: "That this meeting expresses its earnest hope that the International Anti-Slavery conference now assembled at Brussels will be able to recommend measures whereby the native races of Africa may be protected against the introduction and sale by European traders of alcoholic liquors, which are so detrimental to the progress of civilization, of the Christian religion and of sound commerce." Cardinal Manning seconded the resolution, which was supported by Hon. and Rev. Canon Leigh and adopted unanimously.

And let all the people say "Amen!" Here is a work in which Catholic and Protestant, Agnostic and Nothingarian can unite, and one large enough to require their united energies.

THE TREE OF DEATH.

A Tropical Plant Which Resembles Our Saloons and Gaming Houses.

A tree of death has been sent to a lady in Savannah, Ga., by her brother, who is living in Java. He says that the natives warned him against handling a certain tree, which grows in the volcanic districts of Java and Sumatra, and which they called Kali Mujah. They said its breath would kill birds and even human beings. He paid little heed to the story until, chasing a bird of paradise one day, he saw it drop lifeless to the ground without apparent cause. He found the bird under a tree which gave forth the peculiar odor described by the natives, and knew that he had found one of the famous death-trees. He examined it closely. It had long, slender stems, armed with thorns nearly an inch long, and covered with broad satin-smooth leaves of a heart shape and of a delicate emerald on one side and blood red, streaked with cream, on the other. The flowers were large, milk-white and cup-like, and gave forth a faint perfume resembling that of chloroform. After inhailing it he became almost insensible, had a violent headache, singing in the ears and twitching of the muscles. It appeared to have a baleful influence on other plants; for, though the soil was fertile, none were growing near it. It was fatal to all insects; and small birds felt its effects at a distance of fully three feet. They dropped to the ground, and, if not speedily removed, soon died. He procured this specimen with some difficulty and sent it to America. It is the first living one that has ever been brought here. Unhappily, however, we have many forms of evil which produce still more disastrous results. Though the "death tree" does not flourish here, our saloons, gambling houses and haunts of vice do the same deadly work on the souls of the people that the "death-tree" does on animal life. They attract the multitude, while few go the way to the "tree of life," the leaves of which are "for the healing of the nations." (Rev. 22:2.)—Nashville (Tenn.) Banner.

ITEMIZED FACTS.

JOSEPH THOMPSON, a well-known British traveler, writes to a London missionary society from Africa: "Gin and brandy are depriving the native Africans of whatever native virtues they possess."

DISEASE is the essential consequence of repeated poisoning from alcohol. It may begin at the first poisoning or excessive use of spirits. The brain tissue may be injured at that time in some way, and require ever after spirits to relieve the system of organic change.—Journal of Inebriety.

THE Federal Grand Jury at Paris, Texas, said in its report last month: "We believe, from our investigations, that more than one-half of the offenses committed in the Indian country originate from the introduction of spirituous liquors, hence we think that a rigid enforcement of the liquor law is essential."

BIRCHALL TO HANG

The Jury Find Him Guilty of Murdering Benwell.

HE IS PROMPTLY SENTENCED.

The Prisoner's Wonderful Composure Never Deserts Him.

The Verdict Gives General Satisfaction. Pathetic Scenes in Court During the Closing Scenes—Mrs. Birchall Listens to the Summing Up for Her Husband. To be Executed November 14.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Sept. 30.—It took the Birchall jury only about one hour and forty minutes to complete the case. Judge McMahon's closing injunction was: "Weigh well the facts."

The Plea for the Prisoner.

Mr. Blackstock, counsel for Birchall, talked to the jury for nearly five hours. He referred to the fact that the prisoner could not testify in his own behalf and stated that the Crown had prepared their case with the aid of all necessary funds while the defense had no money with which to bring witnesses from England and other places. He spoke of newspaper criticism and cautioned the jury and judge to be careful and not be biased thereby. He made insinuations against the class of witnesses for the people and the manner in which they were secured. As to the prisoner's previous character in his dealings he admitted they were shady, but as to the murder of Benwell he declared him innocent.

Mr. Blackstock closed with a touching reference to the devotion of Mrs. Birchall to her husband, and asked how they would face her if, after a verdict of guilty and the execution, they would be able to meet her and answer her when she asked: "Where is my husband?"

Mrs. Birchall's head bent slowly forward until it hung upon her breast, while her cheek flushed deeply, but she did not weep.

Mr. Osler then began his closing address for the Crown. He went carefully over the main features of the testimony, especially Birchall's attempt to get the $2,500 from Benwell's father. Everything, he declared, pointed to the climax in Blenheim Swamp.

At the close of Mr. Osler's address Justice MacMahon made a strong summing, taking the best points in the evidence produced on both sides, and urged the jury to be faithful in adhering to impressions produced by the testimony rather than by the picturesque descriptions of counsel.

There was considerable excitement in court when the jurors filed out. Birchall sat as though transfixed. He did not speak, but sat with his eyes riveted on the judge. Mr. Blackstock moved over and whispered a few words to him, but it was evident the prisoner did not relish either the tone or matter of his honor's summing up.

The jury returned to the court room at 11:15.

Birchall Hears the Verdict.

Judge McMahon came into court at 11:30 and at once inquired if a verdict had been reached. The foreman of the jury replied in the affirmative. The judge sent for the prisoner and in a short time he was brought in, heavily ironed and placed in the box.

The court was crowded to suffocation. When called upon, the foreman arose and said the verdict was "guilty."

Mr. Blackstock asked that the jury be polled, and all in turn said "guilty." Then Judge McMahon addressed the prisoner, ending up with the question whether he had anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced upon him.

The prisoner was now standing in the dock. All eyes were focussed upon him. He gazed unflinchingly at the judge, and as he spoke his voice was as firm, his features as composed, his glance as resolute as at any time during his long trial. He said:

"Simply that I am not guilty of the crime, my Lord."

Passing the Sentence.

"I fully concur with the verdict," said His Lordship, "as brought by the jury. You have been defended with great ability, and no point connected with the evidence which could be urged in your behalf has been neglected. It must be the inevitable conclusion of all attending this trial that you premeditated and carried out the murder of a young man, who had been entrusted to you by an aged father. It was your duty to have looked after him and cared for him, and yet without compunction you deliberately prepared to take his life in order that you might reap the miserable reward of the drafts from England and property you then were in possession of. I can hold out no hope to you for a commutation of the sentence I am about to pass upon you. There is but a short time in which you can be permitted to live, and I can but advise you to spend that time in supplication to the heavenly throne from which you can now alone look for mercy. The sentence of the Court is that you now be taken back to the jail from whence you came and, between the hours of 8 a. m. and 6 p. m., on Friday, November 14, next you be hanged by the neck until you are dead, and may the Lord have mercy on your soul."

Birchall, although he looked pale, never moved a feature through the ceremony, and afterward shook hands with Messrs. McKay and each time a pleasant smile came over his face. He was afterward taken back to the jail and placed in his cell.

Mrs. Birchall Hears the News.

When the carriage containing the prisoner was passing the Commercial Hotel, a light was burning in Mrs. Birchall's room. Driver Stewart whipped up his horses and the carriage rolled by. Mrs. Birchall, who has been in her bed since leaving court, received early intelligence of her husband's conviction. Shortly before the verdict was announced the Rev. Mr. Farthing was sent for, and he immediately went to Mrs. Birchall at the Commercial Hotel. As soon as the reverand gentleman entered her room Mrs. Birchall, who was sitting in a chair, knowing his mission, fell in a faint. Although restored to consciousness she is dangerously ill and not expected to recover.

THE JERSEY MYSTERY.

Strong Efforts Making to Find Positive Proof Against Lingo.

CAMDEN, N. J., Sept. 30.—In the neighborhood of the scene of the Miller murder there is little doubt entertained but that in Lingo the authorities have the perpetrator of both the Miller and LeConey crimes.

Assistant Prosecutor Ridgway, however, who was seen this morning, gives it as his positive opinion that Lingo is innocent of both murders, but in this belief he is alone out of thousands.

That the meshes of circumstantial evidence are slowly closing about the suspected man is, however, admitted by Mr. Ridgway.

Lingo is the only suspect, and strong efforts are making toward bringing the crime home to him.

A microscopical examination of Lingo's underclothing failed to reveal any traces of blood, but stains produced by other causes were detected which may prove important factors in proving his guilt. He still sticks to his original story that he was not near the scene of the murder at the time it is supposed to have been committed.

Two Pinkerton detectives are now securing evidence against Lingo. They have been engaged to do that work by the close friends of Chalkley Leconey, who assert that the man who murdered Annie Miller is also guilty of killing Annie Leconey. To clear up that mystery they will spend any amount of money, and they believe that the opportunity to bring the murderer of Annie Leconey to justice has arrived, and hence they have secured the two detectives now working on the case.

County Physician Izard says the announcement that the post mortem examination revealed that Mrs. Miller had been criminally assaulted was premature. He says the result of the post mortem will not be made known until the coroners' inquest, which Coroner Stanton has indefinitely postponed, awaiting the preparation of the evidence.

STARTLING STATEMENT.

The Farmers' Position Discussed at the Albany Inter-State Fair.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 30.—Mr. N. G. Spaulding, secretary of the State Farmers' League, made some startling statements of the farmers' position in his address at the Inter-State Fair. He said in substance:

Why is it that the American farmer is abandoning his home, fleeing from his once happy fireside as from a pestilence, to give place to the Swede and the pauperized labor of Europe? Why is it that land in the Empire State has declined three hundred millions in ten years, while stocks and bonds and mortgages are above par?

Fifty years ago our Government legislated for the benefit of agriculture—a farm was the ideal American home; then agriculture was king and the whole Nation was prosperous, but now there comes a change. Government overlooks this greatest industry of the country. The fireside is forgotten; personal property receives special protection. This has developed an abnormal relation between real estate and personal property, much to the advantage of personal property; and we can never have agricultural prosperity until we restore this normal relation.

Morley's Speech at St. Helen's.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—Mr. John Morley, speaking at St. Helen's last night, asked the coercionists of that constituency and of the whole country whether the state of Ireland to-day was what they had bargained for when they voted for the present Government? As an instance of the situation in Ireland he would cite the fact that when Mr. John Dillon went to address his constituents a week ago he found the depot surrounded by military and police, and was advised by the local authorities to be careful in his language or the meeting would be dispersed.

King Kelly to Leave the Bostons.

BOSTON, Sept. 30.—Baseball enthusiasts here were surprised over the dispatch from Cleveland, saying that after the Boston Brotherhood club left that city yesterday President Johnson, of the Cleveland club, said: "You may say authoritatively that I have secured Mike Kelly to manage and captain the Cleveland team of 1891. Mike may have his faults, but he is a winning player, and I want the championship flag to float in Cleveland just once. Tebeau will still captain the team when Kelly is off the field."

Two Weeks by the Sea.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Immediately after Congress adjourns Senator Quay will start for Atlantic City, and has telegraphed Mark Soo to get his yacht and fishing gear in readiness. The Senator says he expects to pass at least two weeks at Atlantic City.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—The Land Grant Forfeiture bill which passed both Houses of Congress, but was in conference committee for some time reached the Executive Mansion and was approved by the President.

Another Presidential Tour.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—The President will leave next Monday for the purpose of attending the Grand Army reunions at Galesburg, Ill., Ottumwa, Ia., and at Topeka, Kan. The details of the trip have not yet been arranged.

THE TARIFF DEBATE

A Final Vote Expected in the Senate This Evening.

THE BILL READY FOR SIGNING.

The Measure Will Become a Law Agreed Upon in Conference.

Nearly 4,000 Messages Acted Upon by the Senate This Session—The President Sends in Important Nominations—The Land Grant Forfeiture Bill Signed—The First Census Estimates Too High.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—It is ascertained, as nearly as anything can be before it is accomplished and final, that the Tariff bill will become a law before the end of the week. Whatever discontent there is among the Republican Senators will not amount to enough to defeat the conference report. The bill will become a law just as agreed upon in conference on Friday.

Four or five Democrats are to talk before the vote is taken, and there will be some speaking on the Republican side, though not much. The purpose of the Republicans is to get the vote as soon as possible.

The feature of the debate was the statement of Senator Paddock, of Nebraska, that he could not consistently support the report and that he would be, therefore, constrained to vote against it.

The enrolling clerks of the House have been working almost continually since the conference report on the Tariff bill was presented, and they have just completed the enrollment of the bill. As a result, the measure can be placed in the hands of the President for approval within an hour after the Senate adopts the conference report.

It is in the power of the Democrats of the House to block the measure by demanding the presence of a quorum when the Speaker announces his signature to the bill, but there appears no probability that they will take advantage of the opportunity. Many members of both parties have gone home, and it would be easy to break a quorum.

It is expected that to-morrow will be the day when the session will end.

THE SENATE'S WORK.

Nearly 4,000 Messages Acted Upon at the Present Session.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—The Senate has almost cleared up the Executive business which has come before it during the present session of Congress.

It has received during the session 3,472 messages, each message (except those of unimportant naval and army promotions) representing a single nomination. All of these have been acted upon except 33. Ten of these were received last evening from the President.

Only two nominations have been rejected at this session—those of J. B. Eaves, collector of internal revenue for the Fifth district of North Carolina, and H. H. Schrock, postmaster at Selins Grove, Pa. Several nominations will doubtless be left hanging at the time the Senate adjourns. The President has withdrawn 39 nominations during the session; but the withdrawals were due to clerical errors in the messages or deaths of nominees.

IMPORTANT NOMINATIONS.

The President Names the Continental Railway Commission.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—The President sent to the Senate the following nominations: Smith A. Whitfield of Ohio to be First Assistant Postmaster-General. James Lowrie Bell of Pennsylvania to be Second Assistant Postmaster-General.

Frederick M. Dow of Maine to be Collector of Customs for the district of Portland and Falmouth, Maine. This nomination was immediately confirmed.

Members of the Continental Railway Commission: Alexander J. Cassatt, of Pennsylvania; George M. Pullman, of Illinois; Henry G. Davis, of West Virginia.

Charles H. Shepard of Massachusetts to be United States Consul to Gothenberg.

The First Estimate Too High.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—It is stated on excellent authority that the count of the census, when finished, will show the number of persons in the United States to be scarcely 64,000,000. The estimates, first of 65,000,000 and then of 64,500,000 have been found incorrect, and now the count has progressed so far as to show that the total will hardly be 64,000,000.

A Sensational Divorce Recalled.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 30.—The engagement is announced of Colonel Rutherford Trowbridge, of this city, and Miss Mary Parrell, the daughter of an Ansonia millionaire. Col. Trowbridge was divorced from his wife, the daughter of John C. Anderson, the tobacconist, two years ago.

AN ATTRACTIVE FAIR.

A Fine Exhibition at Trenton, N. J., Now in Progress.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 30.—The great Interstate Fair was opened under the most favorable auspices. The weather is perfect, the grounds in good condition and the half-mile track, upon which the horses of this and adjoining States will show their speed, is in fine condition.

There has never been a better exhibition in this State of fine cattle, pretty sheep, rare fowls, farm machinery and all other things that delight the rural heart, and besides these there is a collection containing 2,000 specimens of needle and other work by women. In this New York, Brooklyn and Philadelphia are well represented.

Thursday will be the big day of the fair, when Governor Abbett, Governor Briggs, of Delaware, and Governor Beaver, of Pennsylvania, are expected to be present. This is known as "Politicians Day."

PUGILISTS SURRENDER.

Slavin and McAuliffe Will Have a Hearing on Friday.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—The heavyweight pugilists, Slavin and McAuliffe, surrendered at the Lambeth Police court during the morning on a charge of assaulting each other and committing a breach of the peace. The hearing was set down for Friday.

An inspector of police testified in court that though the men wore gloves which had the appearance of ordinary boxing gloves, he had seen the seconds working the padding from the backs down to the points of the fingers while putting them on the men. Gloves thus manipulated were, he said, useless as a protection against the infliction of injury. He described the contest as a fierce and savage fight, not a scientific boxing match.

Mass Meeting for Postoffice Clerks.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Four thousand persons attended a citizens' mass meeting last night under the auspices of the Postoffice Clerks' Association. There were present letter carriers and clerks from every station in the city and delegations from Brooklyn, Jersey City, Long Island, Hoboken, Newark and Paterson. The meeting was held to urge the necessity of the speedy passage of the bill, now before Congress, making eight hours a legal day's work for postoffice clerks. A number of prominent gentlemen addressed the meeting, among them ex-Postmaster-General James and Doctor McGlynn.

Petition from Ben Franklin's Heirs.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30.—In the Orphans' Court a petition was filed by the heirs of Benjamin Franklin, praying that the sum of $100,000, now held by the Board of City Trusts, be turned over to them, on the ground that the provisions of Franklin's will are in violation of the law and therefore void. The object of the suit is to compel the distribution of this fund to the Franklin heirs through his only daughter, Sarah Franklin Bache. It is estimated that there are over fifty heirs in this city.

The Iron and Steel Congress.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—One of the most notable gatherings of mining engineers and iron and steel manufacturers that has ever occurred took place here when the first of the series of sessions to be held by the International Iron and Steel Congress was convened at Chickering Hall. President Hewitt called the meeting to order, and made a short address of welcome in which he expressed the pleasure felt by the New Yorkers at seeing so many guests present.

Great Day in Pawtucket.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Sept. 30.—This place is handsomely decorated in honor of the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the establishment of cotton spinning by power in this country. To-day is military day, and probably the finest military parade ever made in Rhode Island was witnessed. There was a dress parade by the Rhode Island Brigade, and the troops were reviewed by the Governors of Rhode Island and Connecticut.

An Astor Boy Changes His Name.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—John Jacob Armstrong Astor, 4 years old, son of William Waldorf Astor, had his name changed by an order of Judge Daly, of the Court of Common Pleas, to John Jacob Astor. The change goes into effect November 2. The child's grandfather and great-grandfather had the name of John Jacob Astor, and this was the principal cause of the change.

Death of a Candidate for Sheriff.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 30.—Charles F. Bidwell, Democratic candidate for Sheriff of Monroe County, died last evening, aged 30 years. Mr. Bidwell had been suffering for several weeks from an attack of typhoid fever, from which it was at one time thought that he had nearly recovered, but he suffered a relapse, followed by peritonitis, causing his death.

Hot Political Fight.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 30.—There was a hot fight over the organization of the Republican County Committee here, and the two factions almost came to blows. The contest was over the chairmanship, and the dividing line was between the Hiscock men and the friends of Mr. Belden. Mr. Belden's candidate, Edgar P. Glass, won by a vote of 19 to 14.

Her Son-in-Law Stabbed Her.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Sept. 30.—As Mrs. Margaret Hunt was sitting in her room reading a book she was suddenly interrupted by her son-in-law, Richard Hoy. He was in a drunken mood, and at once began to quarrel with Mrs. Hunt who is 65. During the quarrel Hoy drew a large case knife and plunged it into the breast of the helpless woman. Hay was arrested. The woman will die.

THE PENNANTS WON

The Baseball Struggle is Practically Settled.

SATURDAY TO CLOSE THE SEASON

Brooklyn Cannot Lose First Place in the National League.

Hot Race for Second Place Between Anson's Colts and the Phillies—The Giants and Brooklyns Close Together in the Brotherhood—Brooklyn and Louisville to Battle for the World's Championship.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—The baseball season of 1890 is practically settled. The pennants have been won, and it now only remains for the clubs nearest to the leaders to settle the question of their final position. In the National League the Brooklyn Club cannot now lose first place.

The season will close on Saturday and the club has only four scheduled games to play, three of them with Pittsburg. Chicago comes next to Brooklyn and also has four games to play, but Ausen's men will have more work to do than the Brooklyns, for they have yet three games to play with the New Yorks. In the event of the Brooklyns losing all of their games from now out—which is not likely—and Chicago winning all of her games—which is just as unlikely—Brooklyn would still win the pennant by a fair percentage over Chicago.

In the Players' League, Boston has a commanding lead for first place, and cannot lose even if the team should drop all of its games.

In the American Association the season will not end for some two weeks yet, but this will not diminish the Louisville club's chances for first place. They have so long a lead now that it will be impossible to catch them.

When the American Association has finished its season the Brooklyn National League and Louisville clubs will battle for the world's championship, just as the leaders in these two organizations have done in years gone by. They will not play the Boston Players' League Club, unless there should be some sort of an agreement when the National League meeting takes place within the next ten days in this city.

BEEF AS WELL AS PORK.

The German Government Making Inquiries About Chicago Slaughter Houses.

BERLIN, Sept. 30.—The German Government has no intention of making an early withdrawal of its prohibition against the importation of American pork into this country. On the contrary, it is currently reported that the condition of the great slaughter houses of Chicago and other places in the United States, and at the instance of the German Government, have shown, according to the allegation of German officials, that almost all the meat which is killed in them is unhealthy, and therefore Germany is considering whether she ought not also prohibit imports of American beef as well as pork, as being almost equally unwholesome.

Of course it stands to reason that all this is politics rather than facts; in other words, that the Government here desires to get up some good reason for shutting out American beef for economical considerations. It is not believed that anything will come of this rather blundering attempt at a scare.

THE IRISH TRIALS.

Counsel for Dillon and O'Brien Still Protesting Against Justice Shannon.

DUBLIN, Sept. 30.—Mr. Healy is applying to-day to the High Court in this city for a writ to prohibit the sitting magistrates from proceeding in the case of Dillon and O'Brien. The subject will be "Resolved, That reading is more beneficial than observation." In the affirmative, Vincent Rockwell, James Kimball and Charles Fernald will speak; in the negative, William Crawford, Walter Dobbins and Warren Rice.

—Lever, centre-field of the Crescents, came to Plainfield on August 23, with the Metropolitans. He was the second man at the bat, and knocked the ball over the fence. He was engaged by the Crescents at once. Since then he has played six games with the Plainfield team, in which he has been at the bat twenty times but has only made one little hit. Yet Sunday he played with the Metropolitans again, and batted a single, a two-bagger and a home run.

North Plainfield Young Men in Texas.

Fred. Obitz, of North Plainfield, who was one of the Craig brothers' party to go to Texas last Spring, is expected home today. David French will remain a short time longer. The landed interests of the Craigs are demanding much attention from George and Wm. D., whose ranch contains extensive droves of cattle. George Stiner also has bought Texas property, and will raise cattle. The young men are all in the best of health and spirits. They are delighted with Texas, and say that its unlimited resources have only just begun to be developed.

A Young Girl's Grief

At seeing her charms of face and form departing, and her health imperiled at her critical period of life, was turned to joy and gratitude after a brief self-treatment with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It purified and enriched her blood, gave a healthy activity to the kidneys, stomach, bowels, and other organs, and her return to robust health speedily followed. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

CAST INTO OUTER DARKNESS.

A Colored Congregation in a Ferment Over a School-Girl's Error—Calling Names, and Questioning the Morals of Those Throwing the First Stone—The Choir Threaten to Strike.

The sensation caused among the colored people of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, some months ago, by the scandal aroused over the alleged shortcomings of their pastor, was repeated last night, when the congregation met and wrought themselves up into a state of mind over the case of Laura Robinson, the young school-girl who was recently brought back by her mother, from Boston, after a most unhappy elopement with Wm. Mc Quay, whom she has since refused to marry.

Laura's mother was present, and spoke right out in meeting as soon as the suggestion had been made to scratch Laura's name off the membership list and to cast her into the outer darkness outside the pale of the church.

"My daughter's a virtuous girl," she said, "as good and virtuous as any one else inside these walls. She isn't to blame because a big strong man lured her away—she who belongs to a sex so weak and helpless."

And if the truth were known—she continued, waving her hands about with a gesture that meant a great deal, in a generalizing way—those who were so ready to find fault with Laura were just the ones who weren't the most pure in heart.

Laura had been abducted away,—she said—but she had kept from committing wrong herself. Anyhow, whether she was a good girl or not, let the guiltless one—and she glanced around significantly—let the sinless one, cast the first stone.

This made the strong-minded sisters mad, and in energetic language they disagreed with Mrs. Robinson, and told her to "go 'way!" and to do other things which, as Mrs. Robinson said, no decent lady would suggest. An excited war of words resulted. Uncomplimentary remarks were freely made. Such pleasant characterizations as "brazen hussy," "bold, bad thing" and "scand'lous critter" were heaped by feminine tongues on feminine heads. The members of the church choir got up and said that they considered themselves Laura's superiors, and if Laura ever played the organ in that church again they'd strike, and never sing again, so there!

"Oh, I tell you, we had a hot time of it!" said one of the colored sisters this morning. The upshot of it was that Laura was excommunicated, her name was stricken off the roll, and she was "cast into outer darkness," so far as one congregation could cast her.

All This to be Inaugurated in a Few Days.

TO THE PEOPLE: On Monday evening next at eight o'clock, John C. Collins, general organizer of Boys' Clubs in the United States and Canada, will inaugurate the Boys' Club of Plainfield.

Central Hall will appear to better advantage than ever before, when dressed to receive these uncut diamonds. This large, light, and well ventilated room, will be furnished with chairs, tables and bookcases, filled with new books; the tasteful, clean walls will be more beautiful, with 75 new pictures, the indefinite loan of the Century Company, New York. The new iron sink will hold its own in one corner and the reflected cheerfulness from these clean faces is going to brighten ours.

We will offer brightness, beauty, comfort and warmth to the part of our community, who have probably never before received these four things, at once, in one room. We expect to be a beacon in our elevated position, for who can overlook our 13 windows, our command of the prominent avenues, and our sweep of the railroad. We shall be all light and our love to man will shine forth like our lights that are to beckon boys in. We shall be merry for games will be there. Sometimes quiet for a corner will be there for those who wish to write, perhaps to a mother, far, far off.

Our hall, our beautiful hall is ready; our superintendent is here, and our starter, Mr. Collins, will welcome all subscribers, all interested and all boys, between the ages of 6 and 20. Our hall contains 3,000 feet. On Monday evening let there be 6,000!

THE BOARD OF MANAGERS.

A Plainfield Woman Makes an Interesting Speech.

At the meeting in Reform Hall Sunday evening President Harper occupied the chair, the Rev. W. E. Honeyman, Chaplain of the Club, conducted the devotional services, and a full choir, led by Mr. Vanderbeek, with Miss Doremus as accompanist, rendered well the music.

The speaker of the evening was George M. Angleman, who in a clear and forcible manner reviewed the temperance question, and commented on the individual responsibility it involved. Mrs. Rachel Bogart, by invitation, followed Mr. Angleman with a few very appropriate remarks.

The President made several announcements, and prefaced the offering of the pledge with a short address, after which the Rev. Mr. Honeyman pronounced the benediction.

Willie Gets a Free Ride.

George VanNest's boy Willie, who is only a few years old, boarded a passenger train yesterday for New York. He informed the conductor that he was under age and did not have to have a ticket. When the train arrived in Jersey City the news of Willie's arrival was telephoned to his father who lives on East Fifth street and the boy was sent for.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

The engagement of G. Harry Squires of Broadway, and Miss Grace Howard, of Ninth street, has been announced.

John Mortimer and family, of East Fifth street, are home again after a long season at their Summer cottage in Asbury Park.

John H. Doane, senior member of the firm of Doane & VanArsdale, has been very ill at his home on LaGrande avenue, but is now recovering.

Latest advices from Peter Hoagland locate him at Denver, Col., the extreme Western point of his pleasure trip. He will return by way of Council Bluff and St. Paul.

Miss May Hurd, daughter of John W. Hurd, of Dover, has entered Miss Kenyon's Seminary, "The Chestnuts," and is becoming a popular member of West Seventh street society.

Mrs. Hannah Stiles, of Illinois, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. David Pangborn, of West Fifth street, for some time, died Sunday, aged 48 years. The funeral will take place to-morrow at 2:30 P. M.

Maggie May Maire, daughter of the late Joseph Maire and May Fahn, died yesterday at the home of her step-father, Lawrence Fahn, in North Plainfield. The funeral services will take place to-morrow afternoon at half-past three o'clock.

The County Convention of the Christian Endeavor Union will be held in the Trinity Reformed church, this city, on Friday evening of next week. Addresses will be made by the Rev. W. H. Shermer, of Elizabeth, and the Rev. George H. Payson, of Rahway.

T. E. H. Curtis, Secretary of the Colorado Coal and Iron company, who is building himself a beautiful home on Eighth street adjoining H. G. Runkle's, has just returned from a fishing trip to Lake Bell. One of his stories (which was quite a good one in them days) is the catching of two bass on one hook. One of the fish, he says, weighed two pounds, eight ounces.

Counselor W. K. McClure has purchased the handsome residence at the corner of Crescent avenue and Third place, built some years ago by the late Washington Lithgow, a former Councilman of this city. It is considered one of the best built and finest finished houses in Plainfield. It cost Mr. Lithgow a great deal of money. Even the mahogony in the lower hall was imported from Santo Domingo especially for that house.

Engineer Charles Bigelow, a cousin of Mrs. C. H. Rugg, of this city, was killed last night in a collision on the L. & S. Div., near Mauch Chunk. Owing to a blockade, only one track was in use and the telegraph operator was ordered to hold back all coal and freight to let the passenger trains through. The operator, however, neglected to transfer this order to the night man who succeeded him, and Bigelow's engine drawing a train of coal cars met a passenger engine on the same track.

I have recommended it to many and it has benefitted in every case heard from.

PIGEON-SHOOTING AT DUNELLEN.

Excellent Sport in Pleasant Weather.—How Birds Are Killed at the Tournament.

A notable gathering of shooting men is in attendance today at the sixth annual shooting tournament of the Middlesex Gun Club at Dunellen. The marksmen are favored with glorious weather, and great sport is anticipated. The atmosphere is just sufficiently crisp to be exhilarating, and the utmost good spirit prevails.

Today and to-morrow will be devoted to shooting at inanimate targets—"blue rock" pigeons. These are circular moulds of clay, convex and ridged on top, and concave underneath. They are colored a dead black, except for a narrow circle of yellow paint midway between the pivotal centre and the outer edge. They are very hard and brittle.

While the real sport of the tournament is not in full blast till the live bird shooting begins, there is still a deal of excitement and zest over the destruction of clay pigeons. These frail products of man's handiwork skim gracefully away through the air at the speed of a swift-winged bird, the instant the triggerstrings of the traps are pulled. One soon becomes fascinated with watching how their flight is checked. The steady-nerved marksman stands ready waiting for the click of the released springs of the trap. With a sudden movement of arm and gun he gets the manufactured bird, spinning like a teetotum, under cover of his fire. As it seems about to poise itself for a final upward sweep the "blue rock," shattered by the heavy charge from the unerring shotgun, vanishes into a puff of fine black powder.

The first live-bird event will take place Thursday morning, after the sportsmen have had two days' practice at the inanimate targets, and during Thursday and Friday hundreds of cooing pigeons will be sacrificed to the sportsmen's skill. The birds are brought to the grounds in large wire crates, and bask in the sunshine and balmy atmosphere unconsciously awaiting execution. The marksmen abandon the inanimate sport and stand in a long row, with both barrels of their guns charged, alert to their duties. In front of each, and about fifty yards distant, is a green box, in which is confined a bird. A pull of the string, and a trap collapses, a pigeon is released, and a fluttering bit of flannel arouses it into flight. There is a sharp report, a puff of smoke, and in nearly every instance the pigeon falls to the ground instantly killed. If the first shot fails to bring down the game, the second barrel is used.

Some of the pigeons are very wary, and, despite the frantic waving of small red flags, refuse to leave the neighborhood of the traps; they smooth their ruffled plumage, the excited marksman becomes nervous, and when he finally fires he misses. Other birds adopt different tactics, dart instantly away, and tack so swiftly from side to side, intent on reaching the distant woodland, that they get beyond range, unless their hunter is unerringly swift, and are safe. Safe not for long, however, as just outside the circular high board fence inclosing the grounds are vigilant armed sentinels whose mission is to kill all straylings. Few birds can wholly escape, and none if wounded. Although there is one man for each cage, no man knows from which box his bird will rise. The birds most annoying to the shooters are the incomers, those which when released fly towards the row of guns. Not infrequently these are only crippled, and have to have their necks wrung. There was a time when the shooting of pigeons at some tournaments was more of a brutal slaughter than a sport, but nowadays the marksmen are humane, and kill all wounded birds at once.

The Middlesex Gun club is famous for the quality of the birds it furnishes for its tournaments. They are strong-winged, and the hardest kind to hit, and the fact that so few of them escape the sportsmen's fire attests the accuracy of their aim.

New Jersey is noted as the home of the live-bird shooters, and the Dunellen tournament is one of the best patronized during the year and the most popular among the best marksmen. This year many new faces are seen on the grounds, but many of the sports who are familiar features of the Middlesex shoots are again visitors at Dunellen.

Among the prominent shots present is J. Lamberson of the Midway Club, a gray-haired and gray-bearded patriarch. He is 68 years of age, is one of the oldest sports in the State, and is always on hand at live-bird events. He is a member of the team that has held the State trophy for the past five years.

Among other shooters present are: Tony Kuzer, A. Turford, Chas. Van Camp, Mahlon Fox and Ed. Updegrove of the Mercer Gun Club of Trenton; F. Post, Wm. Ely, Ress Van Riper, J. A. Blauvelt and Wm. H. Jersey of the Bergen Gun Club of Cherry Hill; C. M. Hedden, Sam Castle, John Erb, Frank Class, Chas. Heath, Wm. S. Green, Hugh Leddy and Jacob Pentz of the Newark Gun Club; S. G. Smith, T. H. Keller, Chas. Smith, John Riggott, Emory Robinson and W. S. Cannon, the noted one-armed shot, of the Middlesex Gun Club of Dunellen; Al Heritage, Fred Quimby, Milt Lindsley, Wm. Hughes, Capt. Jones, Dr. Burdette, B. S. Payne, F. Payne, Geo. Eaton and Wm. Sigler of the Jersey City Heights Gun Club; Dr. Lendell, R. H. Brientnall, A. Hedden, Wm. Hayes, Asa Whitehead, Ed Carrington, J. R. Burnett and A. E. Hedden of the Essex Gun Club of Newark; T. Compton, J. VanBrackle, James Beddle, J. Lamberson, Dr. Taylor and J. L. Terhune of the Midway Gun Club of Matawan; E. D. Miller, E. Collins and W. H. Wolstencroft of the Union Gun Club of Springfield; James L. Smith of the Hackettstown Gun Club, and Phil Daly, Jr., of the North End Gun Club of Long Branch.

Several among this number deserve special mention; one of them, W. H. Wolstencroft, is a young man who has probably seen 24 summers. He is one of the best all-round shots in the country, and his style of shooting is very easy and graceful, and his rapidity wonderful, his birds being coppered almost the instant they are sprung. He has achieved some reputation as a fancy shot and frequently breaks four clay targets sprung simultaneously, using a Winchester repeating shotgun.

Frank Class, of Pine Brook, is another noted figure whose reputation is national. He does very little at the clay birds, confining himself almost entirely to live pigeons. He is known as a match shooter, his ability being backed by an iron nerve, which stands him in good stead when shooting an uphill race. He has met and defeated many of the best live-bird shots.

A. E. Hedden of Newark is another wonderful shot. He is probably the youngest contestant on the grounds, being only about 21 years old. This is only his second season at the traps, but he comes from a noted shooting family, so takes naturally to the sport. He holds his gun well below his elbow, not taking advantage of the rules, which allow it to be held in any position except against the shoulder, but as soon as the bird takes wing he is on to him, and his rapidity and accuracy rarely requires the use of the second barrel.

With all this talent to draw from, the number of entries in each event cannot but be large, and the results close. It takes but a half-hour's shooting to make an enthusiast of one who has hitherto been a stranger to the fascinations of the sport.

The perfect weather of today put the marksmen in high spirits, and much enthusiasm has been manifested over the various events, which up to noon were as follows:

Regular No. 1—Each man shooting at 10 blue rocks, using only a single barrel for each clay bird—Chas. Smith won first money. W. Wolstencroft and Rowley divided second. Quimby took third.

Regular No. 3—Ten single blue rocks—Dean took first money. Figler, Miller, A. Soper, Quimby, Wolstencroft, Cooper and Russell shared second. C. Smith, Simpson and Brientnall divided third. There were twenty-four entries.

Extra No. 1—Ten single blue rocks—Cooper first, Quimby second, Rowley third.

Extra No. 2—Ten single blue rocks—Rowley, Cooper and Smith divided first money. Quimby won second.

Regular No. 3—This was a very pretty event, each man shooting at fifteen blue rocks, single barrel practice. A guarantee purse of $40 was at stake. The contest was very close, but Wolstencroft was the only one who shattered every clay bird he shot at. He took first money amid rounds of applause.

JOHN F. DORAN.

Something About the Speedy Left Hander Who Has Been Pitching for the Crescents.

John F. Doran, whose effectiveness won the game that Wiegand threw away to the West Ends, Saturday, September 20, will don a Brooklyn uniform as the Atlantic league season is closed. If the rumored series of games for the local and and inter-state championship between the representative national and players' leagues teams are brought off, he may exhibit his skill this year against some of the best batsmen in the country. If the labors of the arbitration committee are in vain and no contest takes place in October he will not wear the blue and white until next season. If reports and records are to be trusted the new acquisition will be a great help to Ward's team. Weyhing, Sowders, Hemming and Dorsan—right and left handed alternately—will make a quartette of twirlers that will be hard to beat. John F. Doran is one of the youngest twirlers in the professional ranks. Notwithstanding the fact that he has only been in a major organization one year, he has gained for himself a reputation which places him on a par with the best pitchers of the players' and national leagues. He is a Jerseyite by birth and is only 20 years old, but has the appearance of a born athlete. He is about 5 feet 4 inches in height and weighs 160 pounds. Two years ago he made a good showing against the Newarks while playing for the Elmiras, of the Central league. Pat Powers, of the Jersey City team, took a liking to him and signed him. After a few trials he was considered too slow for the company he was in and was released. New Haven took him up, but he did not do very well until this season, when he got rid of his wildness and began pitching a game which has brought the New Haven team up to its present position as certain winner of the Atlantic association pennant. He combines speed with headwork. His delivery is a puzzling one, and he has a better command of the ball than the usual run of left handed twirlers. He is said to be cool and collected in critical stages of the game, and there is no doubt that should his present form continue, he will prove a great find for Captain Ward and the Brooklyn team. He will pitch for the Crescents again next Saturday.

Whistling Mrs. Shaw.

Mrs. Shaw, who rented ex-Councilman Squires' home in this city during one Summer, is to go to Russia to whistle for roubles. Her tour was arranged for by the Grand Duke, when he was in London. Her whistle will produce a sum equal to $2,000 a night.

TO REDUCE ITS WORKING FORCE.

Over 100 Employees of the Adams Express Company to be Discharged—The Plainfield Service Discontinued.

It has leaked out in this city that the Adams Express Company, which controls the express business along the Pennsylvania road, has decided to reduce its working force on October 1, and that over one hundred men in the main and branch offices of the company will be discharged. The Company will discontinue its service in Plainfield after today, and also its service in Somerville.

The company has reduced its working force in Philadelphia, and the number of messengers running between Philadelphia and New York will also be reduced, so that the force will be but about one-half its present size.

T is will compel the men who are retained to do double work. It is said that there has been considerable confusion at the main office in New York, which has compelled President Hoey to be at the office every day for the last week for the purpose of consulting with the heads of the different departments.

The reduction of the working force has caused dissatisfaction among the employees, and some of the men are talking of a strike. They claim that the company is doing a larger business now than ever and that there is no excuse for reducing the force and making some of the employees do double work.

Learned Early How to Swim.

Harry Roughtenhausen, age four years, was playing with several other cherubs of similar age, along the raceway back of French's mills, Sunday, when the bank caved in, and Harry was precipitated into the water. He floundered about so vigorously that he succeeded in keeping his head above the surface of the stream, and by an instinct whose success seemed miraculous, struck out like a veteran swimmer, reached shore and crawled out. His infant companions took great delight in removing most of his garments, and they trailed the majority of his wardrobe gleefully through the alley and along West Front street, while he, scantily clad, and shivering and chattering, tottered along behind. "I fell in," he kept saying sobbingly in tearful pride, "but I swum'd out, I swum'd out."

Real Estate Changes Hands.

Among the recent real estate transfers in this vicinity are recorded the following:

Josephine A. Huff and husband to John F. McIntyre, all of Plainfield, land Southeast side Park avenue, Plainfield, 69x200 feet, $700.

John B. Mills and wife to Elizabeth S. Addis, all of Plainfield, lot Southeast side Orange street, Plainfield, 160 feet Northeast from Elm place, 40x107 feet, $2,300.

Warren Ackerman and wife, of Fanwood, to James W. Hope, of Linden, land on West side Vine street, 518 feet from First avenue, 50x164 feet, $150.

Walter L. Hetfield, exr., to Peter Frazer, of Fanwood, lots 1, 2, 3, block 1, corner Westfield road and South side Stout avenue, Fanwood, $370.

Almost Cut Off His Foot.

A son of Edward H. Woodward, President of the Cuba Manganese Company, of Carleton avenue, was using a hatchet this morning when the implement slipped, and the blade was imbedded in the young man's leg, just above the ankle, inflicting a terrible wound. Dr. Tomlinson dressed the injury, which will keep the patient indoors a long time.

SUMMER IN THE HEART.

Spring-time may lose its freshest tints,
And autumn leaves their gold,
The bitter blast and snowy wreath
May sweep across the wold;
But the years are full of splendors
That never will depart,
For they shed eternal fragrance
When there's summer in the heart.

The shadows linger on the earth,
The sunbeams bide away,
The sad mists fold their chill white hands
About the face of day;
The tumult and the rush of life
Sound aye in street and mart;
But they can not drown life's music
When there's summer in the heart.

The city towers are crumbling fast,
And totter to their fall;
The tried castle on the height
Shows many a ruined wall;
But men build eternal dwellings
With strange and wondrous art,
They are shrines for the immortals
When there's summer in the heart.
—David R. Aitken, in Chamber's Journal.

IN A HANSOM CAB.

That Is Where a Young Married Man Lost His Valuables.

In London, not many hundred yards from the rows of tall houses and trim squares which contain all that is most respectable in Bayswater—and very awe-inspiring that respectability is—lie some very gloomy, very dirty and very much neglected slums, which, if they do not contain as large a proportion of the criminal classes as do some of the courts and alleys of the East End, contain a good many members of that class whose means of living are too precarious to leave their integrity absolutely above suspicion.

Charlie Farrington felt this as he picked his way through the puddles, and wished he had waited half an hour for his train at Latimer road instead of making a short cut. He had been playing the banjo with a view to relieving the monotony of the slum-dweller's existence at a penny reading—so called because nobody read and admission was free—organized by the energetic incumbent of St. Cuthbert's.

Short cuts, as every one knows, are often the longest ways; and Charlie very soon found himself in a blind alley between two dark rows of squalid cottages, with a black wall, four costermongers' barrows, and a heap of rubbish at the end, which last he could feel and smell only. He now began to wish that he had taken his wife to the penny reading, in which case they would have gone home together in a hansom; whereas now he was trying to return on the cheap, as a dutiful young husband should. There were some very nasty-looking customers slinking out of the cottage—should he ask them the way? Better not, perhaps. A banjo is not an effective weapon, and he was all alone, and had his gold watch and chain on, given to him by his friends at the bank when he married. If only he could get a cab now! And then, as if in answer to his wish, there came a hansom trotting into the blind alley until the horse nearly struck the wall at the end with its head, and the driver pulled it back on its haunches and swore.

A pretty girl was in the cab. She saw Charlie by the light of the lamps, and called out in a frightened voice: "Can you tell me where I am, sir? I think the driver is taking me the wrong way."

The driver was turning his horse rapidly and using the whip.

"Where do you want to go?" said Charlie Farrington, going to the horse's head and standing there.

"To Chester Square."

"Where from?"

"Vicarage Gate."

Charlie Farrington whistled to himself. He stood where the driver could get a full view of his stalwart frame by the light of the cab-lamps. He was six feet two in his stockings and ex-captain of a foot-ball club, and he said to the driver:

"Look here, my friend; this is not the way to Chester Square, and you know it."

The man grunted that he had lost his bearings.

"Then you had better find them again," said Charlie, dryly; "or you'll have a cup of tea with me. Will you allow me to come with you?" he continued, raising his hat to the girl in the cab, and as she said nothing, he got in and sat beside her.

She trembled and clung to his arm, which he rather liked. "Where was he taking me to?" she said.

"Due west instead of south," he replied.

"Should I have been robbed and murdered if you had not come?"

"I don't know. I always thought yarns about wicked cabmen and their victims were all nonsense till now. Certainly it looked rather queer."

"I've heard they sometimes stab you through the little trap," she said, clinging still more closely to him in her agitation and apparently going to faint.

"I never knew them to do any worse than look down," he answered, thinking of his engaged days. "Curious," he continued; "very curious. You say you came from Vicarage Gate, and I could have sworn I saw this gray horse and cab with yellow wheels standing outside the concert-hall I've been singing at."

She did not answer. Was she really going to faint? How awkward—he had better put his arm round her waist to steady her. A jolt made her lurch very near him, and he felt the little gloved hand fall upon his. He pressed it slightly for a few moments; then he thought of Mrs. Farrington sitting up waiting to give him his whisky-and-soda, and he repented and dropped it. Still, he rather enjoyed the drive; more, perhaps, than his good little wife would have done if she had seen him. The driver evidently was on his best behavior, and was taking them straight to Chester Square. "I shall write down the man's number and inform the police of this," he said, presently; "what is it, .00156?" The little plate was rather blurred and hard to read inside the cab. "I'll call a policeman, now, I think, and take you on in a fresh cab."

"Please don't," she said, quickly, though in a rather timid voice; "the truth of the matter is, my people think I have been in the country for the day; but I have really been to see a friend whom I, who—you know one has one's private pals. A good fellow like you will understand."

The slang rather jarred on Charlie Farrington, and the voice was not quite a refined one.

"You mean you would rather have no fuss made?"

"That's it," she answered; "I thought you'd understand. The cabby may have meant to murder me; but to give him into custody and have to give evidence of where I took him from, would be worse."

Charlie looked inquisitively at her. She had ceased clinging to his arm and was lying well back in the cab. Suddenly she peered out of the window, lifting the little blind at the side to see the houses better.

"Here is the square," she said; "he has come along well; do you mind getting out? We must not drive up to the door together."

He got out.

"Thank you so much," she said, pressing his fingers rather hard. He reciprocated slightly, though he was a young married man and a very good husband, too. "You have saved my life, perhaps."

"Does the driver know your number?"

"Yes; I told him when I got in." And off she drove.

"She must live right the other end of the square," said Charlie to himself as he walked in the same direction and saw the hansom steadily pursuing its way; "by Jove! they are passing the church! The villain can't be playing more tricks; he must know I should have his number. Phew! I must go home before I do any thing. I wish I'd not gone out."

And home he went to his little house, and his wife was very glad to see him back so early; but, before he could tell her any thing about his drive—and he meant to tell her something—she exclaimed: "Why, where is your watch?"

Sure enough, it was gone—presentation watch, chain, and all, and all his money, and his pearl studs nipped clean off at the setting as if with a pair of shears.

Then he managed to tell his story—more of it, perhaps, than he originally intended, for there was some reproach in his wife's eyes as she tried to console him and they talked over what they should do.

But the constable on duty outside the concert-hall knows nothing of the man who drove a gray horse in a yellow-wheeled hansom, and who was waiting there when the people came out on the night of the penny reading.

And there is no cab licensed with the number .00156.—St. James' Gazette.

CAUSES OF SUICIDE.

A Medical View of One of the Burning Questions of the Day.

It is commonly believed that the tendency to suicide, like the tendency to madness, runs in families, and that is no doubt true. But the strongest-minded and clearest-headed man in the world has the possibility of suicide in him. On the other hand, the disposition to madness and suicide, which is so decided a characteristic of some families, is in many cases easily to be kept at bay by resolution and intelligence on the part of particular individuals. So that in most cases, if the story of a suicide be read from the very beginning, the full responsibility must be placed upon the victim himself. In our own time the pressure of highly civilized environment urges man in the direction of brain weariness and so of disgust with life. But it is to be borne in mind that no man is compelled to enter into the keenest competitions of his age. The brain is fairly mature before the age of twenty-five, and before that age few educated men are married, and fewer still are irrevocably committed to a particular calling or way of life. A young man of average intelligence is then quite able to judge his own intellectual force and staying power, and he is also able to take into consideration the history of his family and his own inherited tendencies. It is incumbent upon him at that stage to take stock of his mental and physical resources exactly as he takes stock of his capital. If his available money amount to no more than one or two thousand pounds he would consider himself a madman were he to embark in a business requiring a capital of half a million. But is he not just as much a madman if, with a mind of merely average powers, he enters upon a line of life requiring an intellect of the strongest and clearest order and mental endurance of the most persistent kind? A young man acting thus invites brain worry, invites chronic dyspepsia, invites sleeplessness, throws the door wide open for the entrance of all the physiological foes that destroy health and drive sanity out of the home.

A QUEEN'S CHARITIES.

Margarita of Italy Makes Unexpected Visits to Hospitals.

Queen Margaret of Italy has a fashion of determining to her satisfaction the workings of the various charitable institutions in which she is interested, which lady patrons of beneficences might do well to consider. Her Majesty, in spite of court ceremonials and social functions, finds time to visit these institutions, especially those devoted to children, very often, but her visits are always unannounced and made at most unexpected times, which procedure keeps the superintendents constantly on the alert. Recently on her return from her evening drive the royal carriage drew up before the entrance of a hospital for crippled boys, and learning that the inmates had been put to bed she went up into the dormitories and examined them all, praising the gentle Sisters for the exquisite order and neatness of the wards. The delight of the children, their wonder and surprise, was pretty to see as the beautiful lady in her rich apparel bent over each cot to smile a benediction at the little sufferers like some angel visitant, to smooth the pillows with her white, jeweled hands, and to speak gentle words of comfort in her soft, low voice.

It is little wonder that the Italians worship this sovereign lady who rules over them with such graciousness and tact and sympathy.

THE HOUSEHOLD.

HINTS ON ECONOMY.

Helpful Suggestions Concerning Various Little Matters of Household Management.

Only a piece of string! Never mind, save it; you may not need it this moment, but before long you will be glad that the string was not lost or destroyed, for short pieces of twine are often useful.

Hang the string on a convenient hook, and do the same with every piece of cord that comes into the house on parcels from the grocery or dry-goods store, or elsewhere. Save all kinds of string, and when a large number of pieces have been accumulated, sort out the different styles, and at odd moments tie together all similar pieces with firm, neat knots. If tied properly in a square knot—see Fig. 1—the knot will never slip. Make each kind of string into a separate ball.

When winding the twine, allow one end of it to hang over the hand from between the thumb and forefinger; then wind the cord over the first and second fingers, as in Fig. 1; keep on winding until it becomes bulky, then carefully slip the string off of the fingers and place it on the thumb, as shown in the illustration. The ball can be held in this way until all the string is wound.

The object in placing the ball on the thumb is to keep a hole in the center of the ball with the end of the cord hanging out of it, so that the twine can be unwound from the center by simply pulling the depending end.

Make the string up into balls about as large as a good-sized apple.

A very pretty cover for a ball of twine can be made of four different colored ribbons, each about an inch and a half in width, sewed together in the form of a bag, with the ribbons at the bottom of the bag folded over into a point before sewing, so the divisions may be smooth and pointed at the base, where a small hole should be left for the end of the string to pass through (Fig. 2). The ends of the ribbon at the top of the bag may be turned over on the right side of the bag, and allowed to hang down in pointed flats, the points being made by turning the corners of the ribbon in on the under side and fastening them in place with two or three stitches. There should also be a casing at the top of the bag, and a narrow, bright ribbon run through for a draw-string. If this little ornament be hung in a handy place with a small pair of scissors attached, for cutting the string, the common twine ball will prove very useful and may save many a precious moment, which otherwise might be lost in hunting for a piece of twine.

Pieces of candles are often wasted because people do not understand how to use them to the best advantage.

When a candle has been burned down to the edge of the candle-stick, take the candle out, and stick four pins in the candle near the bottom, according to Fig. 3; then place the candle on the candle-stick so that the pins will rest on and be supported by the candle-stick. In this way the small piece of candle can be burned entirely down, leaving no waste piece. There is more truth than one would believe in the old saying of: "Waste not, want not," and though it be only a wee piece of candle, the piece will give light, and is worthy of being saved.

Another way to use the short bits of candle is this: Let a drop of the hot oil or wax fall from the candle upon a saucer or small plate; press the bottom of the candle firmly upon this melted drop; it will adhere readily, and burn down to the end of the wick, without danger or trouble.

All the little scraps of soap can be used, even the tiniest ones. Save the bits from the kitchen soap, and when you have half a dozen or more put by, take a small-sized baking-powder can, soak off the label, and puncture holes in both ends by hammering a nail through the tin (Fig. 4). Select a can with a cover that fits firm and close, for there must be no danger of the lid slipping off.

Drop the pieces of soap inside the can and place the lid on securely. This transforms the can into a soap-shaker to be used in hot water for washing dishes, where it will prove to be a great convenience, and in using it there will be no danger of getting streaks of soapon the china, which is liable to happen when a large cake of soap is used in the water with the dishes.

For saving small pieces of toilet soap, make a five-inch square bag of white flannel, and use white cotton tape to form a loop at the top of the bag, so it can be hung up when not in use (Fig. 5). Before sewing up the bag, outline the word "soap" in fancy letters on one side of the bag and any other desired decoration. Turkey red cotton is best to use for the lettering, as it does not fade.

FIG. 5.

Hang the bag in a convenient place, and from time to time, as the toilet soap decreases in size until too small for use, drop the pieces into the bag, and when it is half-full, sew up the opening at the top, and the bath-bag will be ready for use.

With a little care brooms can be kept equal to new for a long time; as with every thing else, they must be well treated to do their best work.

Always scald a new broom before it has ever been used. Pour boiling water all over the broom where it is attached to the handle; then stand the broom up to dry, with the end of the handle resting on the floor and the straws uppermost. This treatment renders the broom soft and pliable, making it wear better.

When a broom is not in use never stand it with the straws next the floor, for it tends to make the broom one-sided and spoils its shape. Rather stand the broom so it will rest on the end of the handle, with the straws lightly leaning against the wall; or, better still, pierce a hole through the top of the broom-handle with a red-hot nail, run a strong string through the hole and tie it in a loop to hang the broom up by.

Then see that the broom is always hung up clear of the floor when it is put away.

If, after a time, the broom begins to grow brittle again, subject it to the same treatment as at first, and it will again become pliable. Or it is a good plan to put the broom into the hot suds in the boiler on washing day, after the clothes are removed, and leave it a few moments to soak; then shake it out thoroughly, and stand it up to dry. This will not only render the straws more pliable, but will cleanse the broom from the lint or dirt in the inside of it.

To restore a worn broom (Fig. 6), soak it thoroughly in scalding water, and be sure that every straw is well scalded; then shake out the broom, and while it is wet bend it in its proper form, so that all the straws will lie straight and even. This done, fasten a cloth band around the broom to keep it in shape until it has completely dried (Fig. 7). Next remove the band, and with a large pair of scissors clip the long, uneven straws on the edge, and you will be surprised at the improved appearance of the broom (Fig. 8).

If these suggestions are faithfully carried out, brooms will wear better, last longer, sweep cleaner, and in every way prove far more satisfactory. —Youth's Companion.

A MUSICAL TABBY.

An Irish Cat with a Decidedly Critical Ear for Music.

A clergyman in the south of Ireland, a quiet but keen observer of animal nature, some time ago described the odd effects of music on a cat in a friend's house. His host, in course of a chat, told him that kitty was exceedingly cross and upset if a certain air from an opera (the "Miserere" from the Trovatore) was played on the piano-forte, and that she would not even allow it to be whistled in her hearing. The clergyman could scarcely believe this. Pussy was lying on the rug, with a young family about her. Her master at once began whistling, first one air, then another. The cat paid no attention to them. Suddenly he whistled the tune spoken of in Verdi's opera. Immediately the cat stopped playing; her ears pricked up, her tail waved angrily. As he continued to whistle, she ran from her family to his side, and at last—as he described it—began climbing up with a sharp and piteous mew, looked into his face, rubbed her head against his shoulder, and at last put her paw directly against his lips.

The clergyman asked if it was not a trick that the cat had been taught. But his host told him no, pussy had started her conduct herself. One day he had been gazing out of the window, and whistling that air. He was not thinking of the cat, until suddenly she came up to him with mews and curious squeaks, and before he knew it was climbing up his trousers, and presently, from his shoulder, she laid her little foot on his mouth. The whistler made different tests of the matter, and soon satisfied himself that it was that tune and no other one that interested his pet. She came to him from any part of the house if he whistled or played it; and one gentle man put her in such a passion by it that she nearly scratched one of his eyes out, and behaved generally like a little tiger. —Harper's Young People.

Boarder—Well, thunders! how could you tell how many I ate, Shylock?

Farmer—I counted the pits.—Once a Week.

LITTLE IKIE'S FUNERAL.

A Pathetic Story in Verse by Rev. Miller Hageman.

[COPYRIGHT 1890.]
[Special Correspondence.]

TWO little ragamuffins, comrades for many a day,
Covered with blood and bruises fought at the wheels of a dray;
Doubled and bit and tumbled till the crowd cried out—"a cop,"
And a ring of bantering gamin lustily shouted—"stop."

Back sprang the little urchins at sight of the star of steel,
But Ikie slipped on the cobstone and fell right under the wheel!
One lurch of the startled leader, one crunch of the heavy dray,
A shriek—and poor little Ikie a limbless newsboy lay.

"Fall back," said the officer sternly, but Jakie crept out of the crowd,
And over the blood-stained breeches with woe-begone face he bowed:
"He's awfully hurted, mister, but 'twas only in fun we fout,"

"HE'S AWFULLY HURTED, MISTER."

As he wound his one suspender round the veins while the blood gushed out.
"Brace up now, Ike," said Jakie, "fur yez ain't a goin' to die,"
And the pale, cold lips smiled faintly as the film floated over the eye;
Clang! Clang! on the glossy cobbles that blazed in the yellow heat,
And the ambulance rattled Ike away down the swimming street.

"Your name?" said the judge. "It's Jake, sir." "And your age?" "I'm just struck tin,"
"And what do you do for a living?" "I sells all the papers I kin."
"And what does your father do, Jakie?" "He's in prison sir, doin' time."
"And your mother?" "She's went to help him; they's callouses, jedge, in crime."
"And what are you here for, Jakie?" "Fur behaving unrudely, sir,
"I hain't werry fly on such 'scursions cause I never was here befur;"
"Discharged"—said the judge, and Jakie shot out through the prison-line,
And busted a stand just started that soon took in its sign.

Two little ragamuffins in the hospital side by side,
"See, Ikie," said Jake, "what I've fetched you," as he drew out with boyish pride,

"BREVE ON HER, IKE."

From a bag, two pies and an orange, some cakes and a cigarette:
And on all the beds about them the eyes of the people were wet.
But when at last he fastened on Ike a wilted rose
And said: "Breve on her, Ike, breve on her till she blows,"
Even the doctors and nurses just then looked a trifle dim,
For well they knew that its beauty would never bloom for him.

"Chip in for a coffin, fellers," the ragamuffins said,
As a crowd of them stood next morning 'round their dead companion's bed:
"No Potters' field for a newsboy, no burying on a board,
"No hole where the unknown pauperses a hundred deep are lowered."
Down the steps wound the little mourners, torn coat and rimless hat,

DOWN THE STEPS WOUND THE LITTLE MOURNERS.

But in all the world's processions there was never a one like that;
So they carried him out of the city and dug him a grave so deep,
That the cry of the "Morning Papers" could never disturb his sleep;
And they buried him there with this headstone to mark where a newsboy lay:
A great, tall, lonely fir-tree that stands waving the years away.

LINGO STILL HELD

The Suspected Murderer's Statements Contradicted.

WHAT THE PROSECUTOR SAYS.

The Only Evidence the State Has is Against the Negro.

Not the Slightest Suspicion Entertained Against Chalkley Leconey—The Murdered Woman's Husband Indignant Over a Report that the Crime Was Committed by a Member of His Family.

CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 1.—Prosecutor Jenkins states that the only evidence which the State thus far had as to the murderer of Mrs. Miller was that against Lingo. He admitted that that which he had was not very strong, but he felt justified in still holding the man. The report circulated connecting Chalkley Leconey's name with this crime Mr. Jenkins declared to be an outrage, and added that he had not the slightest suspicion that he had any connection with the case.

The Evidence Against Lingo.

The principal evidence against the colored man is the contradictions made of his own statements. In the first place, the half sleeve of his shirt which is in the prosecutor's possession, and which Lingo had admitted to be his, he says he tore off his shirt and threw it into a cornfield on his way to Miller's farm that morning. The cornfield is near the woods in which Mrs. Miller's body was found, and 300 yards from a bush on which County Physician Izard says the sleeve was found.

The negro's statement next is to the effect that he went to his home, ate his dinner and set out for Tom Young's farm. All this could happen and he still leave his home by about a quarter or ten minutes of three. But here his wife contradicts him and says he told her he was going to Miller's to work. These places lie in two opposite directions from each other, and in going to Miller's he would have turned to the left and to go to Young's he would have taken the right. In going to Miller's he would have gone past or through the Mitcheson woods, and the Du Hadway children say they saw him go in the woods. His arrival at Young's after four o'clock, with two cuts or scratches on his hand he explained by saying that one was made by a butcher knife in the hands of his child at the dinner table, and the other by a stalk knife, is flatly contradicted by the physicians, who say that one at least, on the back of his hand, was a finger nail scratch. The negro, it is said, has also stated that he had a conversation with one or two men in Merchantville about 2 o'clock, and one at least of them says he does not know Lingo and is positive he never saw him.

Mr. Miller Indignant.

Mr. Miller, husband of the murdered woman, was seen at the homestead in reference to a report that suspicion had attached itself now to one of the members of the Miller family. Mr. Miller seemed indignant over it and said: "None of the family ever had a cross word with poor, dear Annie, and not one of them ever laid a straw in her way, and not one of them ever had a cross or angry word with her in any shape, and as for us, we never had a cross word between us, and all our future looked bright and cheerful."

Coroner Stanton was asked when the inquest would be held. He said that no time had been fixed. It will probably, however, not be for some time, and he said that three days' notice of it would be given to the newspapers. It was not thought best to hold the inquest until the case had been thoroughly sifted.

TARRED AND FEATHERED.

A Party of Masked Men Punish a Cruel Husband.

TROY, N. Y., Oct. 1.—An employe of one of the railroads leading into this city was tarred and feathered on the Hoosick road at about 8 p. m., by a party of masked men, led on by an indignant and outraged woman.

The man is charged by those who took him in hand with having treated his wife cruelly, compelling her to procure a divorce from her. In defiance of the mandate of the court he was married again a few days since.

On his way home with his bride his carriage was stopped by a dozen masked men, who dragged him struggling into an adjoining field and administered a coat of tar and feathers.

Shot His Sister and Himself.

LOWELL, Mass., Oct. 1.—John Q. Nichols, about 45 years, shot his sister, Mrs. Ida Cunningham, of Reading, Mass., fired at his nephews, Fred A. Nichols and Walter Lyman, and then fired four shots in his own head on Appleton street. There is but little hope of the recovery of Mrs. Cunningham or her brother. The cause of the shooting was a quarrel over the division of property, of which Nichols claimed he had not received his share.

End of a Will Contest.

TROY, N. Y., Oct. 1.—Contestants of the will of the late Shibboleth B. McCoy of Waterford, withdrew their objections and the will was admitted to probate by Surrogate Peters, of Saratoga. The estate is valued at upward of $1,250,000, the bulk of which is left to Mrs. William F. Burden, of this city, a niece of the testator.

Another Boston Failure.

BOSTON, Oct. 1.—Raphael & Lewenburg, dealers and manufacturers of cloaking at No. 40 Summer street, have assigned to N. P. Jones, of Cumner, Jones & Cumner. Their liabilities are estimated at $200,000.

SEVEN UNDER THE RUINS.

Firemen Meet With a Terrible Accident in a Chicago Fire.

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—A fire destroyed the picture frame factory of Brankiin & Son on Canal street, near Adams, early this morning.

While the flames were burning fiercely an explosion, thought to be naptha, occurred and buried seven firemen of Engine Company No. 17 under the flooring. Their names are: Richard Hoverson, Charles Klextor, William Carey, Andrew Nelson, Sylvester Higgins, William Kelly, Daniel Toomey. Nelson was dead when taken out, and it is thought all the others will die.

The Seventeenth's men are known as the "Tigers" of the fire department and is composed of picked men. The loss is estimated at about $100,000.

The New Jersey Election.

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 1.—The special election held throughout the State was against the proposed constitutional amendments. Reports received from the leading cities and towns in the State, including Newark, Jersey City, Elizabeth and Paterson, show that the vote was extremely light and that little or no interest were taken in the election. The voting was done under the old law. The amendment was opposed by the leading men of the State, because special legislation expands the statute books, complicates the laws and is generally against the interests of the cities and towns.

Vermont's New Legislature.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Oct. 1.—A large majority of the Senate and House are here. The Republican candidates for Speaker are H. R. Start, attorney for the Central Vermont Railroad; Hosea Mann, Jr., of Wilmington; Dr. Henry Boynton of Woodstock and L. H. Thompson of Irasburgh. All the candidates are on the ground and it looks as though Start had the best show. If the Republicans do not harmonize their differences a Democrat stands a possible chance of election. The Democrats in caucus nominated T. W. Maloney of Rutland as candidate for Speaker.

Two Men Shot by a Foreman.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Oct. 1.—Last night Foreman Henry of the Valley Stone Works, at Meshoppen, shot a stone cutter named Leslie Kellogg through the lungs, inflicting a fatal wound. Henry fired a second shot, missing Kellogg, but hitting a hostler named John Lord, inflicting a painful flesh wound. The shooting caused great excitement, and Henry, who was arrested, has several times during the day been threatened with lynching. The cause of the shooting is not known.

World's Fair Commissioners Angry.

CHICAGO, Oct 1.—The National Commissioners of the World's Fair are highly displeased over the announcement that Congressman Candler and his Congressional Committee are coming to Chicago to see what the commission is doing. Commissioner Williams, of Tennessee, says that if Congressman Candler and his committee come here they will be told to go home and mind their own own business.

Charged With a Double Murder.

SKOWHEGAN, Me., Oct. 1.—In the trial of Micah W. Norton for the murder of his housekeeper, Mrs. Cooley, the prosecution claim that the motive for the crime was that Mrs. Cooley secretly gave birth to a child in 1887, which Norton killed and burned; that subsequently the couple quarreled and Norton feared Mrs. Cooley would disclose his crime.

The Bell Telephone Case.

BOSTON, Oct. 1.—In the United States Cricuit Court, before Judge Colt, argument was made in behalf of a motion to extend the time allowed the Government to take testimony in the case of the United States vs. The Bell Telephone Company. The defendant's counsel filed a formal protest, but made no argument and the court extended the time to January 1, 1891.

Ten Business Houses Burned.

ILION, N. Y., Oct. 1.—The Hotel Daniels in this place and ten business houses were burned to the ground and a half a dozen others more or less damaged by fire and water before the flames were gotten under control. The loss is $45,000; mostly covered by insurance.

Arrested for the Jersey Central Wreck.

EASTON, Pa., Oct. 1.—Frank Glosser, day operator at Lehighton, was arrested on the charge of having caused, by his negligence, the wreck on the Jersey Central Railroad Monday night, by which three men lost their lives.

Narrow Escape of Iron Mill Men.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 1.—The gas receiver at the Clinton Iron Mill exploded during the morning blowing the roof and sides out of the building. Although the mill was crowded with workmen, no one was hurt.

Bishop Wigger a Candidate.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—It is stated upon the authority of Bishop Wigger, of the diocese of Newark, N. J., that his name has been sent before the Holy See as a candidate for the vacant Archbishoprie [illegible]

PASSED THE SENATE

The Tariff Bill in the President's Hands.

THE FINAL VOTE WAS 33 TO 27.

Three Republican Senators Records Against the Bill.

Closing Scenes in Congress—Adjournment Expected Late This Afternoon—The President Signs the River and Harbor Bill—A Large Number of Postmasters Appointed—A Flood of Silver Dollars.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The Senate by a vote of 33 yeas to 27 nays adopted the conferees' report on the McKinley Tariff bill. The bill was sent to the President to-day and will be signed by him without delay.

Since the agreement of the conferees on Friday last the President has been acquainting himself with the provisions of the bill, and the engrossed copy therefore will receive but little attention from him. The bill becomes operative October 6, although, as has been previously stated, imported goods may remain in bond until February 1, 1891.

The debate which preceded the adoption of the report was in many respects the most interesting of the entire discussion. The principal participants were Messrs. Carlisle and Aldrich, although several other gentlemen spoke briefly.

When the clerk began calling the roll upon passage of the report a number of representatives from the House were scattered about in the rear of the chamber. The galleries were well filled. Senators Paddock of Nebraska, Pettigrew of South Dakota and Plumb of Kansas, Republicans, voted in the negative with the Democrats. The Senate immediately following the roll call went into executive session.

A FLOOD OF SILVER.

The Treasury Practically Drained of Small Treasury and Bank Notes.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—A famine in small treasury and bank notes is threatened for the Eastern cities. The banks of this city, which have a more immediate connection with the treasury, are now bare of notes of small denominations, and the scarcity is being severely felt. The cause is the large shipment of small bills to the West to meet the obligations of the Silver bill and the movement of crops.

The Treasury has been practically drained of small notes.

A prominent banker said to-day that the result will be that the Treasury will be compelled to put out several millions of silver dollars and force them into circulation. The prospects are, therefore, likely for a flood of silver for the East in the immediate future.

Presidential Nominations.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Among the last batch of nominations sent to the Senate by the President were the following: George S. Batchellor, of New York, to be Minister Resident and Consul-General of the United States to Portugal, vice George B. Loring, resigned; Consul at Bermuda, Horace W. Metcalf of Maine, and the following postmasters: Frank L. Martin, Bethel, Vt.; Daniel A. Hurd, North Berwick, Me.; George M. Douglass, West Rutland, Vt.; Hubert E. Carpenter, East Hamton, Conn.; C. S. Randall, Rouse's Point, N. Y.; W. S. Raynor, Sayville, N. Y.; W. P. Phelps, Merchantville, N. J., Thomas W. Palmer, Frenchtown, N. J.; H. Christopher Ehni, Raritan, N. J.; Robert H. Wilson, Tarentum, Pa.; Seth Orme, St. Claire, Pa.; N. H. Hastings, Austin, Pa.; Henry Andrews, Ardmore, Pa.; Anna H. Griscom, Jenkinton, Pa.; J. B. Haines, Jeannette, Pa.; Michael M. Kistler, East Stroudsburg, Pa.

Bills Approved by the President.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The President has approved the River and Harbor bill; the joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to purchase nickel ore for use in the manufacture of nickel steel armor; extending the limit of cost for public building at Hoboken, N. J.; amending an act of Congress relative to fire limit of site of postoffice and Federal building at Brooklyn, N. Y.; an act to divide the State of Iowa into two judicial districts; making Peoria, Ill., a port of delivery, and the bill providing for a statue to Gen. Lafayette.

Adjournment Expected This Afternoon.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The impression seems to prevail that Congress will adjourn late this afternoon. The Tariff bill was sent to the President at 1 o'clock, and he will be able to notify the House that it has been signed about 4. Then nothing will intervene between the two houses and an adjournment. It is possible that the President will not sign the bill in time to permit an adjournment this evening. Vice-President Morton said that Congress would adjourn sure this afternoon.

SLAVIN TO FIGHT JACKSON.

A Purse of $15,000 Has Been Guaranteed for the Battle.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—Arrangements have been completed by cable for the meeting of Peter Jackson and Frank P. Slavin in the rooms of the Melbourne Athletic Club within the next six months. A purse of £3,000 has been guaranteed, and Jack Dougherty has lodged a deposit in Melbourne in behalf of Slavin, who readily accepted Jackson's challenge.

A stipulation was made that the fight be arranged for such a time as will not prevent Slavin's presence in England to receive any sentence that may be imposed on him in connection with his recent Ormonde Club battle.

Closing Scenes in the House.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—This being the last day of the session, the members of the House fairly tumbled over one another to rush through bills in which they were particularly interested. From the hour that Speaker Reed called the House to order the well was jammed with Representatives clamoring for recognition. Many bills were left upon the Speaker's table, either to die or to be resurrected in December.

PARNELL'S POSITION

He Is Anxious About the New Irish Movement.

IMPORTANT MEETING TO BE HELD

American Irishmen to be Asked to Support the Plan of Campaign.

Rejoicing in Germany Over the Return of the Exiled Socialists—No Decision by the High Court in the Dillon and O'Brien Case—A German Lady Arrested as a Spy in France.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—A meeting of the members of the Irish party has been fixed for Oct. 16. It will probably be a very important affair, and at it Mr. Parnell is expected to take very decisive action. He will either resign his present position or he will come out strongly and squarely for the plan of campaign. The need of money overshadows all questions and the American trip is a most important item in the programme.

Mr. Parnell has ordered all the members to cancel their engagements for the 16th. A supreme effort will be made in order to conciliate the American Irish to unite with the party here.

The report that the Vatican has determined to put pressure on the Irish bishops to enforce the Papal rescript receives confirmation from a pastoral issued yesterday by the Bishop of Kildare. The Parnellites are anxious to avoid any breach with the church, and it is thought that no further attempt will be made to put the plan of campaign in force. Mr. Parnell is anxious that home rule should again be brought to the front.

SOCIALISTS REJOICE.

Great Excitement in Germany Over the Expiration of the Anti-Socialist Law.

BERLIN, Oct. 1.—There was much excitement in Germany over the expiration of the anti-Socialist law, the Socialists indulging in general rejoicing.

Thirty Socialists who had been in exile arrived in Berlin last evening and received an ovation. Public meetings were held in seven halls, all being crowded. Many illuminations appeared in the streets in honor of the occasion. Numerous processions were formed, and some of them became disorderly and were dispersed by the police, but no violence or injury resulted.

At Hamburg 19 exiles returned and were enthusiastically greeted. Similar scenes were enacted in all the large cities.

Strikers to Come to America.

DUBLIN, Oct. 1.—The Executive Committee of the Amalgamated Railway Servants has decided to send to America a hundred of the men who took part in the unsuccessful strike on the Dublin, Wicklow and Wexford line.

The High Court Reserves Its Decision.

DUBLIN, Oct. 1.—After hearing argument upon the motion to remove the case of O'Brien, Dillon and others from the Tipperary court on the ground of bias, the High Court of Justice reserved its decision.

O'Brien and Dillon Will Not Leave.

DUBLIN, Oct. 1.—The tedious prolongation of the Tipperary trial seems to have succeeded in its object, for Messrs. O'Brien and Dillon have entirely given up hope of making the American trip.

Another German Spy.

PARIS, Oct. 1.—A German lady has been arrested at Cannes who had in her possession a number of topographical charts of the fortress and plans of the other defenses of the town.

Two Priests Detained.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1.—Rev. Dr. H. A. Kenkenberg and Rev. Dr. J. Saentgerath, Catholic priests from Europe, who arrived at this port on the steamship Belgenland are detained under the contract labor law. The priests acknowledge that they were hired to come to this country as teachers in the Catholic college at St. Paul, Minn., founded by Bishop Ireland. The matter has been referred to the custom authorities, and the two priests will be detained on board the Belgenland pending a decision.

Crushed by a Railroad Train.

CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 1.—Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Williams, while attempting to cross the Camden & Atlantic Railroad in their carriage, were struck by the Haddonfield express train and Mr. Williams was instantly killed. Mrs. Williams is dying in the Cooper Hospital from a compound fracture of the skull. Her arm is broken in two places and she is internally injured. Mr. and Mrs. Williams were over seventy years old, wealthy and prominent in church circles here.

$48,000 Asked for the Cincinnati Club.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 1.—The following are President Stern's terms for the Cincinnati club of the National League made to the Brotherhood and if accepted the transfer will be made next Tuesday: The price to be paid is $48,000, of which sum $30,000 is to be cash in hand on that date and a lien of $18,000 on the property delivered. It is thought the offer will be accepted.

Captain Kelly's Denial.

Hustler Phillips in an Insane Asylum.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 1.—H. B. Phillips, the baseball magnate, is once more confined in the insane asylum at Merchantville, N. J. Word was received here that the chances are against his recovery.

WATCHING BIRCHALL.

A Belief that He Will Cheat the Gallows by Committing Suicide.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Oct., 1.—Birchall's cell was carefully searched in every nook and corner for poison or any weapon with which he might make away with himself, and his clothing were subjected to the same microscopic examination. From this time on he will be watched night and day.

No one is allowed to see Birchall without an order from the sheriff. The strictest watch is kept over him. Many believe he will cheat the gallows yet by committing suicide.

Jailer Cameron and the sheriff held a consultation to determine some line of conduct with reference to Birchall's management. Mr. Cameron is strongly in favor of allowing his wife just one more final interview. He thinks it will be better for Birchall, and above all better for Mrs. Birchall. He will advise her strongly to go back at once, in company with her sister, to England. So long as she is in the same atmosphere with Birchall she is under his influence, and so long as she is under that influence she will grieve to the point of putting her life in peril.

Birchall broke down and wept profusely when told his wife fainted when she learned of his conviction.

SMALL-SIZED SENSATION.

The President's Coachman Elopes With One of the Chambermaids.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—A White House elopement is furnishing a small-sized sensation. The colored coachman of President Harrison is the hero of the escapade, and he has run off with one of the chambermaids of the White House.

The story is invested with some additional interest from the fact that the heroine is the niece of Congressman Langston, of Virginia, who was seated a few days ago.

A Lawyer Becomes a Criminal.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 1.—Harry E. Hopkins, alias E. H. Corry was arrested by detectives here on warrants sworn out in New York charging him with grand larceny. It is said that Hopkins was educated for a lawyer and admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of this State. His dissipated habits, however, brought him to the grade of a common criminal. He committed a serious offense some time ago in New York, and to save himself fled to Texas, where he remained until he supposed all had blown over, and then returning, he committed other thefts.

Baby Beatrice's Mother Found.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Gilbert M. Speir, Jr., one of the executors of Robert Ray Hamilton's will, said that it was true that the real mother of baby Beatrice had been discovered, and that she could be produced in court whenever the executors wish.

LINGO STILL HELD

The Suspected Murderer's Statements Contradicted.

WHAT THE PROSECUTOR SAYS.

The Only Evidence the State Has is Against the Negro.

Not the Slightest Suspicion Entertained Against Chalkley Leconey—The Murdered Woman's Husband Indignant Over a Report that the Crime Was Committed by a Member of His Family.

CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 1.—Prosecutor Jenkins states that the only evidence which the State thus far had as to the murderer of Mrs. Miller was that against Lingo. He admitted that that which he had was not very strong, but he felt justified in still holding the man. The report circulated connecting Chalkley Leconey's name with this crime Mr. Jenkins declared to be an outrage, and added that he had not the slightest suspicion that he had any connection with the case.

The Evidence Against Lingo.

The principal evidence against the colored man is the contradictions made of his own statements. In the first place, the half sleeve of his shirt which is in the prosecutor's possession, and which Lingo had admitted to be his, he says he tore off his shirt and threw it into a cornfield on his way to Miller's farm that morning. The cornfield is near the woods in which Mrs. Miller's body was found, and 300 yards from a bush on which County Physician Izard says the sleeve was found.

The negro's statement next is to the effect that he went to his home, ate his dinner and set out for Tom Young's farm. All this could happen and he still leave his home by about a quarter or ten minutes of three. But here his wife contradicts him and says he told her he was going to Miller's to work. These places lie in two opposite directions from each other, and in going to Miller's he would have turned to the left and to go to Young's he would have taken the right. In going to Miller's he would have gone past or through the Mitcheson woods, and the Du Hadway children say they saw him go in the woods. His arrival at Young's after four o'clock, with two cuts or scratches on his hand he explained by saying that one was made by a butcher knife in the hands of his child at the dinner table, and the other by a stalk knife, is flatly contradicted by the physicians, who say that one at least, on the back of his hand, was a finger nail scratch. The negro, it is said, has also stated that he had a conversation with one or two men in Merchantville about 2 o'clock, and one at least of them says he does not know Lingo and is positive he never saw him.

Mr. Miller Indignant.

Mr. Miller, husband of the murdered woman, was seen at the homestead in reference to a report that suspicion had attached itself now to one of the members of the Miller family. Mr. Miller seemed indignant over it and said: "None of the family ever had a cross word with poor, dear Annie, and not one of them ever laid a straw in her way, and not one of them ever had a cross or angry word with her in any shape, and as for us, we never had a cross word between us, and all our future looked bright and cheerful."

Coroner Stanton was asked when the inquest would be held. He said that no time had been fixed. It will probably, however, not be for some time, and he said that three days' notice of it would be given to the newspapers. It was not thought best to hold the inquest until the case had been thoroughly sifted.

TARRED AND FEATHERED.

A Party of Masked Men Punish a Cruel Husband.

TROY, N. Y., Oct. 1.—An employe of one of the railroads leading into this city was tarred and feathered on the Hoosick road at about 8 p. m., by a party of masked men, led on by an indignant and outraged woman.

The man is charged by those who took him in hand with having treated his wife cruelly, compelling her to procure a divorce from her. In defiance of the mandate of the court he was married again a few days since.

On his way home with his bride his carriage was stopped by a dozen masked men, who dragged him struggling into an adjoining field and administered a coat of tar and feathers.

Shot His Sister and Himself.

LOWELL, Mass., Oct. 1.—John Q. Nichols, about 45 years, shot his sister, Mrs. Ida Cunningham, of Reading, Mass., fired at his nephews, Fred A. Nichols and Walter Lyman, and then fired four shots in his own head on Appleton street. There is but little hope of the recovery of Mrs. Cunningham or her brother. The cause of the shooting was a quarrel over the division of property, of which Nichols claimed he had not received his share.

End of a Will Contest.

TROY, N. Y., Oct. 1.—Contestants of the will of the late Shibboleth B. McCoy, of Waterford, withdrew their objections and the will was admitted to probate by Surrogate Peters, of Saratoga. The estate is valued at upward of $1,250,000, the bulk of which is left to Mrs. William F. Burden, of this city, a niece of the testator.

Another Boston Failure.

BOSTON, Oct. 1.—Raphael & Lewenburg, dealers and manufacturers of cloaking at No. 40 Summer street, have assigned to N. P. Jones, of Cumner, Jones & Cumner. Their liabilities are estimated at $200,000.

SEVEN UNDER THE RUINS.

Firemen Meet With a Terrible Accident in a Chicago Fire.

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—A fire destroyed the picture frame factory of Branklin & Son on Canal street, near Adams, early this morning.

While the flames were burning fiercely an explosion, thought to be naptha, occurred and buried seven firemen of Engine Company No. 17 under the flooring. Their names are: Richard Hoverson, Charles Klextor, William Carey, Andrew Nelson, Sylvester Higgins, William Kelly, Daniel Toomey. Nelson was dead when taken out, and it is thought all the others will die.

The Seventeenth's men are known as the "Tigers" of the fire department and is composed of picked men. The loss is estimated at about $100,000.

The New Jersey Election.

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 1.—The special election held throughout the State was against the proposed constitutional amendments. Reports received from the leading cities and towns in the State, including Newark, Jersey City, Elizabeth and Paterson, show that the vote was extremely light and that little or no interest were taken in the election. The voting was done under the old law. The amendment was opposed by the leading men of the State, because special legislation expands the statute books, complicates the laws and is generally against the interests of the cities and towns.

Vermont's New Legislature.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Oct. 1.—A large majority of the Senate and House are here. The Republican candidates for Speaker are H. R. Start, attorney for the Central Vermont Railroad; Hosea Mann, Jr., of Wilmington; Dr. Henry Boynton of Woodstock and L. H. Thompson of Irasburgh. All the candidates are on the ground and it looks as though Start had the best show. If the Republicans do not harmonize their differences a Democrat stands a possible chance of election. The Democrats in caucus nominated T. W. Maloney of Rutland as candidate for Speaker.

Two Men Shot by a Foreman.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Oct. 1.—Last night Foreman Henry of the Valley Stone Works, at Meshoppen, shot a stone cutter named Leslie Kellogg through the lungs, inflicting a fatal wound. Henry fired a second shot, missing Kellogg, but hitting a hostler named John Lord, inflicting a painful flesh wound. The shooting caused great excitement, and Henry, who was arrested, has several times during the day been threatened with lynching. The cause of the shooting is not known.

World's Fair Commissioners Angry.

CHICAGO, Oct 1.—The National Commissioners of the World's Fair are highly displeased over the announcement that Congressman Candler and his Congressional Committee are coming to Chicago to see what the commission is doing. Commissioner Williams, of Tennessee, says that if Congressman Candler and his committee come here they will be told to go home and mind their own own business.

Charged With a Double Murder.

SKOWHEGAN, Me., Oct. 1.—In the trial of Micah W. Norton for the murder of his housekeeper, Mrs. Cooley, the prosecution claim that the motive for the crime was that Mrs. Cooley secretly gave birth to a child in 1887, which Norton killed and burned; that subsequently the couple quarreled and Norton feared Mrs. Cooley would disclose his crime.

The Bell Telephone Case.

BOSTON, Oct. 1.—In the United States Cricuit Court, before Judge Colt, argument was made in behalf of a motion to extend the time allowed the Government to take testimony in the case of the United States vs. The Bell Telephone Company. The defendant's counsel filed a formal protest, but made no argument and the court extended the time to January 1, 1891.

Ten Business Houses Burned.

ILION, N. Y., Oct. 1.—The Hotel Daniels in this place and ten business houses were burned to the ground and a half a dozen others more or less damaged by fire and water before the flames were gotten under control. The loss is $45,000; mostly covered by insurance.

PASSED THE SENATE

The Tariff Bill in the President's Hands.

THE FINAL VOTE WAS 33 TO 27.

Three Republican Senators Recorded Against the Bill.

Closing Scenes in Congress—Adjournment Expected Late This Afternoon—The President Signs the River and Harbor Bill—A Large Number of Postmasters Appointed—A Flood of Silver Dollars.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The Senate by a vote of 33 yeas to 27 nays adopted the conferees' report on the McKinley Tariff bill. The bill was sent to the President to-day and will be signed by him without delay.

Since the agreement of the conferees on Friday last the President has been acquainting himself with the provisions of the bill, and the engrossed copy therefore will receive but little attention from him. The bill becomes operative October 6, although, as has been previously stated, imported goods may remain in bond until February 1, 1891.

The debate which preceded the adoption of the report was in many respects the most interesting of the entire discussion. The principal participants were Messrs. Carlisle and Aldrich, although several other gentlemen spoke briefly.

When the clerk began calling the roll upon passage of the report a number of representatives from the House were scattered about in the rear of the chamber. The galleries were well filled. Senators Paddock of Nebraska, Pettigrew of South Dakota and Plumb of Kansas, Republicans, voted in the negative with the Democrats. The Senate immediately following the roll call went into executive session.

A FLOOD OF SILVER.

The Treasury Practically Drained of Small Treasury and Bank Notes.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—A famine in small treasury and bank notes is threatened for the Eastern cities. The banks of this city, which have a more immediate connection with the treasury, are now bare of notes of small denominations, and the scarcity is being severely felt. The cause is the large shipment of small bills to the West to meet the obligations of the Silver bill and the movement of crops.

The Treasury has been practically drained of small notes.

A prominent banker said to-day that the result will be that the Treasury will be compelled to put out several millions of silver dollars and force them into circulation. The prospects are, therefore, likely for a flood of silver for the East in the immediate future.

Presidential Nominations.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Among the last batch of nominations sent to the Senate by the President were the following: George S. Batcheller, of New York, to be Minister Resident and Consul-General of the United States to Portugal, vice George B. Loring, resigned; Consul at Bermuda, Horace W. Metcalf of Maine, and the following postmasters: Frank L. Martin, Bethel, Vt.; Daniel A. Hurd, North Berwick, Me.; George M. Douglass, West Rutland, Vt.; Hubert E. Carpenter, East Hamton, Conn.; C. S. Randall, Rouse's Point, N. Y.; W. S. Raynor, Sayville, N. Y.; W. P. Phelps, Merchantville, N. J., Thomas W. Palmer, Frenchtown, N. J.; H. Christopher Ehni, Raritan, N. J.; Robert H. Wilson, Tarentum, Pa.; Seth Orme, St. Claire, Pa.; N. H. Hastings, Austin, Pa.; Henry Andrews, Ardmore, Pa.; Anna H. Griscom, Jenkinton, Pa.; J. B. Haines, Jeannette, Pa.; Michael M. Kistler, East Stroudsburg, Pa.

Bills Approved by the President.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The President has approved the River and Harbor bill; the joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to purchase nickel ore for use in the manufacture of nickel steel armor; extending the limit of cost for public building at Hoboken, N. J.; amending an act of Congress relative to fire limit of site of postoffice and Federal building at Brooklyn, N. Y.; an act to divide the State of Iowa into two judicial districts; making Peoria, Ill., a port of delivery, and the bill providing for a statue to Gen. Lafayette.

Adjournment Expected This Afternoon.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The impression seems to prevail that Congress will adjourn late this afternoon. The Tariff bill was sent to the President at 1 o'clock, and he will be able to notify the House that it has been signed about 4. Then nothing will intervene between the two houses and an adjournment. It is possible that the President will not sign the bill in time to permit an adjournment this evening. Vice-President Morton said that Congress would adjourn sure this afternoon.

SLAVIN TO FIGHT JACKSON.

A Purse of $15,000 Has Been Guaranteed for the Battle.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—Arrangements have been completed by cable for the meeting of Peter Jackson and Frank P. Slavin in the rooms of the Melbourne Athletic Club within the next six months. A purse of £3,000 has been guaranteed, and Jack Dougherty has lodged a deposit in Melbourne in behalf of Slavin, who readily accepted Jackson's challenge.

A stipulation was made that the fight be arranged for such a time as will not prevent Slavin's presence in England to receive any sentence that may be imposed on him in connection with his recent Ormonde Club battle.

Closing Scenes in the House.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—This being the last day of the session, the members of the House fairly tumbled over one another to rush through bills in which they were particularly interested. Many bills were left upon the Speaker's table, either to die or to be resurrected in December.

PARNELL'S POSITION

He Is Anxious About the New Irish Movement.

IMPORTANT MEETING TO BE HELD

American Irishmen to be Asked to Support the Plan of Campaign.

Rejoicing in Germany Over the Return of the Exiled Socialists—No Decision by the High Court in the Dillon and O'Brien Case—A German Lady Arrested as a Spy in France.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—A meeting of the members of the Irish party has been fixed for Oct. 16. It will probably be a very important affair, and at it Mr. Parnell is expected to take very decisive action. He will either resign his present position or he will come out strongly and squarely for the plan of campaign. The need of money overshadows all questions and the American trip is a most important item in the programme.

Mr. Parnell has ordered all the members to cancel their engagements for the 16th. A supreme effort will be made in order to conciliate the American Irish to unite with the party here.

The report that the Vatican has determined to put pressure on the Irish bishops to enforce the Papal rescript receives confirmation from a pastoral issued yesterday by the Bishop of Kildare. The Parnellites are anxious to avoid any breach with the church, and it is thought that no further attempt will be made to put the plan of campaign in force. Mr. Parnell is anxious that home rule should again be brought to the front.

SOCIALISTS REJOICE.

Great Excitement in Germany Over the Expiration of the Anti-Socialist Law.

BERLIN, Oct. 1.—There was much excitement in Germany over the expiration of the anti-Socialist law, the Socialists indulging in general rejoicing.

Thirty Socialists who had been in exile arrived in Berlin last evening and received an ovation. Public meetings were held in seven halls, all being crowded. Many illuminations appeared in the streets in honor of the occasion. Numerous processions were formed, and some of them became disorderly and were dispersed by the police, but no violence or injury resulted.

At Hamburg 19 exiles returned and were enthusiastically greeted. Similar scenes were enacted in all the large cities.

WATCHING BIRCHALL.

A Belief that He Will Cheat the Gallows by Committing Suicide.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Oct., 1.—Birchall's cell was carefully searched in every nook and corner for poison or any weapon with which he might make away with himself, and his clothing were subjected to the same microscopic examination. From this time on he will be watched night and day.

No one is allowed to see Birchall without an order from the sheriff. The strictest watch is kept over him. Many believe he will cheat the gallows yet by committing suicide.

Jailer Cameron and the sheriff held a consultation to determine some line of conduct with reference to Birchall's management. Mr. Cameron is strongly in favor of allowing his wife just one more final interview. He thinks it will be better for Birchall, and above all better for Mrs. Birchall. He will advise her strongly to go back at once, in company with her sister, to England. So long as she is in the same atmosphere with Birchall she is under his influence, and so long as she is under that influence she will grieve to the point of putting her life in peril.

Birchall broke down and wept profusely when told his wife fainted when she learned of his conviction.

SMALL-SIZED SENSATION.

The President's Coachman Elopes With One of the Chambermaids.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—A White House elopement is furnishing a small-sized sensation. The colored coachman of President Harrison is the hero of the escapade, and he has run off with one of the chambermaids of the White House.

The story is invested with some additional interest from the fact that the heroine is the niece of Congressman Langston, of Virginia, who was seated a few days ago.

A Lawyer Becomes a Criminal.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 1.—Harry E. Hopkins, alias E. H. Corry was arrested by detectives here on warrants sworn out in New York charging him with grand larceny. It is said that Hopkins was educated for a lawyer and admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of this State. His dissipated habits, however, brought him to the grade of a common criminal. He committed a serious offense some time ago in New York, and to save himself fled to Texas, where he remained until he supposed all had blown over, and then returning, he committed other thefts.

—Gilbert and Whitely, the song and dance artists, will perform some of their specialties to-night at the Plainfield Cornet Band entertainment.

—The Ladies' Aid Society of Hope Chapel will have a bazar and entertainment in the chapel on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of next week.

—The Catholic Young Men's Literary Union have just purchased the desirably located property at the corner of Fifth and Liberty streets. Alterations will be made to the house for the convenience of the members.

—A conference of delegates from the different gun clubs of the State will be held at Dunellen, Friday evening, to arrange for the annual Fall tournament of the New Jersey State Sportsmen's Association.

—Gazelle Engine Company, No. 1, will hold a regular meeting in their parlors, this evening, at 7:30 o'clock, sharp. A full attendance is desired as business of importance will be brought before the meeting.

—A reduction in the cost of ice, is the reason Stephenson, the caterer, has lowered the price of his iced cream. Ice is costing him 25 cents a hundred less, and he proposes that the people shall have the benefit of it.

—Robert Brait and wife, Margaret E. Ayres and husband, and Virginia J. Monday, all of Rahway, with Sarah M. Potter and husband, of Raritan, have sold to Sarah A. McNabb, of Bound Brook, 12244-1000 acres of land, partly in Plainfield and partly in Fanwood township, for $3,061.

—Wilbur Benjamin Randolph has become proprietor of Edwin Maynard's barber rooms, 28 Park avenue. Mr. Randolph has been in Mr. Maynard's barber rooms, 28 Park avenue. Mr. Randolph has been in Mr. Maynard's employ many years, and is a most popular barber with a large number of Plainfield gentlemen who all wish him success.

—The original Fisk Jubilee Singers from Tennessee, are to appear at Reform Hall, Friday evening of this week, and give one of their grand concerts. As they have been highly praised by the crowned heads and the nobility of Europe, it is hardly necessary to say anything more than that those who fail to hear them will miss a great treat, for there is none like them.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Wm. M. Demarest is at the Niagara House, Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Teaching ladies how to play a violin gracefully, is a specialty with Andrew J. Carpenter, 51 Westervelt avenue, who also takes pupils in piano and organ playing.

Willet S. Marsh and Miss Florence Laible, both of this city, were united in marriage by the Rev. Cornelius Schenck at the Trinity Reformed church parsonage last evening.

Dr. Thomas Brown, of Rochester, N. Y., is visiting his Plainfield relatives, among them his brother, Isaac P. Brown, of Broadway, and his sister, Mrs. Jacob Thorn, of East Second street.

The wedding of Miss Fannie Kissam and Milton C. Barkalew, of the firm of Barkalew & Dunn, will take place Wednesday evening, October 15, at 7 o'clock, at 14 Elm place, this city. The Rev. N. W. Cadwell, D. D., of Westfield, will officiate.

Five Hundred Dollars for Seventy-Five.

Assembly No. 42, of the Non-Secret Endowment Order, was organized at the City Hotel, last evening by Edgar R. Howe, Supreme Organizer, of Worcester, Mass. The following officers were selected:

President—Charles H. Schermerhorn.
Vice President—Horace J. Martin.
Secretary—Frank W. Runyon.
Treasurer—Lewis R. Blackford.
Counselor—Walter L. Hetfield.
Trustees—W. R. Codington, Alexander Thorn, Bateman Thatcher.

The new assembly will be instituted this evening. It is the most tempting of all recent benefit and insurance schemes. You pay $1.50 a month, and at the end of five years you get $500 cash, dead or alive.

The Bachelors Make a Night of It.

The members of the Bachelors' Club had a gay time at their anniversary last night. An elaborate banquet was provided by Caterer Stephenson, and good music was furnished by Conde and Rogers. The table was exquisitely decorated with flowers and cut glass. In the centre was a floral pyramid three feet high, surmounted by a dazzling crown of electric lights. Mirth and conviviality prevailed till daylight. T'were a long story to tell all the merry events of the feast and frolic, but the keynote of it all may be found in the Club motto: "When a man's single he lives at his ease."

HARRY HOPKINS' DOWNFALL.

Is This the Erstwhile Business Manager of the Park House?

Harry E. Hopkins, alias Corry—who, it is said, is "Count Hopkins" who was business manager while his father was proprietor of the Park House, this city, in 1886—was arrested last night by detectives in Buffalo, on warrants sworn out in New York charging him with grand larceny. It is said that Hopkins was educated for a lawyer and admitted to the Bar of the Supreme Court of New York State. His dissipated habits, however, brought him to the grade of a criminal. He committed a serious offense some time ago in New York, and to save himself fled to Texas, where he remained until he supposed all had blown over, and then returning he committed other thefts.

Mrs. Newton P. Drake Goes Free.

Those, if there are any, who hoped to gratify their abnormal appetites for scandal by witnessing a sensational trial in the Drake case at Somerville, will be disappointed. Counsel for Mrs. Drake executed a flank movement against such this morning and the result is that Mrs. Drake entered a plea to the charge of simple assault that she was unwilling to contend against the State, and was set free without even so much as one word of rebuke or reprimand. Indeed the Court said that the Court of course did not know whether she was guilty or not.

THE PRESS agrees with the observation of the Court upon making final disposition of the case, that "the Court has not made any mistake this time." The way in which the matter was presented was this: When the prosecutor asked Mrs. Drake how she pleaded "guilty or not guilty," Craig A. Marsh arose and asked permission to be heard on behalf of his client before pleading. The Court granted permission, and counsel then made a calm statement of the facts of the case, followed by an impassioned appeal to the court to allow defendant to plead non vult contendere to simple assault, and to allow the suffering already endured by the defendant to stand as the only penalty. A petition was presented containing about twenty names of representative men heartily approving the course suggested by counsel. The petition after referring to the physical and mental suffering of defendant and the fear that the strain of a protracted trial would be fraught with danger to her health, concludes as follows:

These considerations may induce the defendant to enter a plea that she is unwilling to contend against the State, but the undersigned firmly believe that even if the accused should be adjudged guilty as charged, the ends of justice would be fully met if the Court should regard the punishment already borne, a sufficient penalty, and refrain from adding thereto.

The undersigned as residents of the community most interested, respectfully and very earnestly ask the Honorable Judges of this Court to adopt this view as the one prompted alike by justice and humanity.

The Court said that of course it knew nothing of the guilt or innocence of defendant but it was bound to respect the views of such representative men of the community. They were the leaders of all philanthropic and humane undertakings and institutions and were known to the Court to be men of the highest integrity, intelligence and good judgment. It would not be right for the Court to disregard this request. They undoubtedly might be safely taken as exponents of the best public sentiment in Plainfield and North Plainfield. Under the circumstances, the Court would suspend sentence.

That disposed of the case. We congratulate the defendant's respected parents and family who have from the beginning had the profound sympathy of THE PRESS and the best people of this community.

It Seemed to Strangers, Very Like a Suicide.

A sad accident occurred at Fanwood at 2:25 yesterday. The large and magnificent thoroughbred dog, belonging to the Hon. George Kyte—which has been in the care of his trainer, Isaac Crue—was executing his well-known feat of jumping from the over-head bridge, just East of the Fanwood station and alighting upon moving trains. Miscalculating the speed with which the express from the East was moving, the dog struck the track in front of the locomotive and was instantly killed.

The noble animal was the pet of the ladies and children of the suburban town. The accident was witnessed by a number of the residents. The remains were tenderly removed and given a respectable interment.

—Although the de of the Adams Express company in this city has not lessened, and so many of the people prefer its service to that of the United States, yet the former has withdrawn its business from Plainfield as told exclusively in THE PRESS of yesterday. Manager E. H. Holmes, however, will continue his local express business with an office at 27 North avenue, and will put in your Winter coal, too.

$10,000 Found in an Ash Barrel.

A New York rag-picker is reported to have found $10,000 in greenbacks in an ash barrel. This was a rare piece of good luck, but how much more fortunate is the sufferer from consumption who learns that, although the doctors may have pronounced his case hopeless, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure him. Consumption is a scrofulous disease of the lungs. The "Discovery," which is the most potent blood-purifier of the age, strikes right at the root of the evil, and there is no resisting it, if taken in time. In all scrofulous or other blood taints, skin and scalp diseases, old sores and swellings, it is guaranteed to cure, or money paid for it promptly refunded. By druggists.

FOR ARTIST ARTISANS.

Progress of the Institute Founded by a Plainfielder.

The New York Institute for Artist Artisans at 140 West Twenty-third street, New York, was today opened for the Fall term with 250 enrolled pupils. Prof. John Ward Stimson, of Plainfield, the founder and Superintendent of the Institute, is in charge, with a full corps of instructors, including those of the last two years, and classes in painting, sculpture, architecture, illustration, etching, stained glass, ceramics, carving, metal working, jewelry, interior decoration, and plastic modeling, with studies from still life and life models.

Mr. Stimson's idea in the establishment of the institute was to make it the nucleus of a Central National Art University, teaching principles instead of mere imitation, and developing the democratic American idea that art is not necessarily the mere foible of the foolish, the fad of a few fashionables, or the monopoly of the speculator. He has been working practically and successfully on lines which have engaged the attention of the artists and manufacturers of Great Britain for a year with the result that a national organization has been formed for the promotion of art and its application to industry.

As an example of the esteem in which the institute is held by those who have looked into it, Gen. Webb, President of the College of the City of New York, has just arranged for four scholarships to be awarded to successful competing graduates from the college. Among the patrons of the institute are Tiffany & Co., the Gorham Manufacturing Company, Howard & Son, Cottier & Co., Herter Brothers, Lamb Brothers, Robert Graves, Warren, Fuller & Lange, Frederick Beck, Cheney Brothers, William Strange, the Phœnix Silk Company, William Kyle & Co., Doughley & Wadsworth, Charles Danforth, B. Richardson, and others representing the jewelry, wall paper, stained glass, silk, and other art industries. Yesterday H. O. Havemeyer sent a contribution of $1,000 toward establishing the institute on a sound basis.

The institute depends largely upon popular support for its success and has been maintained thus far only by sacrifices which Mr. Stimson is no longer able to make. It is the most promising among the art educational institutions of the country.

Manager Burnet Gets Back at Manager Perkins.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE N. Y. SUN—Sir: I notice in The Sun of September 19 a card from Manager Perkins of the Hackett, Carhart & Co. team in relation to a guarantee of $45 alleged to be due his club since July. In answer to the above I would say that the managers of Plainfield Crescent League never withheld a guarantee due any club that was justly entitled to it and honestly earned it; and such clubs as the Flushings, Acmes, Gorhams and Cuban Giants, and, in fact, any club that has visited Plainfield, will substantiate this, and for Manager Perkins to come out at this late date looks very small.

We played two games in all with the Hackett, Carhart & Co. team, and won both. The Hackett, Carhart & Co. team refused to continue the second game because of the umpire's decision in giving one man at the bat his base on an illegal delivery. I asked Mr. Perkins to finish the game and not disappoint the people present, and told him if he would not I should not pay the guarantee, as he had not fulfilled his contract. He said he did not care for his guarantee, and wanted all of the umpire's decisions reversed or he would not play ball; and upon my refusal to agree to such an unjust demand he left the grounds.

We have played games with all of the principal clubs in and around New York, and they can testify as to whether we kept back a guarantee from them. I would say that if Mr. Perkins thinks he has been unjustly treated by us, how is it that as late as September 13 he was trying to arrange games with us, to be played in Plainfield?

C. C. BURNET,
Manager Crescent League.

To Bible Students.

The American Institute of Sacred Literature, of which Prof. W. R. Harper is principal, will offer in this city, on December 30, an examination on the Gospel of Luke. Those who pass this examination will receive a certificate from the institute. Those who have been engaged in the study of the International Sunday School Lesson ought to be sufficiently prepared for this examination. The object of the examination is to induce more careful study of the Life of Christ as set forth in Luke. Those who desire to take the examination must enter their names before December 1, 1890. I shall be glad to furnish any further information to those who are interested in the subject.

WM. D. MURRAY,
Special Examiner.

The Longest Fly on Record.

J. Hervey Doane's carrier pigeon "Dude" is home after over a year's absence. He sailed for Europe in 1889 with Scripps' League, and was released hundreds of miles out at sea in company with another bird bearing a message from Julian Hawthorne. This latter bird after flying two days and a night lighted on a ship bound for New York, and was captured. Dude was never seen since until Thursday, when he returned to his old perch in his owner's loft on La Grande avenue.

SHOOTING AT CLAY PIGEONS.

Interest Increasing at the Dunellen Tournament—Who the Winners Are—Thousands of Birds Ready for the Live Pigeon Sport To-Morrow.

The liveliest kind of shooting is in progress at the Middlesex Gun Club tournament now being held at Dunellen. The weather is glorious, the sportsmen alert, and the firing incessant. The field is thickly strewn with shattered clay pigeons, and the ground at the feet of the marksmen is covered with empty cartridge shells. A large number of notables arrived this morning. Many new faces are on the grounds. The rivalry is great, and the fact that the springs of the traps are the strongest that could be procured, sending the wingless birds with tremendous speed through the air, operates to add to the extreme closeness of each contest, as even the most famous of the sportsmen find it easy to misjudge the speed, and to miss. The events of today up to half-past one o'clock are as follows:

Regular event No. 10—Each man shot at fifteen single blue rock clay pigeons. First money was divided by Marsh, Wolstencroft and Whitney. Second by Peacock, Miller and Elliott. Third by VonLengerke and Money. Fourth by Quimby, Penrose and Rowley.

Regular event No. 11—Ten single blue rocks. Collins broke all and took first money. Bowley and Quimby missed one each and divided second. Wolstencroft, C. Smith, Dean and Peacock shared third. Rothacker, Elliott, Wild and Whitney went shares on fourth.

Regular event No. 12—Ten single blue rocks. Whitney had a clean score and won first money. Quimby, J. L. Smith, Elliott and Collins tied on second. Rupell, Rothacker, Wolstencroft, Thurman, Dean and W. Smith divided third. Miller took fourth.

Regular event No. 13 was at fifteen targets each, single blue rocks, for a guaranteed purse of $40. Whitney smashed every target and pocketed first money. Quimby broke fourteen and took second. Marsh and Brantingham shared third. Miller and Wolstencroft divided fourth.

Regular event No. 14 was at twenty single blue rocks each, for a guaranteed purse of $50. First money went to Whitney. Second to Wolstencroft. Third to Rowley and Brantingham. Fourth to E. D. Miller.

Regular event No. 15 was at twenty single blue rocks. Not a single clean record was made. Wolstencroft broke nineteen, missing one, and took first money. Whitney and Sigler divided second. Penrose and Marsh tied on third. Crosby secured fourth.

Extra Event No. 3—Ten single blue rocks—Whitney won first money. Wolstencroft second. Dean and Tee Kay third. Quimby fourth.

Extra Event No. 4—Ten single blue rocks—Whitney and Quimby divided first. Bowley, Elliott, Miller and Wolstencroft second. Tee Kay, C. Smith and W. Smith third. Thurman, Marsh and Dean fourth.

Of a special prize of $10 offered for yesterday's best average Collins secured sixty per cent., and Wolstencroft forty per cent.

The three thousand pigeons that have arrived for the live bird shooting of Thursday and Friday are a handsome lot. They are strong-winged, vigorous birds, and will give the marksmen hard work and excellent sport.

—The season is at hand when weather strips and storm doors ought to be placed in position to defy the onslaughts of the frost. Whitlock & Hulick, of 11 Somerset street, are prepared to do such work. They take pride in their reputation for reliability and low prices.

Catarrh

IS a blood disease. Until the poison is expelled from the system, there can be no cure for this loathsome and dangerous malady. Therefore, the only effective treatment is a thorough course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla—the best of all blood purifiers. The sooner you begin the better; delay is dangerous.

"I was troubled with catarrh for over two years. I tried various remedies, and was treated by a number of physicians, but received no benefit until I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. A few bottles of this medicine cured me of this troublesome complaint and completely restored my health."—Jesse M. Boggs, Holman's Mills, N. C.

"When Ayer's Sarsaparilla was recommended to me for catarrh, I was inclined to doubt its efficacy. Having tried so many remedies, with little benefit, I had no faith that anything would cure me. I became emaciated from loss of appetite and impaired digestion. I had nearly lost the sense of smell, and my system was badly deranged. I was about discouraged, when a friend urged me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and referred me to persons whom it had cured of catarrh. After taking half a dozen bottles of this medicine, I am convinced that the only sure way of treating this obstinate disease is through the blood."—Charles H. Maloney, 113 River st., Lowell, Mass.

GOVERNOR ABBETT DENOUNCED IT

And Plainfield Votes Emphatically That the Constitution Shall Not Be Amended so as to Permit Special Legislation.

There was a special election in New Jersey yesterday to decide whether the State Constitution shall be amended. Subdivision 11 of section 7 of article 4 of the Constitution says the Legislature shall not pass private, local, or special laws "regulating the internal affairs of towns and counties." The Legislature of 1889 agreed to amend the Constitution by striking out this clause, and the Legislature of 1890 approved of the proposed amendment. The matter was then in shape under the New Jersey laws to be submitted to the people.

Many of the leading men in the State were opposed to the proposed amendment. The State Agricultural Society issued a letter advising the people of the State to vote against the amendment, and the Hudson County Democratic Committee has also put itself on record against it. Gov. Abbett has denounced it as dangerous, and lawyers have given reasons why the proposed amendment should be defeated. The main argument is that to give the Legislature the right to pass special laws for the government of towns and cities would open the way for corrupt jobs, and would lead to dangerous and slipshod legislation.

Those who favored the amendment argued that special laws have been passed under the guise of general legislation, and that the clause in the Constitution prohibiting special legislation does not, in fact, prohibit it. For that reason they think the clause should be stricken from the Constitution. The people in general were apathetic, and the vote was light.

Those who did vote in this city, indorsed the Governor's view. The second ward, where Councilman Spangenberg comes from, proved itself again the banner district. Its vote was unanimous against special legislation. Although in most other places in the State the saloons were open as usual, Captain Grant closed all of Plainfield's drinking places during the entire day. The election cost this county alone, about $2,000.

The detailed vote of this city and the borough was as follows—the first amendment being to permit special legislation, and the second to provide that judges of common pleas courts shall hold office for five years:

PLAINFIELD.

| 1st Am'dt—For, | Ag'st. | 2d Am'dt— For, | Ag'st. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1st ward 3 | 100 | 28 | 75 |
| 2d ward 0 | 144 | 45 | 99 |
| 3d ward 3 | 116 | 38 | 81 |
| 4th ward, 1st Dist 4 | 98 | 23 | 79 |
| 2d Dist 3 | 67 | 35 | 35 |
| 13 | 525 | 169 | 369 |

NORTH PLAINFIELD

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| First District | 3 | 128 | 20 | 111 |
| Second " | 4 | 106 | 5 | 105 |
| | 7 | 234 | 25 | 216 |

Returns and intelligent estimates from other cities and counties of the State show that the proposed amendment to the Constitution permitting the Legislature to pass special laws for municipalities has been beaten by an overwhelming vote of the people. It will require a day or two to cast up the result in figures, but the returns received by THE PRESS indicate that not more than 20 per cent. at most of the whole vote cast was in the affirmative. Only a fraction of the qualified citizens of the State went to the polls, and the vote was very light. The scenes around the polls in Newark, Jersey City, Paterson, Plainfield, Elizabeth and other large cities were very peaceful. There were no poll captains, no workers and few bystanders.

"Forget Me Not."

Miss Josephine Cameron, who has now such high recognition abroad as an artiste of rare ability, appears at Music Hall, Friday, October 3, in the London success, "Forget Me Not," a play of absorbing interest, in which she has full scope for her talents. She is provided with competent support and a perfect production is assured. The play is an expose of what society every day witnesses, only of course with the curtains drawn.

The Demerara Press, speaking of Miss Cameron in "Forget Me Not," says: "Her acting was faultless and her impersonation, both in the wicked, scheming, fashionable woman and the penitent, terror-stricken lady, was perfect in every way."

Voted for the New Name.

The question of changing the name of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics has for several weeks been a subject of consideration throughout the country, and finally the National Council of the order ordered that a vote should be taken in each Council and the result be certified to the National Council by the State Council of each State. Franklin Council, of this city, one of the most vigorous in this State, has voted unanimously to change the name of the order to the Order United Americans, the proposed new name. The subject is to do away with the confusion now existing between the present name and that of the United American Mechanics.

To Organize a Colored Methodist Church.

The Rev. Horatio McCoy, of Jersey City, desires to announce that a meeting will be held next Sunday night at Isaac Peterson's, 35 Cottage place, for the purpose of organizing a Colored Methodist church. All wishing to attend are cordially invited.

IN THE FRUIT MARKET.

Few Peaches—High Prices for Apples—Grapes and Quinces at Their Best.

There will be so few peaches here this week that they will scarcely be noticed in the market. Most of the peaches now offered for sale are from California. They have the merit of not decaying very rapidly, and of making pleasing store decorations. They sell very slowly, few persons buying them more than once during the season. It will be possible to procure a few good peaches during the next two or three weeks, as there are some in Ohio and in New York State that will be marketed within the next fifteen days.

Apples of fine quality will sell for upward of $4 per barrel at any time this season. That is the belief of a great majority of those engaged in buying and selling that fruit. Many believe that between $5 and $6 per barrel will be the ruling price as soon as the Hudson River apple crop has been marketed, and it is being marketed at a much more rapid rate than usual. Fairly good greenings in the smallest package a Hudson River fruit grower can induce himself to believe to be a barrel will readily wholesale for $4 per barrel, and Hudson River "seconds" Greenings will wholesale at from $2.50 to $3 per barrel. The best apples now to be had for general purposes are the Gravensteins. These apples are mostly grown in Canada, and they are being hurried into the market to escape the extra duty imposed upon apples by the McKinley bill. They will sell at wholesale this week at from $4 to $5 per barrel for those of the best quality, but will undoubtedly sell for higher prices next week. The Newtown and Albemarle Pippin apple crop appears this season to be a complete failure.

There will not be a very large quantity of pears here this season. All the pears are now about ripe upon the trees, and those which will ripen before freezing weather sets in, will be bought from the growers by icehouse men and sent to market during the Winter. Consequently, a limited supply of the icehoused pears will be shipped to the market regularly until next Spring. Any good table pear will sell for from $3 to $5 per bushel, for in that size package they are mostly sent by the icehouse men.

More hard, jelly-making quinces may be had than before in several years. This variety of quinces is cultivated and grown wild on the highlands adjacent to the salt water bays of New Jersey, New York and Connecticut, and this season there are more of them than usual. They make excellent jelly. They will be in good condition this week, but will be better next week, and will sell for as low prices as any quinces will be sold this year. The tender Apple Quince, which is largely cultivated in Western New York and grown more perfectly there than anywhere else in the country, will be somewhat more abundant than last season, but the crop is small. There have been a few of them in the market already, but they will be in their best condition in about ten days. The apple quinces will doubtless sell for good prices. The best of them probably will wholesale as high as $7 per barrel, but the pear, or jelly-making, quince may be had this week of as good quality as any to be had this year, and it will be retailed at not more than two-thirds of the price at which the apple quinces will be sold.

The best Tokay grapes of the season may be had this week. The very best of these grapes will be sold in five-pound baskets by the fancy fruit retailers for about $1 per basket, or 20 cents per pound. Excellent ones may be bought from retail dealers for 75 cents per five-pound basket, and fairly good Tokay grapes may be bought for 10 cents per pound.

Finished by Daylight, a Tie.

It is reported that the House Committee of the Fanwood Club entertained a prominent resident of Fanwood at the Club Monday evening in a series of games of billiards—three ball cushion-caroms.

Twenty-six games were played of thirty-four points each, resulting in a tie between the Chairman of the House Committee and the guest of the club—each winning thirteen games. The contest was highly exciting and immensely enjoyed by the spectators present, as each of the gentlemen won alternate games.

It is proposed to have another exhibition at an early date, and although, as in the Crescent League, no betting is permitted at the Fanwood Club—it is understood that large amounts have been wagered on the result of the next contest. Abner P. Downer, the expert bowler of the Club, is slated as referee.

If Men Didn't Observe, There Would Be No Books to Read.

The debate held by the Young Men's Auxiliary of the Young Men's Christian Association last evening was a very interesting event. The speeches were fresh, and the arguments spirited. Vincent Rockwell, James Kimball and Charles Fernald spoke in the affirmative of the question "Resolved, That reading is more beneficial than observation." William Crawford, Walter Dobbins and Warren Rice supported the negative. Judge J. H. Allen, and jurors Rockfellow, Frost, Cook, VanEmburgh and Currie decided that the negative debaters had the best of the argument.

TEMPERANCE NOTES

THE RAILWAY SERVICE.

Total Abstinence Required by the Managers of Many Companies.

The operatives of our railways form the best drilled army of workmen in the country. It has seemed that it would be very instructive to learn what is expected of these men, as to their use of intoxicating liquors. Not a little of interest might be learned from this source. Acting on this idea the editor of the New York Independent sent a letter to the managers of seventy railroad companies asking for the desired information. The following, taken at random, are fair examples of the answers received:

MAINE CENTRAL RAILROAD.

The attached rule is the only one we have bearing particularly on intoxicants:

"89. The use of intoxicating drink on the road or about the premises of the company, and smoking while on duty, are strictly forbidden. Any employe appearing on duty in a state of intoxication will be forthwith dismissed, and those who do not use intoxicating drinks will receive the preference in promotion and employment. Smoking is also prohibited at all stations and on all trains, except in the smoking-car."

It is well understood by our men, however, that the use of intoxicating liquors, either when on or off duty, is not countenanced in the slightest degree by the management.

PAYSON TUCKER, General Manager.

NEW YORK, LAKE ERIE & WESTERN RAILROAD.

The rules of this company prohibit employes from drinking while on duty. In addition to this, train-masters, division superintendents, yard masters and others having charge of men are expected to watch the men under their charge, and discourage the practice of visiting saloons. A man known to be a regular habitue of saloons is regarded with suspicion, and it works against him for promotion, and in the case where the habit has become chronic, and where remonstrance fails to effect reformation, the employe is liable to dismissal. The penalty of intoxication, either on or off duty, is dismissal. From this there is no appeal.

The above is, in brief, the practice on this road.

J. H. BARRETT, Superintendent Trans.

DELAWARE & HUDSON CANAL COMPANY.

The following general rule concerning the use of intoxicating liquors by our employes has been in effect a number of years:

"No person in the employ of this company will be allowed to use intoxicating liquors as a beverage while on duty."

Practically this rule has a much wider application and significance, as we do not retain in our employe anybody known to use intoxicating liquors, whether on or off duty; and employes who are known to visit saloons are closely watched, and if such practice is persistently continued we seek an opportunity to dispense with their services.

H. G. YOUNG, Vice-President.

CENTRAL RAILROAD OF NEW JERSEY.

I beg to quote you Rule No. 13 from our book of Rules and Regulations, which reads as follows:

"As the habitual use of intoxicating liquors is incompatible with the duties of railroad employes, those who abstain from their use will be more favorably considered for promotion. The use of such liquors by employes on duty is positively forbidden, and the penalty for disregard of this order is dismissal from the service."

In conclusion I desire to say that this rule is rigidly enforced on the Central railroad of New Jersey.

J. H. OLHAUSEN, General Superintendent.

ATCHISON, TOPEKA & SANTA FE ROAD.

I inclose herewith our rule, number 200, relative to intoxicating liquors.

"200. The use of intoxicating liquors have proven a most fruitful source of trouble to railroads as well as to individuals. The company will exercise the most rigid scrutiny in reference to the habits of employes in this respect. Drinking when on duty or frequenting saloons will not be tolerated, and preference will be given to those who do not drink at all."

GEORGE L. SANDS, General Superintendent.

PROVIDENCE & SPRINGFIELD RAILROAD.

I do not employ any drinking men on the road. Have none but temperate, industrious men that want to lay up what they can of their earnings. Such men are always the cheapest. They are more saving and take better care of the company's property.

WILLIAM TINKHAM, President.

LAKE SHORE & MICHIGAN SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

The following rule is incorporated in our book of rules and regulations for the government of employes:

"2. No person will be retained in the service of this company who is known to frequent saloons or places of low resort, or who is known to make habitual use of intoxicating liquors. Every person in charge of employes is hereby directed to dismiss from the service any who are guilty of these practices, and they will themselves be held personally responsible for having such men in their employ, for such are certain sooner or later to cause injury to lives and property." JOHN NEWELL, President.

NEW YORK, CHICAGO & ST. LOUIS RAILROAD.

This company does not knowingly employ men who are in the habit of becoming intoxicated, and preference is given to those who do not use intoxicating liquors as a beverage.

D. W. CALDWELL, President.

PITTSBURGH & WESTERN RAILWAY.

In regard to rules governing employes of this road about drinking intoxicating drinks I would say that our rules are very strict, and we do not hire anybody who is in the habit of using intoxicants of any kind, and if they are known to visit saloons either on duty or off duty we at once dismiss them from the service. It is getting to be a well-established rule with all railroad companies that no one shall be employed on a railroad in any capacity whatever who drinks.

M. A. MCDONALD, General Manager.

BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD.

"On and after this date," May 21, 1890, "this company will not, under any circumstances, employ persons who are in the habit of becoming intoxicated. All employes who are known to frequent drinking places must be warned to discontinue such practice if they desire to remain in this company's service, and they will be promptly discharged for intoxication, either while on or off duty. No person discharged for intoxication will be re-employed."

J. T. ODELL, General Manager.

LEHIGH & HUDSON RIVER RAILROAD.

We have no special rule governing the matter referred to. It is generally understood, however, that we do not tolerate intemperance among our employes.

GRINNELL BURT, President.

DELAWARE, LACKAWANNA & WESTERN RAILROAD.

I herewith inclose copy of rule in regard to the matter referred to:

"Rule 47. The use of intoxicating drinks on the road or about the premises of the company is strictly forbidden. No one will be employed nor continued in employment who is known to be in the habit of drinking intoxicating liquor."

W. F. HALSTEAD, General Manager.

FLINT & PERE MARQUETTE RAILROAD.

Inclosed I hand you a clipping from our working time card which will give you the information asked for. Section 5 of Article IV, of the general railroad laws of the State of Michigan, reads as follows:

"No person shall be employed as an engineer, train dispatcher, fireman, baggage-master, conductor, brakeman, or any other servant upon any railroad, in any of its operating departments, who uses intoxicating drinks as a beverage; and any company in whose service any such person shall knowingly be employed shall be liable to a penalty of five hundred dollars for every such offense, to be sued for in the name of the people of the State of Michigan."

"The use of intoxicating liquors, while on duty, is prohibited. Persons known to be habitual in the use of them will not be retained in the service. Agents and passenger train men are prohibited from smoking while on duty."

SANFORD KEELER, Superintendent.

CHICAGO & ALTON RAILROAD.

The following is an extract from the regulations of the company:

"Intoxication or habitual or frequent use of intoxicating liquors will be sufficient reason for dismissal. Persons employed in running trains, in any capacity, who are known to practice drinking intoxicating liquors, will be forthwith discharged."

C. H. CHAPPELL, General Manager.

CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE & ST. PAUL RAILWAY.

Since about three years ago the rule in regard to the use of intoxicating liquor by employes, a copy of which is inclosed herewith, has been printed on our time cards and is strictly enforced. As far as my experience goes, it has proven to be the most practical rule governing the matter that we could devise.

"The use of intoxicating drinks has proven a most fruitful source of trouble to railways as well as to individuals. The company will exercise the most rigid scrutiny in reference to the habits of employes in this respect, and any employe who has been dismissed on this account will not be re-employed. Drinking when on duty or frequenting saloons will not be tolerated, and preference will be given to those who do not drink at all."

ROSWELL MILLER, President.

OHIO & MISSISSIPPI RAILWAY.

This company has issued no order recently with regard to the use of intoxicants by employes; but in our book of rules governing employes of the transportation department, which took effect in November, 1888, the following appears:

"The use of intoxicating drinks while on duty is prohibited. Employes known to use them in excess at any time will not be retained in the service." J. F. BARNARD, President.

These answers, remarks the Independent editorially, present a most one-sided view of a great question. But it is none the worse for being one-sided, for there is only one side to it. The fact that it is so one-sided makes it impressive.

We wanted to know what are the rules enforced by the railway companies of the Nation in reference to the use of intoxicating liquors by their employes; and here we have them—a long, monotonous, emphatic repetition of a single rule. No intoxicating liquors allowed; conductors, or brakemen, or switchmen using them dismissed. Sometimes the rule is formulated, and sometimes it is assumed as so evident that it is not worth while to print it. But in every case the man who is not temperate must lose his place. Sometimes reasons are given in printed rules, but most companies assume that the reason is so plain that it need not be given.

There is no kind of business in the country which requires more careful management, more clear-headed intelligence, on the part of those engaged in it, than the railroad business. A thick-headed conductor, a boozy switchman or a muddled brakeman may, by an act of stupidity or negligence, cost a score of lives to the passengers and hundreds of thousands of dollars' loss to the company. The railroads are in the light of day, everybody sees and criticises them, and their management must be made as safe as possible; and the unanimous testimony is that in order to make them safe the servants of the road must be abstemious men.

After this testimony of the best experience, absolutely unanimous, what use is there of raising the question further, whether the saloon is a blessing or a curse. The saloon, by the general voice of the most enterprising business in the country, the business of transportation, is declared to be a menace and a curse. The saloon has its interdict. The saloon is the enemy of life and property. The saloon deserves to be outlawed by the general voice of the State and Nation, as it is already outlawed by the railroads. We are glad to be able to give to our readers such an impressive array of testimony on this subject.

MORRIS AND SAMMIE.

They Are Fond of Pudding but Won't Take Brandy Sauce.

Some big folks think it is all nonsense to get little boys and girls to make promises, because they will forget, and will soon break them. As you know, we have often told you that a pledge is a promise, and one who signs a pledge makes a solemn promise before God. We have something to tell you of two little boys that shows that little folks do understand more than some folks think.

Morris and Sammie are the two boys; they are only six and seven years of age. They live in New Jersey, and every Sunday are to be found in their places in Sunday-school. They think they have the best teacher in the world. He loves his scholars as much as they love him, and he teaches them as few others can about God. He tells them how they ought to take care of their bodies, because they belong to God, he has shown them that strong drink is bad, and they know they ought never to drink it. Morris and Sammie are very fond of pudding, as all children are. They like it extra well when it has sauce on it. But fond as they are of it, they won't touch it if it has brandy or wine in the sauce. They can not be coaxed to eat it.

Some one told them that they would not be breaking their pledge if they ate it, because they had only promised not drink it. "No," said they, "it is bad, and we promised not to touch it."

It was a year ago that they signed the pledge, and then the minister said they would not understand. Don't you think they do? They do what some big folks can not, for they will sit at the hotel table, those two brave little men, and see others enjoying the pudding while they deny themselves, and go without. We feel like waving our hat and saying: "Hurrah for Morris and Sammie!" —Temperance Cause.

ITEMIZED FACTS.

"A MAN," says the Commercial Advertiser, "who never knows whether to take beer or whisky is confronted by a dilemma, either horn of which is refreshing." But what if he gets out in a still more refreshing way by taking neither and so taking the bull by the horns?

I MET with a brother minister the other day who said he could not be a teetotaller; his conscience would not allow him. He thought he would be diverging from the Scripture. I did not say any thing at all to him. I thought he was too far gone for me.—Mr. Spurgeon.

I FIND that he who made the human frame made it so wisely that it does not need the stimulus of beverages, which, when taken in excess, blind the reason, inflame the blood, sow the seed of disease and implant an unconquerable craving for the fatal poison.—Sir Edward Baines.

FIFTY years ago, Sir Edward Baines found himself in a position in which he might be able to save a man addicted to drink if he himself became a total abstainer. He made the sacrifice, and from that time down to the end of his life he continued a staunch and consistent teetotaller.—Leeds Mercury. ■

CALLING ON A KING.

A Photographic Interview with the Monarch of the Turf.

Why Salvator Fell Out with Pretender Tenny — Some Surprising Information Concerning the Track—Haggin's Famous Horse Thinks He Could Distance Blaine and Cleveland in the Great Presidential Stakes.

[COPYRIGHT, 1890.]
[Special Correspondence.]

It is not easy to approach the supreme head of the American turf. When King Salvator is in his stable, casual visitors are expected to pay their respects from a respectful distance. Without proper credentials, callers are regarded with suspicion. The monarch's most immediate attendant is a colored boy named Brandon. There isn't a stable lad in America who wouldn't give up all claims upon watermelons for the balance of his life if he could have the honor which Brandon enjoys and this, it will be conceded, is saying a good deal. When the Haggin horses are out for an airing, the king is invariably at the head of the procession. The fitness of things finds further illustration in the fact that next in line comes the queen of the track, Firenze, whose claims to royal honors have been vindicated on so many hard-fought fields. Successes have not turned the head of Salvator; greatness sits as easily upon him as his exercise blanket. A more tractable animal was never foaled. He is apt to be a trifle sluggish in the early spring when it becomes essential that about fifty pounds of his superfluous tissue should be worked off.

High living and little exercise, however, do not make him inordinately fat, and he takes kindly to the rather disagreeable business of getting down to his running weight of about a thousand pounds. His royal highness is a chestnut, bald faced and white legged below the knees. It would be easy to mistake him for an English horse with his remarkable muscular development and unusual length. A thousand pounds is not above the average weight, neither is his height unusual, but the shoulders stand up in more than proportion to his altitude and account in some degree for his phenomenal propelling power. He is a handsome horse, but not remarkably so. Senorita has perhaps greater beauty to the square ounce of tissue than Salvator has to the square pound, but he is a superb looking beast notwithstanding. Senorita is a perfect model of equine daintiness and finish; Salvator's light barrel and magnificent quarters tell a story of speed and strength. All his lines are consistent with his astonishing achievements. To see Salvator in his stable and to see him under a jockey is to look at two different quadrupeds. When he is being exercised at a slow walk his head is carried low and his motions give little promise of his possibilities; when he is fighting for his head and leaving his "field" behind, his stride, long, easy, smooth and natural, is perhaps as pure a gait as ever adorned the turf. For entertaining the opinion that take him all in all we shall see Salvator's like no more, Trainer Matthew Byrnes may readily be pardoned. The racing at Sheepshead Bay was not over for the day when he introduced me to the monarch.

"Why didn't you wait and see the last race run, Mr. Byrnes?" I asked.

"I would rather come here to see Salvator walk than to see other horses going at full speed," was the reply.

Salvator received me with condescending graciousness.

"You are perfectly welcome," said the affable autocrat of the track, "to any information I can give, but I have a natural reluctance to entering upon anything in the nature of a personal discussion. Nothing in my judgment can be so unbecoming as the habit—"

"Pardon me," I interrupted; "there are the highest precedents for it. The Emperor William, for instance, discusses himself constantly without the least reserve. As a matter of common justice it is due you that some misapprehension concerning your relations with Pretender Tenny should be cleared up. This audacious attempt to seize your throne for insta—"

"I beg that you will make no allusion to so trivial a matter," broke in the monarch with much stateliness. "At the risk of seeming to be discourteous, I must decline to talk about Tenny. There are some topics which can be tolerated only at a loss of self respect, and that is one of them. I trust you will not regard me as unduly sensitive about my personal dignity, but even were that not at stake I could not but look upon his pretensions as too ridiculous for consideration."

"Still it must be confessed that in his match race with you he was dangerously near your throat latch at the finish."

Something more than remotely resembling a horse laugh followed this remark. When this flash of equine merriment subsided the king jocosely observed:

"It is quite probable that you still have a good deal to learn about close finishes. Your innocence is not unnatural. From my coithood up I have given them a good deal of attention, and I must confess that even to me they still, in exceptional cases, possess a few elements of mystery. That anybody should be deceived, however, about that particular close finish after what happened at Monmouth is scarcely credible."

"Will you please explain?"

"I prefer not. As another sprig of royalty once remarked—I allude, of course, to the sire of the Melancholy Dame—I could a tale unfold."

"Do you mean your own?"

This ill-timed levity came near bringing the interview to an abrupt termination. After profuse apologies the atmosphere cleared up somewhat and Brandon's pet was induced to proceed.

"Place not your faith in close finishes. I am not in a position to disclose the secrets of my profession, but if I were I could tell you a story which would make interesting reading."

"Can't you give it to me in confidence?"

This question, for some inexplicable reason, seemed to completely upset Salvator's gravity. He laughed most immoderately.

"The idea of telling any thing to an interviewer in confidence! Now see, young man, let me give you a tip. Don't shudder; I don't mean a tip in the racing sense of the word. I trust I'm too well bred for that. You can look at my pedigree if you don't believe me. What I meant to say was: Let me give you a hint. I know an interviewer the minute I see him. I don't know how I came to talk to you at all. You come and catch me when I have a lucid interval and see how reticent I'll be."

"Well, it's too late to regret it now."

"I know it, but there's one thing I want to tell you, and people can make the most of it. The fact is that up to the time of that affair at Sheepshead Bay Tenny and I had an understanding. He didn't keep faith with me, and so I gave him a licking at Monmouth that he won't forget in a hurry."

"What was the understanding?"

"Well, you see Mr. Haggin told Byrnes in my presence that if I held my supremacy until the end of the season he'd retire me. I put the matter to Tenny in this way: He could have a clear field next year if he wouldn't bother me this season. Tenny agreed, and you know how he tried to steal a march on me at Sheepshead. Well, the game didn't work, and I made a show of him at Monmouth. You would have done the same thing in my place, wouldn't you?"

"That was rather underhanded."

"Wasn't it? Since then Tenny has been trying to bring about a reconciliation, but it won't work."

"You astonish me."

"I suppose I do, but if you doubt my word ask Firenze; she'll tell you the same thing. Tenny tried to get her to persuade me to let up on him."

"I don't doubt your word, but I don't see where the necessity is for making any bargain with Tenny if you can beat him so easily."

A SPIN AROUND THE BEND AT FULL SPEED.
(from an instantaneous photograph.)

"It does look a little strange, doesn't it? But I think I know what I'm about. You see, Tenny isn't like any other horse. Sometimes he can give a streak of lightning a good start and beat it, and at other times he's no better than a selling plaster. You never know where to find him. Now that we've fallen out, I have to keep keyed up to the top notch to be sure he don't get away from me. All I'm afraid of is that some day he'll catch me when I'm not feeling well. If he does, he'll come near doing the trick in spite of me if it's one of his good days. But, let's change the subject. I don't like unpleasant topics."

"What on earth do you, of all other horses, want to retire from the turf for? Now, if you were an old plug, bringing up the rear all the time, I could understand it."

"Well, you go into training during the hot weather, and you'll find out. To say nothing of the hard work, I can't take a drink when I feel like it. Then there's that fellow Brandon. I used to like him at first, but I've got bravely over it. He watches me like a cat and haunts me like a ghost. How would you like it? I've been tempted to kick his whole head off many a time. Haggin's a good fellow, but I don't see much of him. That's the worst of being owned by a millionaire. Of course I could have an easy time if I wanted to, but I'd have to pay for it in the end."

"How's that?"

"Well, I could get beaten half a dozen times and they'd take me off the track; but after that they wouldn't think much of me at the stock farm, where I'm going to spend the balance of my days; and I wouldn't be treated with the deference I am accustomed to. That's what I'm working so hard for."

"Will you excuse me if I ask you a rather pointed question?"

"Don't make it too pointed; it's my first experience at this kind of thing."

"I'll be as delicate as possible. You have said nothing which justifies the conclusion that races are run on their merits. Are horses in the habit of coming to what you call an understanding with each other?"

"Why, my dear boy, your guilelessness is perfectly refreshing. Can't you see that we are the real protectors of the public? Everybody knows that owners combine, that races are fixed in advance, that in other words, the trusting public has no show unless we take the matter in hand. We are constantly trying to preserve the purity of the turf. You've heard of a lead pipe cinch? Well, if you haven't it's time you did. I could tell you of a dozen cases in which either owners or jockeys have put up a job, and in which their calculations were upset. When you hear of another sure thing gone wrong you can make up your mind that nothing but an honest horse broke the combination. You didn't know, I suppose, that I am the president of our anti-crookedness society?"

"Well, I've heard of a good many pretty little schemes coming to grief, but I had no idea that the horses took any hand in defeating them."

"I want to tell you just one thing more. It's a mystery to me why, as a class, racers do their level best to beat each other. They usually have in the saddle either a little brute or an imbecile, who draws blood and uses the whip just at the moment when he should be sitting still and giving his mount a chance. They think that is riding. We know better. We will do more in response to a touch for an intelligent fellow like McLaughlin than we will for all the punishment that the troop of little scamps who weigh in at the races can inflict. I don't say that horses are perfect. Some of them have bad tempers, and many of them are vicious enough to be a human being. I know horses on the track who have no more business to be there than an elephant has to be on a bicycle, but they are driven, harried, butchered and worried, and the marvel is that they don't display greater infirmities of character. However, this discussion is taking a somewhat serious turn, which I am sure was not my design."

EXERCISING AFTER A RUN.
(from an instantaneous photograph.)

At this moment Brandon thrust his head through the half-open door, surveyed his majesty for an instant and withdrew.

"There he is again," said Salvador. "I shouldn't be surprised if he's been listening to every word we've said. Now you begin to have some idea of the unfortunate position of a horse in training. I can't hold a confidential conversation with a visitor without fear of interruption. There's one thing I want to ask you before you go. I understand I'm to be photographed in a variety of attitudes, and that the photographs are likely to be printed. Now, I'll leave that to you if that isn't a fine thing—the king of the turf masquerading about in front of a photographer? What indignity will Byrnes want to affront me with next?"

"Do you regard it as an indignity?"

"Wouldn't any self-respecting animal?"

"Well, all I have to say is that you needn't go far to find a precedent. Don't you remember that a celebrated Brooklyn divine was recently photographed in every conceivable posture, except, perhaps, that of standing upside down?"

"You don't tell me; I hadn't heard of it."

"Who do you suppose it was?"

"Oh, you needn't tell me. It must have been Talmage. But here's Brandon coming again. You'll have to hurry off. By the way, just a word before you go. I wish you'd make a little announcement for me."

"Why, certainly. What is it?"

"I see something in the papers about a Presidential race. What are the stakes?"

"About fifty thousand dollars."

"Why, that isn't much. It isn't as much as the Futurity, but still it's worth winning. Are there many entries?"

"Quite a number."

"When is it to be run?"

"Not until 1892."

"That shuts me out. I'll be off the turf by that time. Thank heaven, but I'd like to give them a run for it. Who are the favorites?"

"Well, there's Blaine on one side and Cleveland on the other. Blaine is aged and Cleveland's a six-year-old."

"Are they in training?"

"Yes, but Cleveland hasn't got down to weight yet."

"What are their performances?"

"Cleveland won it once and was once beaten by a head for it. Blaine has been beaten for it, too. He lost it by a nose."

"Close finishes, eh? Well, you can tell them both that if Haggin enters me they won't be in it."

With a coquettish flourish of his tail the king of the turf dipped his nose fastidiously in a pail of water, while Brandon harmoniously whistled, "Oh, that watermelon."

SECRET SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

At the special convention of the coordinate bodies of the Scottish Rite recently held in Chicago, thirty-eight candidates were advanced from the third to the thirty-second degree. Upward of three hundred members of the Rite were present, many of them visitors from sister jurisdictions.

The assembly of the Supreme Council held in Cleveland last week was the largest gathering of Scottish Rite Masons ever seen in the Northern States, and the magnificent appearance of Oriental Consistory of Chicago, doing public escort duty for the Sovereign Grand Commander, Henry L. Palmer, attracted a great deal of attention. The reception given at the Forest City House, although informal, was a very brilliant affair, at which nearly all the prominent Masons of the country were present and many of the civic authorities of Cleveland.

The fifty-first annual communication of the Grand Lodge of Illinois will be opened at Chicago October 7 at 10 a. m. Nearly five hundred masters of lodges and grand officers will attend, and the session promises to be an important one for the fraternity in the State.

The most beautiful and touching ceremony in the sphere of Masonry is the rite of baptism, when administered with all the splendor and solemnity provided for in the ritual. The ceremony is never witnessed in this country except among the lodges working in the French language in some of the Eastern jurisdictions. In Mexico, however, and in many of the European countries the ceremony is performed yearly with imposing rites at the festival of St. John the Baptist.

The Canadian lodges are now earnestly discussing the question as to whether they will hereafter adopt the American plan of opening the lodge and transacting all business in the third degree or stick to the ancient rule of opening and doing all business in the first degree. There are many directions in which Masonry can afford to progress a little, and this seems to be one of them; and, although the craft in Canada are great sticklers for the traditional landmarks, most of the lodges will probably follow the example set by the United States in this respect.

The New Jersey Knights Templar field day recently held at Ashbury Park was a great success. Nearly every commandery in the State was represented, and many prominent Templars from other States were in the ranks. These public Templar displays have been maintained for many years in New Jersey and never fail to attract great public attention.

Royal Adelphia.

At the Supreme conclave of the order recently held at Grand Rapids, Mich., the subordinate bodies of the order in every Western State were fully represented. This order, although but recently organized, is doing an excellent work in providing for both sickness and death among the members. During the past year the order distributed $130,000 for death benefits and the relief of sick members. The Supreme officers for the ensuing year are: John D. Mavis, Detroit, Supreme Commander; J. S. Martin, Racine, Supreme Vice-Commander; G. S. Salomon, Chicago, Supreme Assistant Commander; L. E. Mavis, Detroit, Supreme Past Commander; J. F. Lardner, Chicago, Supreme Lecturer; R. S. Thornton, Detroit, Supreme Secretary; Frank Haup, Detroit, Supreme Treasurer; J. F. Bauschek, Milwaukee, Supreme Guide; W. A. Jones, Supreme Guard; O. W. Carlson, Milwaukee, Supreme Medical Director; Fred Schreiber, Milwaukee, Supreme Legal Counsel. The next Supreme conclave will be held in Chicago.

Improved Order of Red Men.

At the great sun council fire kindled recently on the Boston reservation, there were over two hundred great chiefs present. Charles H. Symonds, Great Sachem of Massachusetts, made the long talk of welcome, and the Incohonee made an eloquent reply. The reports showed a large increase of membership on all the reservations, the aggregate now being 197,164. The entire tribal wampum received during the last great sun amounted to $925,781.92, of which $233,069 had been expended for the relief of distressed braves. The degree of Pocahontas was reported in a favorable condition in the Eastern States.

Ancient Order United Workmen.

The Grand Master Workman of Illinois has called a meeting of his associate grand officers to be held in Springfield, September 23, for the purpose of arranging a series of union meetings among the lodges of the State, at which addresses will be delivered pertaining to the aims and work of the order.

The members of the order in the United States are interested in the recent decision of the Supreme Court of Iowa, which held that a member of the order has the right, with the consent of the body to which he belongs, to make a change in his beneficiary without requiring the consent of the beneficiary for the reason that such beneficiary has no vested rights in the certificate of membership until the death of the member occurs.

Knights of Pythias.

This order, following the example of some of the older fraternities in Chicago, are preparing to erect a Pythian Temple. A corporation has been organized for the purpose with a capital of $150,000, and active operations will be started early in the spring.

CAUGHT BY A LETTER

A Probable Murderer Arrested at Camden, N. J.

WANTED FOR A HORRIBLE CRIME

Charged With Killing His Sweetheart's Mother and Cutting Her Body to Pieces.

He Makes a Partial Confession—The Murdered Woman's Daughter Implicated. A Number of Suspicious Papers Found Upon Him—The Prisoner to be Taken to the Scene of the Tragedy.

CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 2.—Deputy Sheriff Pickens arrived here from Leavenworth, Kan., last night to identify Arthur Fe den, alias C. A. Benson, who is wanted there for murder. Felden was arrested here yesterday. The officials knew the man at once, and a partial confession of incriminating facts has been obtained from him.

The police were notified on Monday that the man was wanted, and he was caught in the postoffice while asking for a letter. It was found that he recently moved to No. 916 Hamilton street, Philadelphia, but came here for his mail. Up to the arrival of Deputy Pickens, Felden denied his identity, but last night admitted it. The officials will not allow him to be interviewed, but in their presence he acknowledges that he courted Mary Rautzhan and was at the house the night before the murder. He states that the daughter gave him the bag of money, but denies that he is the murderer. He says he is willing to return, and claims that he knows who murdered Mrs. Mettman.

It has been learned that the man has purchased seven building lots in Berlin, Camden County, in the name of George Rau. A number of suspicious papers were found upon him. Pickens intimates that the daughter is implicated in the crime.

Felden will be taken to Leavenworth as soon as requisition papers are issued. He is said to have a wife and children in Kansas City.

History of the Crime.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Oct. 2.—At last the man directly charged with the murder of Mrs. Mettman, here, last March, is under arrest. This man is A. C. Benson, the lover of Mrs. Rautzhan, the daughter of the murdered woman, who has been in jail since the crime. Benson was captured at Camden, N. J., where he went under the name of "Attar Felton."

On March 20 last Mrs. Mettman disappeared from her home in Leavenworth. She had $440 on her person at the time. Five days later a headless, armless and legless body was found in the Missouri river, just above the city. There was no clew to its identity until the discovery of a human head in a sack was also made in the river where the trunk was found. The head was that of Mrs. Mettman.

Her husband was at once arrested, but was released, as nothing could be proven against him. Then her married daughter, Mrs. Rautzhan, who lived with her parents, was put in jail. It was found that she was intimate with a married man named C. A. Benson, who lived near, and that the money the mother carried with her, representing the savings of her son, had been the subject of conversation between them.

Benson disappeared after Mrs. Rautzhan's arrest, and though he was heard of both East and West the police could not lay their hands on him.

The police say that Benson and Mrs. Rautzhan conspired to kill Mrs. Mettman, and that Benson killed her in a clump of bushes in the Government reservation some distance north of her house, where he had decoyed her. They believe he then dismembered the body, and carrying the trunk, head and limbs to the river threw them in.

SENSATIONAL ARREST.

Sir Thomas Freake of London Held for Forgery and Assault.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—The magistrate of the Westminster police court remanded Sir Thomas Freake, a wealthy gentleman widely known in social circles, on charges of forgery and assault preferred by a gentleman named Gibson.

Sir Thomas lured Gibson into the cellar of an unoccupied house in Kensington, where, with the help of friends who were in league with him, he overpowered and handcuffed Gibson and took his keys from him.

Sir Thomas then went to the St. George's Club, opened Gibson's box, secured the letters and photograph of a certain woman and destroyed them. He had previously forged Gibson's name to a telegram notifying the club officials that a man would be sent to open Gibson's box.

Sir Thomas and Gibson were formerly close friends. They had a falling out on account of the woman referred to with whom both were intimate. The woman was present in the cellar when Gibson was attacked. The affair has caused a sensation.

Murdered for a Trifle.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 2.—The remains of the old man found in Black Rock Harbor on Monday last with a gag tied in his mouth, have been identified at the Morgue as those of John Lansman, who lived at No. 233 Johnson street. The deceased's son identified the body, and stated that his father was in all probability murdered for a small sum of money which he carried with him.

National Civil Service Reform League

BOSTON, Oct. 2.—A public meeting preliminary to the annual meeting of the National Civil Service Reform League, which opened to-day, was held in Tremont Temple last night, President George William Curtis delivering his annual address.

GUARDING BIRCHALL

His Daily Walk in the Jail Yard Has Been Stopped.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Oct. 2.—The excitement over the great Birchall trial is fast subsiding. While everybody is satisfied as to the justness of the verdict, universal sympathy is felt for the young wife who is suffering from the strain of the past week and the result of the trial.

Birchall seems unmoved by the sentence. He drew a fancy picture during the moring for a friend who called to ask after him, and signed it "J. Rex Birchall, Oct. 2, 1890." He shows no sign whatever of fear and evinces no animosity towards those who testified against him.

Another guard has been appointed, so that there will be a guard in his cell with him continually day and night. His daily walk in the jail yard has been stopped and he will never more go down the jail stairway until he goes to the gallows.

A TRAIN WRECKED.

Derailed by Sleepers Placed Crosswise. No Lives Lost, but Several Injured.

BANGOR, Me., Oct. 2.—A report received here tells of the serious wreck of a Canadian Pacific train at some place beyond Greenville Junction. The report says that obstructions in the form of sleepers were placed on the track into which the eastbound train crashed. The engine was derailed and the engineer seriously injured. No one was killed. Several are reported severely injured by the shaking up.

The cars were thrown off the track, delaying traffic several hours. A wrecking train cleared the track after a time. The train was delayed about four hours. The wretches who placed the sleepers on the track are not known, but are supposed to be discharged employes.

The Careless Operator Not Arrested.

EASTON, Pa., Oct. 2.—The report of the arrest of Operator Glosser, who is charged with being responsible for the disaster on the Jersey Central road on Monday night above Lehighton, is incorrect. He visited the scene of the wreck yesterday, and was about to be arrested when he disappeared, and has not since been seen. He is a boy, aged between 16 and 17 years. When told of the wreck he was attending the Katie Rooney performance at the opera house at Manch Chunk, and had orders for the holding of the trains in his pocket.

Mr. Cleveland Buys a Yacht.

BOSTON, Oct. 2.—Ex-President Cleveland came here from Marion and bought of Albert P. Bicknell, of the Great Head Yacht Club, the schooner centerboard yacht Galena for $3,000 cash. The boat is comparatively new and was built by Harrington of Lynn. She is a 40-footer and is fitted up very completely, especially in her cabin accommodations. Mr. Cleveland will have her sent to New Bedford and fitted out specially for gunning and fishing.

Confession of a Postoffice Robber.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Oct. 2.—The United States Marshal arrested Joseph W. Gregory for complicity in the postoffice robberies in Wayne and Luzerne Counties. He made a confession implicating Ben Bladen and James Kelly who were arrested yesterday. The officers found a complete set of burglars tools and an expensive counterfeiting outfit in Bladen's house at Plymouth.

THE MILLER MURDER

More Important Clues Have Just Been Unearthed.

EXCITEMENT IS AT FEVER HEAT.

Two Women Saw Lingo Enter the Brush Where the Body Was Found.

The Links Forging Tighter and Tighter Around the Negro's Neck—Citizens to Petition the Governor for Assistance—The Suspected Murderer Talks With His Lawyers—They Say He is Innocent.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 2.—The excitement at Merchantville, N. J., and vicinity continues to increase as day after day goes by without getting much nearer the solution of the Miller mystery than on the day of the discovery of the murder.

This excitement seems fast approaching fever heat, and a proposition has been made to call a meeting of those interested and petition the Governor to lend whatever assistance lies in his power to the authorities of this county in unraveling the mystery. Many of the most prominent men in the borough, as well as influential farmers living in the surrounding country, favor such a scheme and the field seems ripe for the movement to be made. What the result of this talk will be remains to be seen.

Lingo Talks With His Lawyers.

Lawyers Jess and Taylor finally secured admission to Francis Lingo. After the negro was committed they were retained as his counsel, and since then have been making strenuous efforts to gain access to their client in order to get his statement, but were refused by the prosecuting attorney. Lawyer Taylor says that he firmly believes in Lingo's innocence of the crime.

Important Clues.

Two or three important clues in connection with the murder of Mrs. Miller have just been unearthed, two of which will tend to fasten the chain of circumstantial evidence still closer around Lingo as the murderer. The first new important person in the case is Mrs. Riggs, wife of G. W. Rigge, whose residence is nearly opposite that occupied by the family of the late William Miller, father of the husband of the murdered woman. Her statement is very concise and is to the effect that on the afternoon of the murder of Mrs. Miller she saw Lingo and spoke to him as he went down the road and entered the brush where the body of the murdered woman was found. It was between the hours of 2 and 3 o'clock, and she saw him again the same afternoon, but it was some time afterwards.

Another important link in the chain of evidence is that furnished by Ruth Moore. It is to the effect that she saw Mrs. Miller walk down the road towards the bushes and take the path through them, the short cut of which led to her home. This was shortly after 2 o'clock.

Looks Bad for the Prisoner.

The statements of these two persons prove conclusively that Lingo must have walked down the road and entered the patch of brush in advance of Mrs. Miller; that he evidently knew that she was going to make the short cut across the patch to her home, and he proceeded in advance and probably intercepted her. If he committed the murder, that remains to be proven, but the links, as above stated, seem to be forging tighter and tighter around his neck.

MRS. RANDALL'S FUND.

She Is Now Living in Washington With a Comfortable Income.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—Mrs. Randall is now living quietly in this city in the house of the late Speaker on Capitol Hill. She is often visited by leading Democrats who were staunch friends of Mr. Randall.

It can be stated now that the sum that was raised by Messrs. Childs and Drexel for the benefit of Mrs. Randall and her children before the Speaker passed away was $35,000, of this amount $2,000 was given to her before the death of the ex-Speaker, and the remaining $33,000 was invested, she having the use of the interest.

The Brotherhood and Association Deal.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 2.—Chris Von der Ahe, in a published statement, says the Brotherhood and Association will not amalgamate, for the reason that "we have nothing to gain by doing so, while on the other hand we have everything to lose. At one time such a consolidation was considered. The Association will make a good many changes in its circuit. Milwaukee, Washington and New Haven have all asked to be admitted, and it is quite possible that a club may be placed in Chicago."

The latter not appearing or even giving any reason for his absence, Gaudaur will now claim the forfeit.

WASHINGTON TOPICS

The National Capital Quiet After Adjournment.

MANY OF THE HOTELS DESERTED

Dramatic Scene While the President Was Signing the Tariff Bill.

Surrounded by His Cabinet and Members of Both Bodies—Representative Mason Secured the Pen—Political Orators Sent to Wisconsin—The Public Debt Statement—Decrease of Over Four Millions.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—There are not many members of Congress in the city to-day, and several of the hotels look deserted.

There were the usual scenes last evening when Congress adjourned. The members indulged in handshaking, and were congratulating each other on the approach of their vacation after a ten months' session.

The session came to a very quiet ending. For an hour before the time for adjourning both houses were in recess, there being no further legislation to be transacted, except the reception of announcements of the President's signature to bills.

President Harrison was at the Capitol, occupying the room set apart for the Chief Executive at the Senate end of the building.

In the Senate Mr. Harris presented a resolution tendering the thanks of the body to Vice-President Morton for his fair and impartial conduct in the chair and Mr. Ransom performed a like service for President pro tem. Ingalls.

In the House there was no interesting incident of any kind. It is not customary to offer a resolution of thanks to the Speaker at the end of each session, but only at the expiration of a Congress.

The session closed without action upon the joint resolution to transfer General Grant's remains to this city. The resolution, it will be remembered, passed the Senate, where it was introduced by Mr. Plumb, of Kansas. The opposition of the New York city men in the House prevented its passage in that body, although Mr. O'Neil, of Pennsylvania, made repeated efforts to call it up.

SIGNING THE TARIFF BILL.

The President Surrounded by His Cabinet, Senators and Congressmen.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—When the bulky Tariff bill was brought to the President for his signature, Private Secretary Halford lifted the mass of parchment and laid it before him. The assemblage present gathered close about the table as the President pushed back the roll of the preceding pages so as to give his arm free swing to affix his signature in the space left vacant in the lower left-hand corner of the last page.

At the President's right stood the Secretary of State, and in front of him Major McKinley. Mr. Aldrich stood just behind Mr. Blaine. Some one asked the President if he felt at all nervous. He smiled and replied that he did not, but wanted an opportunity to make his approval forcible as possible.

There was a brief silence, and the President, taking a fresh supply of ink on the stub pen with which he had been affixing his signature to other measures, wrote "Approved, October 1, 1890. Benjamin Harrison," at the bottom of the bill.

Private Secretary Halford stood ready with the blotter, but Secretary Blaine caught his arm and said: "No, let it dry." So the bill was lifted aside and the heavy signature of the President remained on it intact.

Major McKinley bowed to the President and left the room.

The pen with which the signature was affixed to the bill became the property of Representative Mason, of Illinois, who said he wanted it for his little girl to preserve as a souvenir of the Tariff law of 1890.

PUBLIC DEBT STATEMENT.

Decrease of Over Four Millions During the Past Month.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—The public debt statement just issued from the Treasury Department shows a decrease in the debt during the past month amounting to $4,582,907.

The interest bearing debt, exclusive of bonds issued to the Pacific railroads, is $638,683,070 against $680,978,020 on Sept. 1 a month ago, or a reduction in the bonded indebtedness during the month amounting to $42,289,950; while on the other hand the surplus in the treasury, which a month ago, including subsidiary coin and national bank redemption fund, was $107,897,677, is to-day $59,791,250, a decrease during the month of $47,606,327.

National bank depositaries to-day hold $30,297,111 of Government funds, or about $100,000 less than on Sept. 1st. Government receipts from all sources during the past month were unusually heavy, aggregating $39,804,234, against $31,416,290 in September, 1889.

On the other hand expenditures for September past were $33,737,106, against $16,462,860 in September, 1889. More than $14,000,000 of this comparative excess of expenditures during the past month over those of September last year is accounted for by the unusually heavy bond redemptions in September past—nearly $18,000,000 having been paid out in interest and premium, against $3,656,955 in September, 1889.

THE EXPRESS TROUBLE.

Employes of the Adams Company Restless Over the Dismissals.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—There is a widespread feeling of dissatisfaction among the Adams Express Company's employes on account of the recent discharges, and some of them openly say that they will not submit to such long hours, and threaten to quit work. The men so far as known are unorganized.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 2.—There is considerable uneasiness among the Adams Express Company's employes, and it would not surprise some if trouble will follow. It was reported that the company intended to discharge old and high priced men and put cheap, inexperienced men in their places.

JERSEY CITY, Oct. 2.—A strike of porters and helpers in the depot of the Adams Express company is now on and the prospects are favorable for an extension of the trouble to other employes in New York and other cities in the eastern division.

THE APPEAL DENIED.

O'Brien and Dillon Must be Tried Before the Sitting Magistrates.

DUBLIN, Oct. 2.—The High Court in this city has refused to issue the writ applied for by Mr. Healy on behalf of the defendants in the Tipperary case, prohibiting the sitting judges from proceeding in the trial of Dillon and O'Brien on the ground of bias.

No further step can be taken, it is understood, with a view to changing the magistrates before whom the hearing is to be continued. But the Nationalists feel that their protests persistently made against being tried by magistrates whom they have reason to believe biased against them will have much effect on public opinion. Attention has been strikingly directed to the composition of the court before whom the political offenders, as the Nationalists consider the arrested men, are being tried.

The Election in Idaho.

CHICAGO, Oct. 2.—A special from Boise, City, Idaho, says: The State election returns now in from the various precincts show that the Republicans have their usual majority of nearly 2,000. The majority for Governor Shuep will reach 2,500. Republicans will have 30 members of the Legislature and the Democrats 19, with five doubtful.

A Coming Heavyweight Fight.

William D. Murray the Man.

At the quarterly business meeting of the teachers of the Crescent Avenue Sunday school held last evening, Henry B. Newhall resigned his position as Superintendent, and positively refused to serve any longer. For fourteen years he has occupied the office, and has set the school upon a height reached probably by no other in the State.

LIVE BIRDS THEIR TARGETS.

Fascinating Sport at the Dunellen Tournament—A Woman Sharing Honors With the Men—Prize Winners of Big Purses.

Excitement runs high at the Middlesex Gun club tournament at Dunellen, today, for the live bird shooting is drawing out the best talent, and splendid records are being made by the marksmen. The birds are strong and swift, fly well, and are hard to bring to earth, but with a skill that seems phenomenal some of the sportsmen are bagging every pigeon they aim at. Something of a sensation was caused this morning by the appearance of a woman before the traps. She enters the various events under the name of Wanda, but is the wife of Milt F. Lindsley, of Hoboken, the inventor of American Wood Powder. She is a graceful addition to the list of marksmen. All eyes follow eagerly her trim little figure, as she darts vivaciously from trap to trap, raises her gun to her shoulder, and brings down bird after bird. She wears a jaunty semi-jockey costume, but her demeanor is modest and unassuming, and her display of skill and endurance fascinating. She holds her own against some of the best of the male shooters, who have had to abandon the gallantry they first assumed, in looking to their laurels. Of the various events of the morning she has won second money in several cases, and first money in one.

There has been incessant firing ever since nine o'clock. The crates are being rapidly emptied of live birds and filled with dead ones. An enthusiastic throng of spectators is witnessing expert shooting by the country's most famous sportsmen. Among those who are winning big shares of the $100, $150 and $175 purses are James Elliott of Kansas City, Mo., the champion live-bird shot of the United States; J. Frank Kleinz, champion of Pennsylvania; Robert Welch of Philadelphia; John D. Voorhees, "the veteran," of Bound Brook; Sam Castle of Newark; W. S. Cannon, the famous one-armed shot of the Middlesex Gun Club; Wolstencroft of Philadelphia, who won last year's $400 purse; Frank Class, the Pine Brook champion; John Riggott of Rockaway, N. J.; and C. Smith and Tee Kay, of Plainfield.

Neighbors at War in the Borough.

John P. Stine, of North Plainfield, has been placed under bonds, by Justice Hardy, to keep the peace against Wm. Childs Smith. Some time ago the Stine property in the West End avenue and Rockview avenue neighborhood was cut up, on paper, into building tracts. Smith bought one of the lots, and built a house on it, since which time the Stines have decided to abandon their plans to sell the remainder of the land. Smith had bought his section on the supposition that the neighborhood was to be built up, and that certain streets, laid out on the recorded map which accompanied his deed, would be opened. Because he drove his wagon across the land where the promised streets were to be, he was accused by the Stines of trespassing, and a constant warfare resulted. Recently, Smith alleges, John Stine tried to drive over him with a team of spirited horses, and in consequence he had Stine arrested and put under bonds.

Prosperity Reported and Officers Elected.

The annual meeting of the Congregational church, took place Tuesday evening, and was the largest and most interesting one that the church has ever held. Reports of the year indicated progress and good work in all departments. The trustees reported all bills paid and a very comfortable balance in the treasury. At the close of the business meeting the ladies served refreshments and an hour was spent in a social way.

The deacons elected were L. C. Batson, A. C. LaBoyteaux. Members of Official Board—Rev. M. E. Dwight, C. E. Boss and A. J. Winckler. Trustees—Jacob Kirkner, G. W. Rockfellow, Wm. H. Brower, J. E. Morse, John E. Stewart, B. R. Force, C. E. Boss. Clerk—J. A. Robinson.

Queer Movements of the Adams Company.

Notices have been posted in the New York offices of the Adams Express company, instructing the men to refuse all freight for Plainfield and Somerville. The metropolitan newspapers quote the company's managers as refusing to give any reason for this order, and as saying that they have not yielded to or compromised with any rival company and have not abandoned any offices. As THE PRESS has already stated, however, the Plainfield and Somerville offices have been abandoned, despite the fact that they are doing a bigger business and handling more profits than ever before.

Some Very Big Fish in a Little Pond.

Fred Pangborn and Wm. Roantree, after fishing all night long in the New Market pond, have broken the record. Yesterday a young man by the name of Hallock, caught a carp weighing 15 pounds, a bass weighing 6 pounds and another carp weighing 9 pounds. That aroused Pangbord and Roantree, so they fished all last night and caught, besides 62 cat fish and some bass, a carp that weighed 17 lbs, 2 oz.

Ladies Training Class—To-Morrow, 4 P. M.

The Bible Training Class for ladies was re-organized at the Y. M. C. A. rooms last Friday afternoon. The class will be taught by E. L. Suffern, and will meet at the Association rooms every Friday at 4 P. M. The review of the book of Genesis will be the lesson for to-morrow. All ladies interested are invited.

A CAMERA-FIEND'S TRIBULATIONS.

How the Printers Delay His Lovely Vacation Photographs, and How Fair Women Profit by His Helplessness.

Plainfield's amateur photographers who depend on the manufacturers of their cameras for "doing the rest" are learning by experience that it is next to impossible to get a picture from the photographic printers in less than six weeks, so utterly unprecedented has been the descent of amateurs upon the printers with the negatives which represent their vacation photographing. There have never been so many amateur photographers abroad in the land as the present season; and as of course only a few of this immense army of photographers print from their own negatives, the printing has to be done after they come back to town, and they all want it done it once. The result is a dreadful congestion of negatives at the printers, and hope deferred that maketh the heart sick on the part of the enthusiastic amateurs. In this connection it may be mentioned that a new and, so far, lucrative business for women has been opened up by this craze possessed by everybody, to take photographs. Printing photographs from negatives is an occupation for which women, with their naturally quick eyes and deft fingers, are especially adapted; and some few of them have worked into it very well.

The Plainfield enthusiasts tell a story of one young woman who put $2,000 in the bank last year, representing the clear profits of one year's work in printing photographs. And evidently her work this year is on a much larger scale than last year. Women's work in this branch is acknowledged by photographic experts to be superior to that done by men. But perhaps it will be with this business as with so many others; the success of some will encourage others to enter it, and at last it will be overcrowded and precarious. But even then there will be "room at the top," as usual.

Gleanings From Dunellen.

Mr. Rider and family have returned from their Western trip.

The Rev. Mr. Stinson leaves today for Milwaukee, to be absent two weeks. Mr. Holden, Treasurer of Beloit College, will occupy his pulpit next Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Homan are going to Jersey City to board for the Winter.

The Catholic church has just been newly renovated and decorated.

A large amount of powder was burnt at the shooting grounds, yesterday afternoon, and no one was hurt.

The Dunellen Bowling Green is in first-class order, and both the Middlesex and Dunellen clubs are taking a great interest in the game. The Dunellen club, weather permitting, will play this afternoon for their cup; and the Middlesex club will meet for practice on Saturday, and will play for the medal on the 18th inst. Refreshments are served by Mr. Taylor.

Fred. J. Richters has sold his property on Washington avenue and bought a house in Newark, where he expects to move some time during this month.

Dealaman's new brick store is almost ready for the roof.

Patrick McMahon, better known as "Red Pat," is spending 30 days in New Brunswick jail.

H. A Read, of Arizona, is visiting his family who reside at West Dunellen.

A Monster Fish From New Market.

The water was let out of the New Market pond yesterday, and schools of fish but little room left to swim about in. The giant fish of all, an English carp, was easily caught by Mr. Drake. Its length was two feet, nine inches. Its weight was more than 16 pounds. Its scales were each as big as a silver dollar. People who saw it on exhibition at Vanderbeek's last night were told that it was the largest specimen of its kind ever caught in this country. Its skin will be stuffed and mounted.

Chose the Streets for His Place of Devotion.

Samuel Gibson, a carpenter, and a well-known Plainfield character, was found by the police at two o'clock this morning, saying his prayers, on his bended knees, in the street. He protested against being interrupted in his devotions, but was compelled to accept shelter in the police station over night. His mind has been affected, it is alleged, through past years of dissipation.

A Horse Falls Dead in the Borough.

A horse owned by A. E. Faber, of Rockview avenue, dropped dead in its harness while being driven down Washington avenue this morning. Mr. Faber was being conveyed to the railroad station when he noticed that the horse was acting queerly. He dismounted, instructed his coachman to return home, and set out for the station on foot. The horse died a moment later, opposite the home of the President of the S. P. C. A.

The Date of His Coming.

At a meeting of the city's clergy, held in the Y. M. C. A., rooms, yesterday, the date of the coming of the Evangelist, B. Fay Mills, was fixed for Monday, Nov. 3. Another meeting will be held soon to decide upon other details, committees, places of meeting, etc.

Plainfield's Shoe Men Famed Abroad.

The trade magazine called Shoe and Leather Facts, published in New York, Boston and Philadelphia, has the following to say of this city and its shoe men, in its current number:

The city of Plainfield, Union county, N. J., is favorably located and beautifully laid out. Many of the most prosperous business men in New York city reside here, with their families and the general aspect of the place is rather high-toned and distinguished. Although there is very little manufacturing done here, still the city is busy and prosperous. The shoe and leather trade here is especially active, and the numerous shoe stores, which are to be met with in every quarter of the city, well filled with customers, would do credit to a much larger and older city. Among the institutions here I notice two national banks, four newspaper offices, a seminary for young ladies and many well-attended public schools, which rank among the foremost in the State. The population is about 10,000.

Among the members of the trade upon whom I called, I may mention: Doane & VanArsdale, shoe dealers, carry a stock averaging $12,000. The store in which this stock is tastefully arranged, is 25x70 feet, has electric lights and a double front. The firm carry a full line of ladies', gents' and boys' boots, shoes and rubbers, and make a specialty of Packard & Field's fine shoes. Mr. Doane was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., and is a member of the Knights of Pythias; Mr. VanArsdale was born in Penpark, N. Y. and is a Mason. They report trade as highly satisfactory.

Rogers Bros., shoe dealers, were born in Buffalo, N. Y.—E. S. Rogers in '66, W. B. Rogers in '63. Their store is spacious and well fitted up, having a double front window, and they make a specialty of fine shoes. Both gentlemen are capable and industrious, and are members of the Knights of Pythias, Red Men, Odd Fellows, and Knights of Honor. They started business at their present location in March last and are highly gratified with the prospects so far, carrying a full line of fine and medium shoes. I carry with me the fixed belief that these two bright, active and industrious young men have before them a business career of considerable prosperity.

John J. Kenney, dealer in boots, shoes and rubbers, was born in Hunterdon county, N. J., in '58 and started the present business in '85, carrying a general line of all grades. Owing to the fact that he had no previous knowledge of this line of business, it was generally expected that he would not succeed; but his tact and judgment, combined with a fixed and determined purpose to win success, triumphed over the obstacle of inexperience, and Mr. Kenney is now in a position, the result of his own intelligent efforts and ceaseless perseverance, to demonstrate the fallacy of these erroneous predictions. He reports a heavy Fall trade.

What Means This Purchase of Mountain Property?

THE PRESS understands that a party of New York capitalists closed a deal yesterday whereby they became possessed of 300 acres of land on top of the mountains West of this city. The sale was made through the Real Estate Trust which company was authorized by the same party to purchase more. Does it mean a mining or land speculation, the building of an elevated city, or that railroad from Newark?

$10,000 Found in an Ash Barrel.

A New York rag-picker is reported to have found $10,000 in greenbacks in an ash barrel. This was a rare piece of good luck, but how much more fortunate is the sufferer from consumption who learns that, although the doctors may have pronounced his case hopeless, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure him. Consumption is a scrofulous disease of the lungs. The "Discovery," which is the most potent blood-purifier of the age, strikes right at the root of the evil, and there is no resisting it, if taken in time. In all scrofulous or other blood taints, skin and scalp diseases, old sores and swellings, it is guaranteed to cure, or money paid for it promptly refunded. By druggists.

BOWLERS THROW OFF THEIR COATS.

Getting Ready for the Season of Exciting and Exhilarating Sport.

With the advent of October the bowling season practically opens, and soon throughout the country, and more particularly in Plainfield and neighboring towns, will be heard sounds similar to those that fell upon the startled ear of the legendary Rip VanWinkle—the dull rumble of the heavy balls coursing down the alleys, followed by the sharp crash of flying pins.

The game of bowling has made wonderful progress during the past few years, and that, too, without settled rules and with no national organization. These two essentials were supplied, however, when, on September 8, representative bowlers from various clubs throughout the country met in New York city, organized the American Amateur Bowling League, and unanimously adopted a code of rules. Last Winter saw a great increase in the devotion paid to the pastime and in the numbers of the players; and everything promised a still more successful season during the coming Winter. This promise will be more than fulfilled.

An interesting feature of the sport is the fact that all sorts and conditions of people yield to its fascination. Good bowling alleys are now considered quite as essential to well-appointed clubs as are billiard rooms. Nor is bowling confined to men alone. Women have recently taken it up and have shown their ability to surmount the difficulties which are supposed to obtain in those sports requiring free-arm movements.

What lends the game its chief charm is the fact that it is almost a strictly amateur pastime, though few sports have been made the object of more legal enactments than has bowling before it was placed on its present high level. Another thing that has been notable as giving a high standing to the game is the fact that the best bowlers today are found not among the few professional bowlers, but among those who are strictly amateurs. All the best-known bowlers of even the large cities are men who are recognized as amateurs. The short is, therefore, one of the few where the term amateur signifies superiority in skill as well as in spirit.

There are few indoor games in which are so united the elements of both skill and strength. To drive a ball approximating 27 inches in circumference a straight distance of 60 feet requires a keen eye, a steady nerve, and a good muscular development, and these qualities are all attained in time by the player, together with an increased freedom and grace of carriage. Some games require more skill, others more strength, but there are few in which these requisites are so admirably united.

Much advice can be given to the beginner, but the essentials of good bowling can be summed up in this: Keep control of the ball at the moment of delivery. Swing the arm in a horizontal line, and when the ball just brushes the floor release it. If it is held longer, until the arm is on the upward swing, it will go bumping down the alley and doubtless find its way into the gutter. After the player can deliver a centre-ball he can try a cross-ball, that is, delivered from the side of the alley. Which is the more effective ball is a disputed question, but the cross-ball is certainly the more difficult. If the player is ambitious, he can attempt the curved ball. There are players who can start the ball in the centre of the alley, curve it almost to the side, and finally hit the head pin. But there are few players who can roll this ball effectively. If possible, a twist should be given the ball at the moment of delivery. This will have a greater scattering effect on the pins, and with it the bowler will be less likely to leave difficult "spares" on either side. The most scientific part of bowling consists in picking off the difficult "spares," that is, the pins left standing after the delivery of the first ball.

Without doubt the number of tournaments and match games during the coming season will be much greater than last. Though the Crescent League is at present crippled through the burning of its club house, its members still anticipate an abundance of sport during the Winter. Tournament teams for the season's match games are already being planned for by the various bowling organizations of the locality, and will be put at practice games as soon as the weather is cool enough. Those who witnessed last Winter's games of the Plainfield, Fanwood, Westfield, Elizabeth and Somerville series, and who watched the development and progress of Plainfield's players, are confident that the Crescent city will ere long possess some of the most famous bowlers of the New York, New Jersey and Staten Island section.

A Jr. O. U. A. M. Council at Somerville.

About thirty members of Franklin Council, No. 41, went to Somerville last night in stages and after a short street parade they instituted the new Council that several of the brothers have for some time past been working hard to place in that town, assisted by State Councilor Winfield S. Hill and staff. The new Council will be known as Ivanhoe Council, No. 72, of Somerville. Among the brothers present from Plainfield were: Councilor G. S. Martin; and Past Councilors C. C. Davis, P. H. Bennett, E. E. Vail, D. S. Dunavan, E. S. Weaver, J. J. Stahl and others. Special District Deputys McFarlin, of Trenton, and Rollinson, of Rahway, were also present. After the institution a bountiful repast was served by the brothers of the new Council.

Notes of the New York Theatres.

Helen Dauvray's return to the stage was inaugurated at the Standard Tuesday night (September 30), in "The Whirlwind," a new comedy of Sidney Rosenfeld's which treats of speculation and Wall street.

The new Garden Theatre was opened on Saturday night (September 27) with "Dr. Bill," a farcical comedy which was fairly successful in London.

"Goggles," an adaptation of Labiche's "Les Petits Oiseaux," has begun a second week at the Fifth Avenue.

Immensely prosperous still is the sway of the Hanlon-Voltar and Martinetti Pantomime and Novelty Company at the Academy.

"The Clemenceau Case" with its breathing, nude-like model of Alexander Dumas' voluptuous creation, Iza, is no more drawing morbid crowds to the Standard.

Nothing like the Lilliputians in their gorgeous fairy burlesque, "The Pupil in Magic," at Niblo's has ever before been seen in New York, and nothing could be more successful.

"The Maister of Woodbarraw" at the Lyceum, "All the Comforts of Home" at Proctor's, and "The Red Hussar" at Palmer's, are receiving more than a moderate share of public favor.

W. H. Crane has started in at the Star to repeat his success of last season with "The Senator."

"Claudius Nero," the dramatization of the powerful romance of Ernest Eckstein, which is to follow the Lilliputians at Niblo's is in four acts and seven tableaux, one of which will graphically picture the historical burning of Rome. Four hundred auxiliaries and nearly one hundred principals will assist in the production, preparations for which are fast being completed.

The snow scene which is to distinguish the coming season of the "Old Homestead" at the Academy has just been delivered by the artists, who have been engaged on the new feature since early in June.

Backed with a hobby for theatrical statistics and a pretty speedy trotter, a newspaper man went the rounds of the two score or more metropolitan theatres last Saturday night. Notwithstanding that few of the theatres at present boast of successful attractions, the statistician, by enquiries at the box offices and peeps into the various playhouses, discovered that New Yorkers had spent for amusements that night over $31,000. Of this sum the Academy of Music, Niblo's, the Lyceum and the Broadway Theatre each held a generous proportion.

Messrs Locke and Davis have succeeded in securing Mamert Bibbeyron to stage the terpsichorean display which is to distinguish the grand production of the spectacular drama, "Nero," at Niblo's in October. Mons Bibbeyron was identified with the American Opera Company during its existence, and first presented the "Sylvia" and "Coppelia" ballets to American theatre-goers.

The coming of the fourth year of "The Old Homestead" is being very ingeniously advertised in New York. Instead of the usual placards the shop windows are ornamented with huge pumpkins on which is stamped the announcement of the play's return to the Academy. In addition to this the Gothic covering which ornaments the dozen entrance to the big play-house is strewn with mounds of hay and farm implements of every description.

Good Fruits in Local Markets.

A great abundance of California grapes is in the markets this week; and the supply of New York grapes will be limited only by the requirements of the markets at upward of 3 cents per pound for Concords, and perhaps a cent higher per pound for choicer red varieties. This season's crop of the America, the best grapes from Spain, known here generally as Malaga, is exceptionally large, fully 25 per cent. greater than last season, when a great crop was gathered. There is, therefore, no doubt that the market will be abundantly supplied with grapes for several months at least.

The foreign dried fruit crop is a very large one this season, and the fruit will be of unusually good quality. Zante currants will be very plentiful. It is estimated that there was grown along the Mediterranean this year not less than 150,000 tons of these currants. Both the Valencia and Malaga raisin crops have been very large. By the McKinley bill an additional duty of ½ cent per pound has been imposed on raisins, but currants have been placed on the free list instead of being taxed 1 cent per pound, as under the present law.

The cranberry crop has not proved to be as large as expected when the crop was first beginning to be gathered. Three weeks ago 175,000 bushels were confidently expected for New Jersey. Now the best authorities only expect 135,000 bushels. The Cape Cod crop will not be any greater than last year. A full crop was expected three weeks ago. However, there is a larger crop in the West, and there will be less demand there for them. This fruit will sell this week for as low prices as at any time during the season, excepting damaged berries. There will always be some berries slightly damaged by frost, which must find an immediate market, and such stock may sell for less than $6 per barrel. But most dealers think that there will be few cranberries wholesaled for less than $6 per barrel this year, and all really good ones will sell for at least 25 per cent. more.

This is a chestnut year. This nut is usually very abundant during one season and very scarce the next. This is the year of abundance, and those well informed about the nut say that there will be a great supply of them.

AN EXCITING ADVENTURE.

A Practical Joke Which Might Easily Have Ended in a Tragedy.

For myself, I was "chopped down" once, and once only, writes Charles G. D. Roberts, in St. Nicholas. It happened in this way. In the midwinter of 1879, I had occasion to visit the chief camp of the Little Madawaska. Coming from the city, and to a camp where I was a stranger to all the men, I was not unnaturally regarded as a pronounced specimen of the greenhorn. I took no pains to tell any one what the boss already well knew, that is, that I had been a frequenter of the camps from my boyhood. Many and many a neat trap was laid for my apparently "tender" feet, but I avoided them all as if by accident. As for climbing a tree, I always laughed at the idea when it was proposed to me: I always suggested that it might spoil my clothes. Before long the men, by putting little things together, came to the conclusion that I was an old stager; and, rather sheepishly, they gave over their attempts to entrap me. Then I graciously waved my hand, as it were, and was frankly received as a veteran, cleared from every suspicion of being green.

At last the day came when I did wish to climb a tree. The camp was on a high plateau, and not far off towered a magnificent pine tree, growing out of the summit of a knoll in such a way as to command all the surrounding country. Its branches were phenomenally thick; its girth of trunk was magnificent. And this tree I resolved one day to climb, in order to get a clear idea of the lay of the land. Of course I strolled off surreptitiously, and, as I thought, unwatched. But there I was much mistaken. No sooner was I two-thirds of the way up the tree than, with shouts of laughter, the lumbermen rushed out of the surrounding cover and proceeded to chop me down. The chance was too good for them to lose.

I concealed my annoyance, and made no attempt to descend. On the contrary I thanked them for the little attention, and climbed a few feet further up, to secure a position which I saw would be a safe one for me when the tree should fall. As I did so, I perceived, with a gasp and a tremor, that I was not alone in the tree.

There, not ten feet above me, stretched at full length along a large branch, was a huge panther, glaring with rage and terror. From the men below his form was quite concealed. Glancing restlessly from me to my pursuers, the brute seemed uncertain just what to do. As I carefully refrained from climbing any further up, and tried to assume an air of not having observed him, he apparently concluded that I was not his worst enemy. In fact, I dare say he understood what was going on and realized that he and I were fellow-sufferers.

I laughed softly to myself as I thought how my tormentors would be taken aback when that panther should come down among them. I decided that, considering their numbers, there would be at least no more danger for them than that to which they were exposing me in their reckless fooling. And, already influenced by that touch of nature which makes us so wondrous kind, I began to hope that the panther would succeed in making his escape.

The trunk of the pine was so thick that I might almost have reached the ground before the choppers could cut it through. At last it gave a mighty shudder and sagged to one side. I balanced myself nimbly on the upper side, steadying myself by a convenient branch. The great mass of foliage, presenting a wide surface to the air, made the fall a comparatively slow one; but the tremendous sweep of the draught upward, as the tree-top described its gigantic arc, gave me a sickening sensation. Then came the final dull and thunderous crash, and—in an instant, I found myself standing in my place, jarred but unhurt, with the snow threshed up all about me.

The next instant there was another roar, or rather a sort of screaming yell, overwhelming the riotous laughter of the woodsmen; and out of the confusion of pine-boughs shot the tawny form of the panther in a whirlwind of fury. One of the choppers was in his path, and was bowled over like a clumsy nine-pin. The next bound brought the beast on to the backs of a yoke of oxen, and his cruel claws severely scratched the oxen's necks. As the poor animals bellowed and fell on their knees, the panther paused, with some idea, apparently, of fighting the whole assembled party. But as the men, recovered from their first amazement, rushed with their axes to the rescue of the oxen, the panther saw that the odds were all against him. He turned half round and greeted his enemies with one terrific and strident snarl, then bounded off into the forest at a pace which made it idle to pursue him. The owner of the oxen hurled an axe after him, but the missile flew wide of its mark.

Smoking and Cancers.

Mouth cancers and cigar-smoking have been closely associated in the public mind since General Grant's death, but a prominent Cincinnati physician, in a recent conversation upon the subject, said: "The only cases of cancer of the tongue that I ever saw were of persons who never smoked. The majority of them were women and the half-dozen men who were afflicted were not confirmed smokers at all. I don't believe that smoking even in the most indirect way causes cancer of the tongue. In General Grant's case the public believed his disease was due to excessive smoking, but few physicians share that view."

Mechanical Curiosities.

Darius L. Goff, of Pawtucket, R. I., who has a fancy for mechanical curiosities, possesses a clock that never runs down. Through an ingenious contrivance it is kept wound by the simple opening and closing of the front door of the house. Electrical appliances, operated by the running of the clock, raise the gas jet in the hall at dusk and lower it at bedtime; ring an early rising bell for the servants, a later one for the family, and an hour later the breakfast bell, and when the hour is struck musical cathedral chimes respond in the chambers of the house.

HAD IT DOWN PINE.

Where the Jewsharp Still Ranks High as a Musical Instrument.

The sun had just broken over the tops of the Ozarks one warm morning in July, says the Chicago Herald. The mist that always settles thickly over these half mountains with the night-fall was going to pieces and disappearing as the sun rose higher, leaving the green and dense verdure heavy and wet with the dew. In a cozy nook, on a log overhanging the wild little stream that dashed down from a gushing spring above, a native was seated, earnestly playing a jewsharp. He twanged the vibrant metal with his thumb, keeping time by splashing one of his bare feet in the clear water below. After ten minutes, during which time the sun had got high enough to shine straight into his eyes, he took the harp from his mouth and, wiping it on the leg of his trousers, exclaimed:

"Thar! Ef that don' settl' 'er, what will?"

Before he had spoken another word a stranger stepped from behind a big tree and addressed him:

"That was the best tune I ever heard played on one of those instruments."

The mountaineer looked at the stranger a moment, and then, drawing himself up in a knot on the log, said:

"D'ye mean it, mister?"

"Mean it? Of course. Why do you ask?"

"It's lak this, mister. Yer see I hev been jest on the aige o' jinin' th' Simpson gal, over 'n th' holler, fer more'n er yar, an' when th' poppin' time kem she up an' says thet I kain't hev 'er 'less I kin play ther jews'a'p. I bin practicin' hyar on this log for nigh a month now, I reckon, every day in th' mornin' 'fore sunup, an' I wuz thinkin' es I sot hyar, es ef I didn't git th' hang o' it purty soon, it'd be good-bye, Sal. But yer make me feel better, stranger, an' ef yer round these parts nex' week jes' drop over on ther slope 'cross th' way an' ye kin be my best man."

As the stranger moved on down the path the mountaineer struck up his tune again and played with a vim that was evidence that the stranger had been telling the truth.

Along with the fiddle, the jewsharp still ranks high as a musical instrument in the mountain regions of Arkansas and Missouri. A native who can't play the jewsharp is looked upon as having very poor prospects.

HEART FAILURE.

Weak Heart, Shattered Nerves and Nervous Prostration the Trouble with Thousands.

Failure or weakness of heart action is becoming a very prevalent disease. It is a most serious and dangerous condition to be in, and gradually runs into palpitation, spasms or neuralgia of the heart, total exhaustion of nerve power or death. At the first sign of these dread diseases every one should immediately seek a cure, and not wait until the fatal symptoms point unmistakably to death.

The first symptoms may be very slight and apparently trivial. But do not fail to heed them if you value your life. They often begin with a nervousness and weakness, a trembling or strange faint feeling, with tendency to giddiness. As the disease increases these symptoms grow in intensity and will be accompanied by dizziness, swimming of the head, fluttering or palpitation in the left side of the chest, shortness of breath, a sinking sensation, with coldness of the feet and legs. There is often also a feeling of apprehension or anxiety, as of impending danger, and a tendency to drowsiness during the day and sleeplessness at night.

A little over-exertion, excitement or emotion may bring on the attacks at any time. Sudden rising from a stooping or reclining position will cause dizziness, and rapidly climbing stairs will make the heart palpitate, produce weariness and shortness of breath. In some cases there are pains in the region of the heart, but in most cases there is no pain whatever.

If you are affected by these symptoms lose no time in seeking a cure, for a cure is not only possible, but sure, if you use Dr. Greene's Nervura, the great and wonderful discovery for heart, brain and nerves. It is purely vegetable and harmless, and its use offers the only sure hope of curing these terrible diseases and averting the fatal result. It is, we unhesitatingly affirm, a remedy of so great merit and marvellous virtues that no sufferer should neglect to use it, if a safe and sure cure is desired. It is for sale by all druggists at $1 per bottle.

No Other Remedy in the World Ever Had Such a Testimonial.

For the benefit of those who may be suffering and fail to find relief, I desire to state my case. For over a year I suffered from a HEART DISEASE, a constant pain, with severe attacks of palpitation, until I anticipated a sudden death at any time. I became weak and debilitated, with a loss of energy, despondency, &c. Hearing Dr. Greene lecture, he so faithfully described my condition that I determined to try Dr. Greene's Nervura. My improvement has been continuous and rapid. I have taken five bottles, and the pain and palpitation are gone. I sleep well, have an excellent appetite and feel well. S. A. DYSART, Nortondale, York Co., N. B.

Dr. Greene of 35 West Fourteenth street, New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write him about your case.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS.

A SIMPLE PANTAGRAPH.

This One Works Well and Can Be Made by Any One.

Some considerable time ago, says Golden Days, we had an article on how to make a pantagraph. The instrument therein described was made with four sticks of wood. But all pantagraphs are not of this pattern. Here, for instance, is a new one made of a piece of india-rubber and a metal ring. It takes but little time to make, and acts very well.

The principle is that if a string is fastened at one end, and stretched equally along its length, the displacement of a point at its center will be half as much as the displacement at its free end. That this is so any one can see for himself if he tries with a length of elastic.

Take a ring and make three holes in it at equal distances, through which thread your piece of elastic. If you had only two holes, your elastic would slip along too easily, but with three, you will get such a grip by the triangular arrangement as will enable you to move the ring up and down when you try, but will stop any accidental slip.

The holes should be made in the ring like the symbol of "therefor" (∴), and between the lower two a pin should be fastened in the ring so that its point comes exactly in the center.

Now make a loop at each end of your elastic. Hook one end on to a pin stuck in the drawing-board, and arrange your copy so that its center comes in the middle of your ring, while a pencil slipped into the other loop comes in the center of your paper.

You need not have the apparatus in the position shown in the cut, nor need you hold it with your left hand; but pull the elastic straight out, so that both ends are in a line.

As you stretch the elastic, you will find that according to the position of the ring on the string your pencil moves over more ground than the pointer in the ring. Consequently, all you have to do is to watch the movement of the pointer, and mark with the pencil.

If you have your ring half way, you will enlarge your copy as much again. The nearer you take your ring to the pin the greater will be your enlargement; the nearer you take it to the pencil, the less will be your enlargement.

If you want to reduce your copy, all you have to do is to put your pencil in the ring and draw with it, while you put your point over the copy and trace with it. In fact, you shift the positions of copy and paper, and pencil and pin.

A much simpler arrangement is a plain strip of india-rubber fastened at one end, looped round a pencil at the other, and having a mark across it at some convenient point in its length, the mark serving all the purposes of the pin and ring.

TABLE CONVERSATION.

Things to Discuss During the Meal Hour That Will Improve the Education.

What do you talk about at the table? Is it simply "Please pass the bread," "Some more potato, thank you," or even "Mother, you do make such good pie?" These are all necessary and right, especially the last one. We should never forget to praise the work of the one who makes the home food attractive and nourishing. But words about the edibles, even though they be kindly and cheery ones, should not form the staple of conversation at the table.

Could I sit down, unseen, at your tables I could soon tell how you are educating yourselves and each other; for even your faithful teachers can hardly do as much for you as you can do for yourselves and the home circle through your table talk. How much time do you spend daily at the table? Surely not less than an hour, and most of us spend two hours there. What great things might be effected were the time spent at the table devoted to lively and improving conversation. What you learn there will be remembered long after you have forgotten book lessons. Take up matters of local interest. Is your street being paved? Discuss the manner of it, and find out, if possible, whether it is a good and durable pavement that is going down or whether it will probably have to be torn up and replaced within a year or two.

Are you in the midst of a political campaign? Learn all you can of the principles of the different parties so that you may form some opinion as to the relative points of strength and weakness. Discuss the books you read and the notables of whom you read. Discuss the editorials as well as the news items in the papers. If your father or grandfather was a soldier in our last war, ask him to give you reminiscences of his battles and marches, and after supper get out your best map and go over the story with its help. You will learn more geography in one evening than you have done in all the week at school. When questions of manners or the correct use of our English language come up when you are at work or play, lay them by till dinner-time and ask mother and the older sisters and brothers for their opinions. Keep abreast of the times, as the saying is. Note the movements of National importance, the matters of reform, and even foreign affairs. I am sure that it is better to say "do" than "don't;" but I must add two "don'ts." Don't discuss the affairs of your neighbors, and don't speak a sharp or unkind word at the family table. Such utterances are as much out of place there as are unholy thoughts at the hour of prayer, for the family gathering should ever be sacred to the spirit of love and kindliest courtesy.—West Shore.

THAT FLY PAPER.

How Little Lottie Got into Trouble with It.

Lottie is a little girl who sometimes disobeys her mamma. She is only four years old, and her papa always says, when she gets into trouble, that when she is older she will do better.

On entering the kitchen, one morning, she saw a large piece of white paper spread out on the table. Her mamma explained to her that it was covered with something sweet and sticky, and had been placed there to catch the flies. Lottie promised not to touch it, and her mamma went out and left her trying to count the flies that had been caught.

She soon became tired of this, and made up her mind to see what made the poor flies stay on the paper.

She spread one dimpled little hand out flat on the paper, but when she tried to take it off, up came the great sheet of paper with it. She tried to remove it with her other hand, but it caught that hand, and held it fast, too. At last she put her face against it, and tried to push it off with that, but it only stuck hard and fast to her poor little nose and cheeks.

Thoroughly frightened by this time, she called loudly for her mamma, who hurried to her, but had to stop and laugh at such a funny-looking little girl.

Her papa came in just then and felt very sorry to see his little daughter in such a sad plight.

He removed the paper from her face and hands, while she gladly promised to try very hard never again to disobey her mamma.—Laura Lee, in Our Little Ones.

The front stairs lead up to the second floor, where there are three chambers and a bath-room all of good size with a large store-room and a balcony off the hall; there can be provisions made for a good sized room in the attic if so desired.

The kitchen floor is six inches above the ground in rear of house and about four feet above ground at front part of house. The perspective shows the house built on a small hill but it can be built on level ground as well.

GOLDEN VINTAGE DAYS.

With the Grape Gatherers Along the Rhine.

Women in the Vineyards—They Cut the Bunches with Scissors and She Who Sings Loudest Soonest Gets a Husband.

[COPYRIGHT, 1890.]
[Special Correspondence.]

BACHARACH, Sept. 22.—The summer visitors have gone and this Old World village, past which flows the Rhine and over which frown the ruins of the castle of Stahleck, sleeps in the sunshine that has ripened its grapes for so many hundreds of years. One forgets for awhile the railroads and the telephones and the modern hotels and other nineteenth century innovations, and goes back to the days of armored knights and crusaders as one walks its narrow streets between its picturesque old houses with their quaint wooden beams, and looks up at the gray towers on the crag, from which still descend the stout old town walls bristling with tall watch towers and circling us round with their protection, as if at any moment the alarm bells might ring and the Counts Palatine summon their vassals to man the defenses against the Knights of Furstenberg, whose battlements one can see from the river-side, and who once had the audacity to stop even the vessel of a king to levy Rhine toll.

But the villagers fear not, and the women from the Steeger Thal, the green and narrow valley behind the ancient little town, come driving their donkey carts and their teams of cows through the stone gateways, sculptured with men at arms and strange animals, early in the morning for another purpose than behind bulwarks to seek refuge. In the bare little platz in front of the church—it is a Templars' church of the twelfth century—they sit surrounded by great baskets piled up with plums, red tomatoes, peaches, pears, white and purple grapes, hazelnuts and every kind of vegetable. Here is a cart drawn by a yoke of huge white oxen, with a picture of the Virgin painted on one of its panels; there a group of women in varicolored head kerchiefs, carrying on their backs great oval milk firkins. It is the market, and with its background of gray walls and round Romanesque arches, in the hazy light of an autumn sunrise, it makes a busy scene in a hamlet full of strange corners.

There is an air of expectation over every thing. The stolid-looking men and the bare-armed girls talk with animation and gesticulate as they look up at the sky. The great event of the year is approaching; it is almost time for the vintage. When the sun comes out warm they say: "Ach, the grapes like this!" When the clouds gather they look grave: "If only it does not thunder; after a thunder-storm comes cold weather." Eight hundred years ago the wine of Bacharach was noted. Pope Pius II. used to have a cask of it sent to Rome every autumn, and Nuremberg held its freedom on payment of four tuns of it in yearly tribute to the Emperor Wenzel. For all these centuries Bacharach has dreaded the autumn rains.

The hill-sides about the village are terraced, and not a square foot but bears its vine. The vineyards are dreary things to look at from a distance, less picturesque than fields of hops or beans, in that the poles are short and the grapes are not allowed to fling about their tendrils. With their straight, monotonous rows, broken by cross lines of walls and arches built against the steep slopes to secure the soil from falling, they disfigure the landscape; but when one is once among them and the leaves, turning russet, rise waist high, and the smell of the heavy clusters fills the air, then one, too, counts the hours of sunshine and waits for the ingathering.

At last comes the morning. The grapes of Bacharach are white, and they have hung until they are full of juice and thin-skinned. To-day begins the autumn festival. The girls go out with baskets and scissors. With all my heart I long to join them. They have green and red and white kerchiefs tied over their heads, and they wear short blue skirts that stop far above their wooden shoes. Bending, they cut the bunches and sort them. These are for the best wine, those for the second and the others for the third quality. Quickly the baskets fill, and the men go up and down the rows lifting them on their heads and carrying them out ready for the presses. There is a hard and fast line drawn between the women's work and that of the men. No boy will cut grapes; he will only carry them.

Before five o'clock in the morning the girls are in the vineyards. The married women have risen by 3:30 or four. There is the cow to milk and feed and the coffee pot (these Germans are not tea-drinkers like the English) to set boiling. Rarely a bit is eaten before, men and women together, they are at the gate of the master of the vineyard. He comes down from his chamber to set them their tasks with the sleep not rubbed out of his eyes. When they have started in the dawn up the hill-sides he goes back to snatch another nap before sunrise. At eight o'clock there comes a pause in the labor. The girls cluster in groups under the plum trees. Each has her bit of black bread to eat, and as she breaks it she passes her joke or bit of merry gossip with her neighbor. Their faces are brown and flushed a little. The young men lean over the walls and perhaps there's a bit of courting. Some of the girls bring out great balls of yarn from their pockets and half-knitted stockings. The old women—they look rheumatic—bask like lizards in the sunshine. And the air is full of the sound of locusts, and the red berries of the mountain ash burn bright, and the feathery clusters of the wild clematis hang on every thing. There are clouds of blue butterflies over the vines, and in the pauses of the laughter one can hear the leaves dropping.

At nine o'clock the bells of the church begin to ring. This tells the grape gatherers that the hour of leisure is over and the cutting of the bunches must begin again. The sun is getting high and it warms their veins. From my window I hear them sing. Over and over comes the refrain: "Geselgert sei der Rhein," ("Blessed Be the Rhein"). It is not what you would call musical singing. Some of the voices are hoarse and rough, but it grows ever quicker and fuller in volume, and it seems to carry the very spirit of the vintage. It is impossible to stay in doors; one must go out and look and listen. There is a sturdy, strong-waisted, yellow-haired girl of eighteen whose voice rises above the others. She is a merry girl with blue eyes, a good-looking, muscular peasant, and she leads the chorus:

Where the mountains bear the vine,
And the vine bears golden wine.

Hear it again. There are twoscore voices singing:

Nur am Rheine will ich trinken,
Einen echten deutschen Trank!
Und so lang noch Glaser winken,
Tone laut ihm Lob und Dank!

When the laughter and the song are loudest the church bells ring eleven. This is the signal for going home. In fifteen minutes the noon fires are burning and potatoes are boiling for the substantial meal of the day. There is no meat to the dinner, for the wages—even the vintage wages—will not buy it, but milk and potatoes are set out and the house tidied, and at one o'clock the bells call men, women and children again to the hills. There are no clocks in the houses, and the church bells keep the reckoning of the laborers' day. The cutting begun again it is not long before a vineyard is cleared, and bare and desolate it looks indeed, like a house you have lived in for years when you have moved out the furniture. The jollity of the vintage runs highest in the afternoon. The climax comes at four o'clock, when the bells announce another rest and bread eating. Under the plum trees there is a babel of voices. A rustic lover sits openly with his arm about his sweetheart's waist, and you will not have to wait long before you see him kiss her—yes, and hear him; for the hearty smack sounds rods away. There is more singing, and higher on the slope somebody is playing on an accordion. Five o'clock interrupts the merrymaking. The work goes on, the shadows lengthen, but the vines are not deserted until it is too dark to sort the grapes properly.

Such a day with fourteen or fifteen hours in the field and yet only ten hours' work accomplished is too wasteful for any American laborer; but the long rest periods morning and afternoon for which the German begins early and stops late add to the festival aspect of the harvesting. The presses wait for the fruit, and soon will come the wine auction, when the buyers from Cologne fill little Bacharach, and wurst and horse-radish and cheese are set out, and everybody drinks to the growth of the vines and the vintage of a year ago is disposed of.

It is a land of corn and wine that borders this turbid river, but its fruits are not gathered without its women. They want not wives, these Rhenish peasants say, who sit in rocking-chairs. It is the girl who sings the loudest in the vintage who soonest gets a husband. Twelve cents a day is the wages she earns, besides the prospect of marriage. Forty cents is a man's hire, with two quarts of the poorer wine. And when the rustic lover has married his sweetheart, then you will see her climbing the hill-sides in the morning to cut grass for their cow. If you walk you will notice everywhere the low stone posts set back a few feet from every highway. Between these and the beaten track the peasant women's sickles are always busy, for these little margins are public property and supply grass for the summer and hay against the winter time. You will meet her, too, with an enormous weight of wood on her head, a load that a man could not carry, dead sticks picked up in the forest. Or you will pass her digging in the little patch of vines or potatoes that every peasant owns and leaves his wife to plant and hoe and harvest while he hires out to a vineyarder. This is her morning—her housekeeping—and at one o'clock she, too, is ready for half a day's hiring to pull weeds or train vines. And withal she bears many children and finds life not less pleasant than women of other lands whose tasks press not so heavily.

And when the wild winds of November sweep down the hill-sides and the swallows have gone and the vines are bare, then there are leaves in the woods to bring home for the milker's bedding, and—but let us not talk of winter, for it is still golden autumn and the vintage but to-day begun.

NO KNIGHTS OF LABOR

Powderly's Men Blacklisted by the New York Central.

VICE-PRESIDENT WEBB'S ORDER.

Members of the K. of L. Must Resign from the Organization.

The Management of the Road Want Faithful and Efficient Servants—Samuel Gompers Says Webb's Action is Unmanly—Mr. Powderly Predicts a Spread of Secret Organizations.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The New York Central Railroad Company has determined to get completely rid of the Knights of Labor who may still be in its employ. When the strike began nearly every Knight employed on the system went on strike. Since the strike was declared off the company's secret service employes have been at work trying to ascertain if any of Mr. Powderly's adherents still remained in the company's service. It is said that there are about fifty members of the Order still working for the company. The corporation is determined to get rid of all the members of the Order, and will not retain in its employ anybody who owes allegiance to the Knights. Third Vice-President Webb yesterday issued the following order to the various heads of departments:

The recent strike, the acts of lawlessness committed in connection therewith, the published correspondence between the leaders of the organization that ordered it, and the fact that many men now seeking re-employment state that they quit work from fear of personal violence and did not dare to offer to resume work for the same reason, compel the management of this company to announce that it objects to its employes being members of the organization known as "The Knights of Labor."

The management is satisfied that membership in this particular organization is inconsistent with faithful and efficient service to the company and is liable at any time to prevent it from properly discharging its duties to the public.

You will at once take such action as will bring this circular to the attention of the employes in your respective departments.

What the Labor Men Say.

The general opinion among the labor leaders who were seen was that Mr. Webb's circular was unnecessary and uncalled for.

President Samuel Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, read the circular over and then said:

"Mr. Webb is a fool. 'Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad.' I believe there are sufficient organizations to which the men could belong in the various branches of the railroad service outside of the Knights of Labor. My impression is that Webb's circular will have the opposite effect to that which he intends it to have. The success of the company in the contest with the Knights seems to have had the effect of intoxicating him. The circular is a cowardly performance, since it attacks a fallen foe."

What Powderly Says.

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 3.—"I am not surprised at the order issued by the Central road," said Mr. Powderly. "It is quite in keeping with the past policy of the management. Mr. Webb represents directly the Vanderbilt interest and Mr. Depew, although nominally the president of the company, is simply retained in that position as a reward for past services as a lobbyist at Albany. While Mr. Depew is content to draw his $50,000 a year as president he is also satisfied to allow his manhood to suffer and to allow Mr. Webb transact the business which he as president should perform. It will result in Government supervision of the railways of this country, and nothing can stop it, for there will be organizations formed one after another, and if they cannot organize openly they will in secret, though I cannot say that I approve of such methods."

Must Leave the State Forever.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 3.—A conditional pardon was granted to Thomas O'Connor, who has served twelve years of a life sentence in the penitentiary at Stillwater. The petition for O'Connor's release was signed by all the jurymen who rendered the verdict, the judge who pronounced the sentence, and Judge Severance, the prosecuting attorney in the case. The condition on which the liberation is granted is that O'Connor is to leave the State forever.

Effect of the Express Strike.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Oct. 3.—The partial tie-up of the Adams Express at Jersey City is being felt very severely at all the seacoast towns on the lines of the New York & Long Branch railroad, over whose lines the Adams people control the express business. Not a piece of express was received the first day after the trouble from New York by the agents at Red Bank, Long Branch, Asbury Park and the other shore towns, and business is still hampered.

Will Visit the Redskins.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The President has appointed Messrs. William Cumback, of Indiana; George P. Kinkead, of Kentucky, and Charles D. Drake, of the District of Columbia, a commission to visit the Puyallup Indian Reservation, in the State of Washington, and investigate and report as prescribed by the act of Congress approved August 19, 1890.

Crushed to Atoms.

LONG BRANCH, Oct. 3.—Frank Kitchener, of South Amboy, a brakeman on the freight train running between Jamesburg and Long Branch, was killed at the Long Branch station of the New York & Long Branch Railroad. His death was most horrible. His ribs were crushed in and his body flattened to about six inches. He lived only 20 minutes.

GOV. HILLS' HELP ASKED.

Cigarmakers Want Him to Look After the Binghamton Authorities.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—There was a large mass meeting of cigarmakers and other branches of organized labor held last night at Clarendon Hall to extend aid and sympathy to the striking cigarmakers of Binghamton, who have been striking many weeks, and have received harsh treatment. All the speakers denounced Judge Downes, of that place, who is charged with treating the strikers in a very arbitrary manner.

The speakers were Louis Walters, B. Rosenberg, Samuel Gompers and Alexander Jonas. They gave a history of the strike and of the hard struggle the cigarmakers were enduring in spite of arrests, jails and the money of the manufacturers.

Resolutions were adopted denouncing the greed and heartlessness of the manufacturers, and holding up to scorn Judge Downes, whose decisions against the striking cigarmakers were declared to be unconstitutional, and calling upon Gov. Hill to exercise his power in the premises.

LINGO HAS A CHANCE.

The Camden Detectives Have No Trace of the Murderer of Mrs. Miller.

CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 3.—The developments of the past 24 hours seem to be in favor of Lingo, the negro, who is locked up on suspicion of having murdered Mrs. Annie Miller in the woods at Matchtown a week ago.

The detectives have been engaged in closely tracing up Lingo's movements on the day of the murder, and the time seems to have been accounted for with the exception of a few minutes.

Prosecutor Jenkins admits that while it is possible the assassin could have committed the murder without getting any blood on him it is improbable that he escaped without some stains. He denied any knowledge that any of Inspector Byrnes' men from New York are at work on the case.

Failed to Turn Off the Gas.

BOSTON, Oct. 3.—Two men, registering at the Hampton House in Haymarket square, last night, as William Bucklet and John Oates, were found in their room, one dead and the other unconscious, owing to their failure to turn off the gas. Oates was removed to the hospital where he still lies in a critical condition. It has been learned that he came from Margaree, C. B., but Bucklet's home is unknown. The men did not appear to be in liquor and had evidently come to the city in search of work.

Important Meeting of Oil Magnates.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 3.—An important meeting of the Standard Oil Company magnates and producers is being held here. Oil brokers say that the meeting is for the purpose of effecting a reconciliation between the Standard and the producers. The Standard is held to account for the break in the market and the existing low prices. The production for September shows an increase of 16,000 barrels, and to this the Standard attributes the reduction in price.

A Negro Assaults a Child.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 3.—Gracie Clark, the 10-year-old daughter of Thomas Tasker Clark, a farmer, was assaulted while she was playing in her father's barn near Newcastle, by Jacob Starker, a negro, weighing 190 pounds. Starker was captured and had to be taken secretly to the jail, owing to threats made against him. At a hearing later the prisoner was committed to jail without bail to answer the charge at court.

Seven Millions Capital.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Oct. 3.—It is stated on good authority that Eastern capitalists have organized a company with $7,000,000 capital for the purpose of conducting the business of manufacturing tinned plates. The headquarters of the company will be at Baltimore. It will run its own tin mines and will try to control the American tinned plate trade. Buildings will be erected at once.

Killed His Wife and Himself.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Oct. 2. James W. Denton, a farmer living on the Brill farm, three miles north of Saratoga, shot and killed his wife shortly after noon and then sent a bullet through his own brain. He had been suffering from mental depression and is believed to have been temporarily insane when the deed was committed.

A Boom in Nickel.

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 3.—The action of the United States Congress in putting nickel ore on the free list and appropriating one million of dollars for the purchase of ore has started a boom in the nickel region. Several new companies have been organized.

Nominated for Congress.

GREENFIELD, Mass., Oct. 3.—Timothy G. Spaulding, of Northampton, was nominated for Congress by the Republicans of the Eleventh District.

The State Department and the New Tariff.

ADVICE TO FOREIGN MERCHANTS

They Must Disclose Trade Secrets Before Their Goods Can Come In.

Work of Investigating Committees Appointed by Congress—Quickest Time on Record in the Government Printing Office—An Interesting Point About the Tariff—A Batch of Postmasters.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Acting Secretary Batcheller has written to the Secretary of State in regard to the question submitted to our Consul General at London, England, by the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of that city concerning the manufacturers' additional statements required under the Customs' Administrative act.

It provides for a declaration by the manufacturer of merchandise consigned for sale by him or on his account to a person in the United States showing the actual cost of production of such merchandise, including cost of materials and of fabrication, all general expenses of each and every outlay of whatever nature incident to such production, together with the expenses of preparing and putting up such merchandise ready for shipment.

General Batcheller says: "This department is of opinion that the information as to the actual cost cannot consistently, with the provisions of the law, be withheld from the consignee, and made a subject of a confidential communication from the consignor to the Consul, and that no other form of statement than said form 171 can ultimately be accepted as satisfying the requirements of the law."

A New Tariff Point.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The Treasury Department has mailed a certified copy of the new Tariff law to every collector of customs and internal revenue in the United States. The new law goes into effect on October 6. In this connection an interesting point has been raised at the Treasury Department which will probably be brought before the Secretary for decision. The point in question arises from the delinquency of the mail service to deliver the tariff law to the collector at San Francisco and other points where it is an impossibility for mail sent out to-day to be delivered on the 6th instant. As the old law goes out of operation on that date, the question has arisen whether goods arriving at San Francisco and other points before the new law has been received by the collector, are dutiable under the old, or properly come under a law which the collector of customs never read, and officially knows nothing of.

Quick Work at Printing.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The Government Printing office made the quickest time on record in getting out the official print of the Tariff law. Most of it was in type the day before, but the proof had to be compared with the original bill at the State Department. As there were sixty-five pages in proof this was by no means easy work, but under the supervision of Mr. Bryan, of the printing office, it was completed not long after midnight, and before morning the presses had turned out enough copies of the bill to supply the collectors of customs throughout the country. They were mailed during the day and it is expected that all of them will have reached their destinations by the time the law goes into effect, next Monday.

Work of Investigating Committees.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The shortness of the recess of Congress will prevent the several investigating committees pursuing their inquiries to any extent before the next session convenes. The sub-committee of the House appointed to look into the arrangements made by the World's Fair Commission for the Government exhibit, will go to Chicago at an early day. The sub-committee of the House Judiciary Committee, that has been investigating the allegations of corruption in United States Courts will go to New Orleans after the November election to continue its investigation, and the joint committee of the Senate and House charged with the inquiry into the immigration system will go to the Pacific coast early in November.

Collector of Customs.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The President has appointed Taylor James, of Massachusetts, to be Collector of Customs for the district of New Bedford, Mass.

Indians Excited.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Reports from the Sioux camps along the Cheyenne river state that the fanatical fever of the Indians over the expected coming of their Messiah is increasing daily.

A Democratic Love-Feast.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The barbecue of the Democratic Society of New Jersey, which is to be held at Asbury Park on Monday, promises to be a big political event. A number of Congressmen have been secured as speakers, the list including Senators Daniels, of Virginia; Gray, of Delaware; Blodgett, of New Jersey, and Congressmen Maish, Covert, Flower, Cummings and John Allen, the Mississippi wag. Senator McPherson, who has gone to Monmouth Beach a sick man, being worn out in his fight in opposition to the Tariff bill, will not be able to be present.

Another Flaw in the Tariff Bill.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—It is understood that another flaw has been discovered in the Tariff bill as signed—the omission of the paragraph providing for a drawback on manufactured tobacco. As this clause does not go into effect until January 1, Congress will have an opportunity to remedy the defect.

OUR ROYAL VISITORS

The Comte de Paris and Prince d'Orleans Here.

WELCOMED BY OLD VETERANS.

Every Possible Courtesy Shown by Government Officers in New York.

The Distinguished Party to Visit the Battlefields of the Late War—Writing a Book About the Great Struggle—Soldiers Who Fought With the Count Greet Him Now.

NEW York, Oct. 3.—The White Star steamer Germanic, which left Liverpool on September 24th and Queenstown on the 25th, reached New York early this morning. She had on board His Royal Highness Louis Phillippe Albert, Prince d'Orleans and Comte de Paris, the head of the royal Bourbon family of France.

The Prince, who modestly prefers to be known as the Comte de Paris, is accompanied by his eldest son, upon whom he has conferred the title of Prince d'Orleans, and by his venerable uncle, the Duc de Joinville. The rest of the royal party consists of the suite of the Count and a small retinue of servants.

The royal visitors were welcomed down the bay while the steamer was on her way to the city by Collector of the Port Joel B. Erhardt in the name of the President and people of the United States.

By express direction of the Secretary of the Treasury the Collector was reqqested to extend every possible courtesy to His Royal Highness upon his arrival in the country, and to facilitate the landing of himself and his distinguished friends and their passage through the Custom House ordeal, which even princes of royal blood must undergo.

The Count returns to this country to revisit the scenes of his battles and campaigns with "little Mac," to see his old comrades in the field, and perhaps to add some interesting chapters to his remarkable book on the American war.

The committee of veterans who met the Count and his party were General Daniel E. Sickles, General Daniel Butterfield, General Henry W. Slocum, General Martin T. McMahon and General Horace Porter, all of whom either served with him on McClellan's staff or were associated with him in the Army of the Potomac.

THE DISTRESS IN IRELAND.

What English Papers Say About the American Relief Movement.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—The St. James' Gazette prints an article commenting, in a sneering manner, upon the movement in America to establish a fund for the relief of famine sufferers in Ireland. It says that the movement is simply a dodge to secure the Irish vote.

The Pall Mall Gazette rebukes the Times for its articles denying that the condition of affairs in Ireland is such as to warrant apprehensions of a scarcity of food.

The Gazette asks: "Does Jackson's airy scamper, Balfour's placid absence from Ireland, or the eager scepticism of the Times prove that there is no famine in Ireland?"

The Star says: "America shames us. The establishment of a British fund to relieve the distress in Ireland is imperative."

On the Lookout for the "Ripper."

LONDON, Oct. 3.—The force of police in the Whitechapel district has been largely increased, owing to the threatened revival of "Jack the Ripper's" operations. The officers are instructed to resume the extraordinary precautions which were thought to have caused the disappearance of the mysterious "Ripper" after his last horrible butchery, though they were not successful in leading to his detection.

Stormy Scene in Tipperary.

LIMERICK, Oct. 3.—A stormy scene occurred in the Limerick Corporation meeting when a motion of censure for the Tipperary arrests was under discussion. The motion was finally passed, and its opponents narrowly escaped being ejected from the meeting.

Russian Students Still Agitating.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 3.—The university has been reopened, after having been closed six months on account of sedition among the students. It is reported that the students have renewed the agitation, and 14 of the offenders were arrested last night and imprisoned.

BISHOP GILMOUR RETALIATES.

He Denies Absolution to the Publisher and Supporters of a Newspaper.

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 3.—The trouble that has been recently brewing between Bishop Gilmour and J. J. Greeves, editor of the Catholic Knight, which Greeves claims is the official organ of the Knights of St. John, and which the bishop denies, culminated in the bishop publishing decrees of the third council of Baltimore. These decrees permit canonical punishment of publishers who make hostile attacks on the church authority.

In his publication Bishop Gilmour reserves to himself the right of absolution of not only Greeves, but all those who handle, encourage or read the Catholic Knight. Manly Tello, editor of the Catholic Universe, the bishop's paper, has instituted suit for libel against the World, which published an article by a Youngstown priest attacking Tello and the bishop personally. The diocese is greatly excited over the affair.

A Fall River Man Suicides.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Oct. 3.—Frank B. Brightman, a collector employed by Dr. George S. Eddy, committed suicide by jumping from Crab Pond bridge. Inside his clothing was pinned a note which said: "Please notify P. P. Brightman at George E. Hoar's store, 45 Bedford street. I jumped from this bridge to-night between 1 and 3."

While men were dragging for Brightman's body, a man who has not yet been identified took off his coat and hat on the Ferry street wharf, jumped into the water and was drowned.

HARVEST MOON HAPPINESS.

The Methodists Give a Pretty Affair in Vincent Chapel.

A bit of golden Autumnal fairyland was displayed at Vincent Chapel last evening, when the people of the Methodist Episcopal church opened a harvest moon fair and supper for the benefit of their Evona mission, for which a new building is about to be constructed.

The weather out of doors was unpleasant, but inside of the handsome chapel all was brightness and good cheer. The place was adorned with sheaves of grain and shocks of corn, ripe, russet-hued and rustling. The walls were hung with gorgeous assortments of Autumn leaves. A rural cottage thatched with straw and illuminated with jack-o'-lantern pumpkins peeped modestly forth from among the gay frost-bitten leaves and spreading branches of a bit of woodland. A rustic atmosphere, balm-laden, and quivering with the pleasant sounds of mirth, pervaded the place. The occasion was very like a revel by moonlight amid fragrant woods and bounteous fields.

All the more lovely for being flesh-and-blood creations were the fairies of this wonderland. Attired in the daintiest of costumes, and beaming with winsome smiles and fascinating graces, they cast a subtle charm over every trespasser on their domain, and exacted tribute money from not unwilling purses.

Jack Horner was present, with his pie—a mammoth toothsome creation in a big bright pan. Through a hole in the upper crust the visitors thrust their thumbs, and brought forth dainty bonbons and other goodies. Mrs. D. Davis, Miss Daisy Mitchell and Miss Belle Lunger superintended the distribution of plums.

If one wished more substantial refreshments he found no lack of fair ones willing to provide it. He had but to make known his desires, and one of the fifteen—Mrs. Pike, Mrs. Packer, Mrs. Winter, Mrs Mahaffe, Mrs. Love, Mrs. Lunger, Mrs. Spicer, Mrs. Jenkins, Mrs. Valient, Mrs. G. Thorn, Miss Baker, Miss S. Sharp, Miss Lunger, Miss Bolsterli and Miss May McDonald—would attend him.

Ice-cream was furnished to its devotees by Miss M. Sharp, Miss L. Wakefield, Miss G. Sharp, Miss Maize Hurlbut, Miss Grace Carroll, Miss Alice Loomis, Miss Annie Stafford, Miss Kittie Mitchell, Miss Rose Thorn and Miss May Thompson.

There was of course a lemonade well; and generous glasses, sparkling to the brim, came for thirsty wayfarers, from its cool, delicious depths, in answer to the beck of the wands of Mrs. Carroll and Miss Alice Carroll.

A genuine country store was another of the attractions. It was a cosy little corner, and its patrons were many. From behind the well-laden counter all sorts of desirable wares were handed out by Mrs. Taft, Mrs. Baker. Mrs. Edwin Loomis, Miss L. Chandler and Miss Eleanor Morrison.

At the fruit and decorating booth Mrs. Griffen, Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. Chas. Mitchell, Mrs. M. Brown and Mrs. Homan presided. They had many callers.

The fair and supper will be continued this afternoon and evening.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Edward G. Pope, younger son of Postmaster E. R. Pope, is home again after a long absence in the far West.

David Wotherspoon, of this city, is entered for both the singles and doubles in the Westfield tennis tournament, now in progress, and Messrs Walz and Beebe are in the doubles.

John K. Clark, accompanied by Frederick Cranson, both of Cazenovia, N. Y., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hartpence, of West Front street. Mr. Clark is Mrs. Hartpence's father.

By request, the Rev. Dr. Lewis will preach, to-morrow morning at 10:30, upon: "Parental Influence in Forming and Developing the Character of Children." Strangers welcomed.

David Ebbitt, aged 75 years, died at the home of his son-in-law, Nathaniel Saunders, yesterday. Funeral services will be held to-morrow from the house, 20 Jackson avenue, at three o'clock.

Among recent guests at Van Court Inn, Roselle, were Herman Simmonds and family, of this city. This new hotel just opened by H. W. Pope seems sure of success. The most expert of chefs has been secured and every other detail arranged for the satisfaction and gratification of the very best people.

Architect Charles H. Smith, of this city, who is just completing a handsome residence for the Corporation Counsel on West Eighth street, will shortly begin the building of a home for ex-Judge Wm. Stillman, on West Seventh street between Central avenue and New street. Mr. Smith has also been engaged by the N. J. A. C., to build them a club house at Bergen Point.

Shattered His Elbow by a Fall.

Patrick Kiely, a workman for Mr. Burgess on Central avenue, was seriously injured by a fall from a tree yesterday. Carrier E. T. Dunn happened to be passing, and assisted in carrying the unfortunate man into the house. Drs. Boone and Hedges, who attended him, found that he had sustained a compound fracture of the arm at the elbow joint—one of the worst kind of fractures and the hardest to heal properly. The bones at the joint were crushed into fragments, and several pieces penetrated the flesh and pierced the skin. The injured man suffers great pain, though the injury was dressed with the utmost skill.

Interesting to Young Men.

It has frequently been mentioned in these columns lately that the Young Men's Christian Association will organize a class for the study of shorthand. The following letter will show how advantageous it is for young men to pursue this study. The Mr Packard referred to is Professor S. S. Packard of the business college in New York city bearing his name:

Office of Remington Standard Typewriter,
327 Broadway, New York.
July 11, 1890.

DEAR MR. PACKARD: Could you not help us by persuading some of your capable young men to take up shorthand and type-writing when your Fall term opens? Wouldn't their chances be better than in the book-keeping line? I am prompted to suggest this just now because our office-supply man has just informed me that he is all out of good material, and has a pressing call at this moment for four young men at good salaries. We are sometimes rather overstocked with incompetent girls, but we are never overstocked with men, competent or otherwise. Too few young men take up the study of shorthand.

Yours very truly,
C. W. SEAMANS,
Of Wyckoff, Seamans & Benedict.

All young men interested in this matter will be heartily welcomed at the Association rooms on Friday evening, October 10, when the class for the coming season will be organized. It is also a pleasure to announce that type-writing will be taught in connection with shorthand. The Association has fortunately secured a machine for this purpose.

The Association is only too glad to assist young men in this way, and it is sincerely hoped that a large number will avail themselves of this grand opportunity for self improvement. The fee for membership in the Association ($2.00) entitles to either or all of the classes of the Association, together with circulating library and members' receptions. Applications for membership may be left at the rooms.

Not for Exultation but for Style.

(From the Somerset Unionist-Gazette.)

On account of the threatening weather and wet grounds last Saturday, the third and last game of the West End-Crescent series, which was to have been played at Plainfield, was postponed until Saturday of this week. Hatfield and Gore of the New York (P. L.) club were to play with the West Ends, and in addition to Doran and O'Rourke, Shoeneck of the New Haven club had been added to the Crescent's team.

The Crescents had advertised that the West End club would bring a brass band with them, so, in order not to disappoint the spectators, Bartow's band was secured and taken down. They have been secured for the coming Saturday.

There seems to be some misunderstanding about the action of the West Ends in taking a band with them. Some of our people have the impression that it is done to exult over their opponents. That is not the case. It was distinctly stated in the original proposition that the band would give an hour's concert before the game, and at its conclusion would serenade the winners. The true purpose is to put on a little style, and make the game as pleasant as could be desired.

[There will be no exultation by the band over the loss of either club, as each pays one-half the musicians' salaries. It is no more the West Ends' band than the Crescents! ED.]

A Beautiful Woman.

Nature has been exceedingly lavish in bestowing her charms on Miss Josephine Cameron. She not only possesses all the attributes to make a beautiful woman, but a personal magnetism that is felt by all with whom she comes in contact. She has large, sympathetic eyes, and her glance seems to reach the inmost thoughts of the soul. She is not alone a beautiful woman, but an artiste of rare merit, and comes to us from an exceedingly triumphant tour of the West Indies and South America.

An exchange, speaking of Miss Josephine Cameron, who presents "Forget-Me-Not" at Music Hall, this evening, says: "Of all the victories she has won, this is among the most brilliant. Her acting was faultless, and her impersonation, both in the wicked, scheming, fashionable woman and the penitent, terror-stricken lady, was perfect in every way."

Miss Cameron is ably supported and a perfect production of the play seems assured.

Uniformed Knights of Honor.

Wetumpka Commandery, No. 34, Uniform Rank of the Knights of Honor, was instituted last evening by Deputy Supreme Dictator, C. J. Feytel, in Wetumpka Lodge rooms, 3,401, Knights of Honor.

The Commandery starts with a charter list of 29. The following officers were elected:

Past Commander—C. J. Feytel.
Commander—S. E. Flower.
First Vice Commander—C. R. Thiers.
Second Vice Commander—L. I. VanAlstyne.
Secretary—J. Sylvester.
Treasurer—F. P. Haffner.
Senior Aid—John Fellows.
Junior Aid—J. C. Pierson, Jr.
Guard—E. W. Rodgers.

Dunellen, N. J.

The charter of the North American Endowment Associates will be closed Tuesday evening, October 7, 1890. Persons wishing to join as charter members can do so by seeing C. W. Oley, and making out an application before that time.

A Surprise.

If you will go to Rogers Bros' shoe store Saturday, you will be surprised to see what a good shoe you can buy for $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00.

Work for the Plainfield S. P. C. C.

Willie Major, an eight-year-old boy living near Bound Brook, died Tuesday, from excessive cigarette smoking. Last Saturday he made cigarettes from the silk of green corn. This he wrapped with newspaper and smoked a number of them. On Sunday he was taken ill and became delirious. He had every symptom of brain fever and died in convulsions.—N. Y. Morning Journal.

The boy lived in Trenton and not Bound Brook. The incident is not isolated. It is true that various boys may be seen daily upon the public streets of this town and other places with cigarettes in their mouths. They must purchase them at tobacco stores, which thus violate the law. It would be a wholesome thing if a law could be passed in New Jersey, such as went into effect September 1, in New York, which punishes boys under sixteen who use tobacco in any form. Until there is such a law, there ought to be a full enforcement of the present one; and besides this, there ought to be addresses made and sermons preached, so that parents generally may be given to understand the baleful influences of boys using tobacco, and especially cigarettes.—Somerville Gazette.

A Pleasant Birthday Surprise Party.

A large gathering of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Mitchell met at their home on Plainfield avenue, last evening, to celebrate the forty-fifth anniversary of Mrs. J. W. Mitchell's birth. The house was crowded. The company indulged in various appropriate pastimes, interspersed with singing. The special committee for the occasion was Mrs. E. B. Maynard, Mrs. Mary Thomas and Mrs. Francis Wyckoff, who did all in their power to make the occasion enjoyable to all. John W. Mitchell, son of the Rev. J. W. Mitchell, presided at the piano and showed marked ability as a young amateur. At a late hour the company dispersed, singing "God be with you till we meet again."

The Shooting at King Alexander.

Emperor William Pleased.

Catarrh

Is a blood disease. Until the poison is expelled from the system, there can be no cure for this loathsome and dangerous malady. Therefore, the only effective treatment is a thorough course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla—the best of all blood purifiers. The sooner you begin the better; delay is dangerous.

"I was troubled with catarrh for over two years. I tried various remedies, and was treated by a number of physicians, but received no benefit until I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. A few bottles of this medicine cured me of this troublesome complaint and completely restored my health."—Jesse M. Boggs, Holman's Mills, N. C.

"When Ayer's Sarsaparilla was recommended to me for catarrh, I was inclined to doubt its efficacy. Having tried so many remedies, with little benefit, I had no faith that anything would cure me. I became emaciated from loss of appetite and impaired digestion. I had nearly lost the sense of smell, and my system was badly deranged. I was about discouraged, when a friend urged me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and referred me to persons whom it had cured of catarrh. After taking half a dozen bottles of this medicine, I am convinced that the only sure way of treating this obstinate disease is through the blood."—Charles H. Maloney, 113 River st., Lowell, Mass.

SHOOTING LIVE PIGEONS.

Fine Records at the Middlesex Tournament—A Big Sweepstakes for To-Morrow.

Excitement over the tournament of the Middlesex Gun club ran so high yesterday that the marksmen grasped the opportunity offered to extend the tournament another day, and arranged for one of the biggest sweepstakes on record. It was decided to have it take place Saturday, beginning at 10 o'clock in the morning, and it was announced that each man entering would contribute $100 to the purse at stake and would shoot at fifty live birds. As fully twenty entries were expected, it was thought that at least $2,000 would be shared by the winners. James Elliott, of Kansas City, live-bird champion of the United States, was the first to enter, and was followed by Frank Class, the famous shooter from Pine Brook, and champion of New Jersey, and J. Frank Kleinz of Philadelphia, champion of Pennsylvania.

Various purses were at stake yesterday, but only the large ones, ranging in value from $100 to $175, drew out the most expert shooters. The events were all at live birds, of which more than one thousand were killed during the day by from fifty to seventy-five contestants. Splendid records were made by many of the marksmen. Elliott, Crosby, Whitney, Wolstencroft, and Class shot all day and never miss a bird. Others who shared first money in some of the events were Miller, Wallace, Wild, Quimby, J. L. Smith, Sigler, Riggott, Welch, Van Braeckle, Castle and Wallace.

Shares in second money were won by Harrison, Cooper, Kleinz, Castle, W. H. Green, J. D. Voorhees, the "veteran," Quimby, Wild, Peacock, C. Smith, Lindsley and Cannon the noted one-armed shot of the Middlesex Club.

The live-bird sport continued excellent all day yesterday. The birds flew well and forced many of the marksmen to use their second barrel at long range. Some extraordinarily good shots resulted. An unusually strong flier came near making Elliott break his perfect record. It carried the heavy load of shot from his first barrel almost to the boundary fence, when it would have been "lost," but by a superb use of his second barrel the champion brought down the pigeon just inside the dead line.

The winnings of some of the men participating in the tournament have been large. Whitney's profits have reached $500. Elliott and Wolstencroft have won fully as high as $900 apiece. A number have lost heavily.

The big guaranteed purse of the season is at stake today. Each of twenty marksmen has paid an entrance fee of $25, and each has twenty-five birds to shoot at. The event will not be ended till dark, when $500 will be divided among the winners. There is great excitement among both contestants and spectators. The birds are flying even better than yesterday. A strong wind assists their flight away from the traps, and cripples the reach of the sportsmen's guns. Some of the most expert shots have already lost several birds, but Elliott, Wolstencroft, Whitney and Crosby still have perfect records at one o'clock, and stand a chance of winning first money. If they tie they will shoot off to a finish, and the winner will get $200—forty per cent. of the purse. All other ties—for second, third, fourth and fifth moneys—will also, it is expected, be shot off to a finish, so that there will be but one winner for each pot. These will get, respectively, 27½, 17½, 10 and 5 per cent. of the $500 purse.

Quimby's shooting this morning was phenomenal. He brought down every bird with his first barrel, and didn't have to use his second barrel once. At half-past twelve, however, his splendid record was marred. An unusually strong flier was released from the traps. Quimby hit it with both barrels, but with a wonderful spurt of endurance the bird carried the heavy load of shot over the dead line, sending Quimby to second place, and then fell lifeless.

Such brilliant shooters as even Class, Collins, Penrose and Lindsley are hopelessly out of the race. Collins lost five birds in succession, but was unfortunate in chancing to get the most spirited wingers as targets.

To-morrow's big sweepstakes will be the most interesting event in the history of the club. The purse will be divided among the four winners 40, 30, 20 and 10 per cent. It is expected that Elliott will win first money. He has not missed a target since the tournament opened. The event has an especial value in sporting history because it brings together, at rivalry with each other, the famous champions from the various States.

Railroad Rumors.

That in the near future both fares and time will be reduced between here and New York.

That it would be a good thing for the railroad and its patrons to issue fifty-trip tickets at one cent per mile; and that this proposition made to Brother Baldwin would probably make him smile.

That on arrival of some of the principal morning trains the boats will leave without waiting for several way trains arriving at New York on schedule time.

That there has been an unusual number of freight wrecks on the road lately.

That the emigrants are not going to be allowed in the smoking cars in the future.

That gates are to be put up at the Washington avenue crossing, Dunellen.

That the company will soon build a new station opposite the tank on the Lehigh Road.

Don't hawk, and blow, and spit, but use Dr. gage's Catarrh Remedy.

Live News From New Market.

For once in a life-time party lines were withdrawn in a local election, the vote on the proposed amendments to the Constitution being unanimously against it, in this district. The vote polled was small—only 73, as a large number of citizens did not know that any election was to take place.

The water was let out of the lake Wednesday, preparatory to the repairs being made by Mr. Otto to the dam and gates. Fine sport resulted for the fishermen. One party caught 700 catfish, which he distributed with a generous hand among his neighbors. A splendid specimen of black bass weighing 5 pounds was purchased by Mr. Carman for 75 cents. Mr. Luckey captured a German carp which turned the scales at sixteen pounds.

A very unfortunase case exists in the total loss of sight by Thomas Kitchener, a man over 70 years of age, who is dependent now entirely upon the assistance of his neighbors. His wife is also over 70 years of age, but devotes herself to his care as best she can. A weekly allowance of $1 was given to the aged couple by the township for a short time, and now even this beggarly amount has been discontinued. Kitchener lives alongside the lake in a house owned by Mr. Mitze, who generously permits him to occupy it for the balance of his life rent free. It is a case where a call from some of your wealthy residents, when out driving, would naturally excite sympathy, and the smallest assistance would be of great service. Let the good Samaritans be heard from.

The stage running to and from Plainfield has had its hours of departure changed, the first trip being made at 6 A. M. from here.

The delay in the arrival of mail matter from New York has been remedied by the sending of a direct pouch by the Lehigh Valley Railroad at 5:10 P. M.

Miss Irene Day, who has been studying at the Commercial College at Stratford, Ontario, took a first class diploma for stenography and type-writing and has accepted a temporary position in Toronto.

Stanley Day, Jr., has arrived from Canada on a visit to his parents.

BROAD-BRIM.

Ours Go Too.

(From the Insurance Critic.)

John M. Crane, of Plainfield, the well-known and highly popular ex-Secretary of the Fidelity and Casualty Company of New York, and during the past two years Manager of the New York office of the old Union Mutual Life Insurance Company of Portland, Me., has just resigned from the last named Company and accepted the appointment of Superintendent of Agencies of the American Casualty Insurance and Security Company, of which the firm of Beecher, Schenck & Benedict, of New York, are General Managers. The connection of Mr. Crane with the American Casualty is but a natural sequence, and we predict will result in much advantage to both the company and our friend Crane, who is not only a vigorously industrious worker but a successful "hustler" in whatever he undertakes, and, what is better still, a truly loyal man to his business interests and friends. Our best wishes go with you, John, wherever you tie up.

Real Estate Transfers.

Among the recent transfers of real estate in this vicinity are recorded the following:

Clarence J. Rice and Mary R. Loomis and husband, of North Plainfield, to Jeremiah Manning and James C. Manning, of Plainfield, land on Sandford avenue, Plainfield, 660 feet from Front street, 218x10 feet, $1.

Jeremiah Manning and wife, James C. Manning and wife to Clarence J. Rice and Mary R. Loomis, of North Plainfield, same tract on Sandford avenue, $1.

A Daddy Long-Legs Story.

(From the Newark Advertiser.)

A curious natural phenomenon was seen at Plainfield on Monday. A gentleman walking through his garden saw a living body of "daddy long legs," as they are commonly called. There were hundreds of insects in the lump, which was fully half a foot in circumference. There long legs were tangled in a seeming inextricable mass. The animal warmth of their tiny bodies probably induced the insects to huddle so closely together.

The Banner Ward of the State.

Returns from all over the State show that nowhere, except in the Second ward of this city, was there a unanimous vote against the amendment to permit special legislation. The total vote of that ward—which is the ward Councilman Spangenberg comes from—was 144, and all against the proposed amendment. The first ward of Bayonne comes next with only one vote for it, cast by Editor Page.

A Reunion of Veterans.

The first reunion of the 5th Regiment, N. J. Volunteers, since the close of the war, will be held at Newark Wednesday, October 22, with headquarters at 840 Broad street. All surviving members of the old Regiment are earnestly requested to be present.

STUDY OF ENGLISH.

How to Extend the Acquaintance of Students with Standard Literature.

Critical study of English is still most infrequent in our preparatory schools. It is not always the fault of the crowded curriculum. Too often the teacher has little comprehension of the inspiration and beauty of language. Literature is still to many girls and boys a dry subject to be got through in a prescribed number of hours. Reading and writing are the last enemies to be overcome, or to be dodged as one may, instead of the best and simplest friends one can have, to be grappled to the soul with hoops of custom and continuing habit. The work of preparation in English at the Cambridge school, where girls are fitted for Harvard studies, is complete and interesting, full of suggestion for students and for teachers of literature. The object has been to create an appreciation of English writings as an expression of life, rather than as an illustration of literary forms. Each literary work as it has been taken up has been prefaced by a careful study of the life and cotemporaries of its author. Editions without notes, except in the case of Chaucer and Shakespeare, have been used, in order to give the pupils the pleasure and the profit of discovering for themselves the beauties and other traits of the writers' works, and of exercising their own judgment in respect to them. The exercises in the class room have consisted in the expression of individual thought regarding the reading done by the pupils in private.

The work in reading has been made a means of extending the acquaintance of the pupils with literature. Their attention has been directed to the life and literary personality of the authors. The attempt has not been made to produce readers, but the aim has rather been to cultivate the old-fashioned art of reading aloud. It is almost a forgotten art in the multiplicity of schools of reading. By the modern methods of teaching there are more boys and girls now than formerly who can write a good, straightforward letter or a short and simple description of something seen. But there are few who read aloud with intelligence and with charm. The teaching of English in the Cambridge school for girls is of high quality, it is in line with the most advanced thought at Harvard concerning the teaching of English as a source of high culture and fine discipline. There is no danger that in the preparatory schools for boys or for girls the teaching of English will be overdone. While it is a pleasure to know that a student has fine attainments in mathematics or the classics, there is immediate satisfaction in the culture of a young person who can read understandingly our own poets, and historians and novelists and essayists, and write out a suitable expression of the enjoyment and its sources in good, pleasant English sentences.—Boston Transcript.

CHINA'S POPULATION.

It is Greater Than That of All the Countries of Europe.

The census of 1875 gave the population of the empire at 435,000,000. Since that time Tonquin has been lost with several million people, and Kashgaria has been reconquered. Among no people with any degree of civilization is the birth rate so high as in China, and although the death rate in the densely-crowded districts is very great, there is every reason to presume that there are now 450,000,000 people in China.

These figures represent more than one-third of the population of the globe. It is a greater population than that of all Europe, and three times the number of people on the Western continent. Even at these enormous figures the average number of people to the square mile for the whole empire—eighty-five—is not so high as in some parts of the United States.

In the great mountain ranges, on the arid plains of Kashgaria and the snowy regions of Mongolia and Manchuria, the population is sparse, but in the eight central provinces of China proper—in the fertile, alluvial soils—the population is denser and more crowded than in any other region of equal extent on earth. The villages there are almost beyond enumeration, and the numbers of the walled cities incredible to those who have not seen them. In the two Kiang provinces, at the mouth of the Yangtz river, with an area of 90,000 square miles, the population in 1875 was 72,000,000, and there were 125 walled cities.

The census of 1875 was taken when the richest portions of these two provinces had been devastated and depopulated by the Taiping rebelion. Since that time there has been a great inpouring of people from other regions of the empire, especially from those districts where the famine of 1878 prevailed. The natural increase of population has also been very great, and it would be safe to say that these 90,000 square miles have more than 80,000,000 people.—Mechanical News.

One Comfort Left.

"There is one solace left to me at least," remarked the old farmer. "After all my boys leave and go into business, after the pigs and cattle die, and every thing else forsakes me, there is at least one thing that will stick to the old farm."

"And that is——?"

"The mortgage!"—The Jury.

—Colonel Sir Edward, lately appointed Chief Commissioner of the London police force, is not only a very distinguished military officer, but also one of the most celebrated specimen of the British army. His fame as a hunter of big game extends throughout the length and breadth of India, and it was during one of his jungle expeditions that his left arm was bitten clean off by an infuriated tigress which he had attacked. It is a curious coincidence that Mr. Monro, his predecessor as chief of the London police, should likewise have been maimed in an Indian sporting expedition, having had his thigh bone broken by a fall with his horse during a bear hunt.

DIDN'T WANT TO SELL.

A Liquid Persuader, However, Changed the Old Man's Mind.

Old Sam Arbuckle was leaning on the fence, which surrounded the hog lot, and watching, with great satisfaction, a fine drove of hogs eating their evening feed of corn, which he had just given them. While he was thus engaged, a man on horseback rode to the house, and, dismounting, hitched his horse, and came over to the pen where Sam was.

"Good evening," he said, as he came up. "Nice lot o' hogs you got there."

"Yes, middlin'."

"Want to sell them, now?"

"Are you buyin'?" returned Sam, for answer, as he took a fresh chew of "long green."

"Yes," said the stranger. "I bought a car-load yesterday, and two to-day; have nearly enough for another. Your lot, there, would just about fit me out."

"What yer payin'?"

"Well, you've a nice even lot o' hogs there, and I'll give you six and a-half cents for them."

"Guess I'll hold 'em fer seven."

"You'll never get it. Six and a-quarter's the highest I've paid yet; but you've got an extra good lot, and as I need them to fill up a car, I made an offer at a quarter more than they're worth."

"Think I oughter git seven."

"No difference what you think; you won't get it this year."

"Well, mebbe I will next."

"Yes; but you can't afford to hold them over."

"Reckon a feller kin afford to do it, if he wants to; kain't he?"

"Yes, I suppose so; but you'll lose money on them."

"I generally do, enyhow."

"You won't, if you let me have them at the price I've offered."

"Well, I've made up my mind I won't sell now, enyhow. I'll hold 'em till next week, and then me an' the boys'll drive 'em to town, an' sell 'em fer what they'll fetch."

"All right," said the buyer, and turned to go. Just then a thought seemed to strike him. Turning again to old Sam, he said: "By the way, Mr. Arbuckle, do you ever take any thing?"

"Well, 'kasionally," he answered.

"I've got some as good whisky here," producing a flask, "as you ever wet your throat with. Try a little."

Old Sam took the bottle, shook it, held it up between himself and the light, and then placed it to his lips. Having taken a generous snort, he handed it back, with the remark, that "it wuz purty fair stuff."

The buyer took a taste, and was about to replace the flask in his pocket, when old Sam said: "I don't know but I might let you have them hogs, seein' as it's you. I used allus to sell to old Milt Barlow, an' he allus set up the drinks after the deal wuz made. But your licker's a thunderin' sight better'n hizen; 'sides, you trot it out in advance, an' when it didn't look ez though we wuz er goin' ter do enny dickerin' at all."

"Yes," taking the flask, which was now proffered a second time; "yes, you kin hev the hogs. I like ter trade with er gentleman, an' you're jess about my size. Well, here's lookin' at yer."—Ed. R. Pritchard, in Light.

SPOT AND WATCH.

They Disappeared, and so Did a Very Polite Soap Peddler.

"I beg pardon for intruding upon your time," said the polite, smiling man with the small valise in his hand. "A peddler is a nuisance. I know it as well as any body. But there are various kinds of peddlers, and all of us must live. It isn't our fault that we are here. Those of us that earn our living honestly have to share the odium that belongs to the calling. I'm not complaining of this, gentlemen. It is part of the curse that came in the original package to Adam. If there is any one of you that has a spot of grease on his coat, vest or pant—trousers," he added, opening his valise and taking out a small cake of soap and sponge, "I shall be happy to remove it, and without charging a cent, and without asking any body to buy my soap. It's my way of advertising. My dear sir, allow me. There is a little spot on your vest."

He rubbed the spot with a piece of soap, deftly applied the sponge, made a few passes over the cloth with a piece of cotton sheeting, and said:

"There, sir, that spot is gone. You will never see it again. And probably you will never see me again either, as I travel but once through a community. My goods will be found at the stores. I take it for granted nobody wishes to buy a cake of my soap. I wish you good morning, gentlemen!"

After the polite, smiling visitor had gone away the gentleman whose garment had been operated upon had occasion to consult his watch.

It wasn't there.

It had disappeared with the spot.—Chicago Herald.

A Brute in Human Form.

The city of Kostroma, Russia, has a sensation of its own in the shape of a cruel father, Egor Alexieff Smirnoff by name and a drosky driver by profession. The son of Smirnoff, a boy of ten years, failed to pass the examination at his school. Being afraid to come home with the report of his ill success, he concealed himself for two days. But his father found him and chained him to the wall of a dark, moist, dirty room, which was full of vermin. In the corner of the room there was a lair of rotten straw. He was kept in that condition for fully six days, until his mother could no longer endure the sight of his suffering, and took courage to report the case to the police authorities. The boy was liberated and taken to the hospital, and his father was arrested. On further examination, the room in which the poor boy was chained was found to be a regular chamber of horrors. There were rings fastened to the ceiling and in the floor, by which Smirnoff would hang up his children by their hands and feet, or stretch them in a manner that they could not struggle or protect themselves, when he inflicted chastisement on them with a knout.—Chicago Herald.

A SOULFUL AGGREGATION.

A Wail of the Unappreciated.

The poets all have sung their songs in tones of loving praise,
Of fightin' men and all that set, for countless years and days,
Until I think it's almost time to made Pegasus prance
In ringin' in some word for them as never had a chance.

I know a dozen fellers now, that somehow stayed behind,
And why, no one could never tell, for they was men of mind,
All brainy men and statesmen, too, as modern statesmen go,
But, somehow, in this crooked world, they've never had no show.

There's old Jim Potts, what ought to be in Congress right to-day,
He hain't no head for business—could never make it pay;
But when it comes to tariff, or internal revenue,
—Now what old Jim he doesn't know ain't worth a-lookin' through.

But pore old Jim (a brainy man, as I have said before),
And several more (includin' me) set round the grocery store,
And there we run the country, accordin' to our lights,
And we figger how the working-man is losin' all his rights.

But yet, with all our good, hard sense, some loud and windy cuss
Can put a standin' collar on, and raise a little fuss,
And everybody flocks to him, and lauds him to the sky,
And leaves us men of solid worth plum stranded high and dry.

—Indianapolis Journal.

A Dream's Vision.

Watching the twilight deepen
Into the starry night,
Feeling the gentle breezes
Die with the fading light,
Seeing the planets peeping
Out from the dome above,
I thought of one who had left me—
Of one that I dearly love.
The pale and silvery moonlight
Cast shadows all around,
From the room beyond soft music
Came with a muffled sound.
You'll say that I was dreaming,
Yet surely, across the floor,
I saw the form of my darling
Come in at the open door.
She came and stood beside me
(Shall I ever forget the sight?),
Her dear, sweet face all radiant
Beneath the moon's pale light!
The splendor of her soft, brown eyes
Outshone the stars above—
I feared my trembling heart would burst,
With tenderest joy and love!
Dreaming—was I dreaming?
Of a face I hold so dear?
I called her by her own sweet name—
She did not seem to hear!
I tried to touch my darling
As she stood there, sweet and fair—
My longing, aching arms could grasp
Naught save the empty air!

—Detroit Free Press.

The Woman-Beater.

"That horrid man! he beats his wife!"
"Good gracious! is it true, dear?"
"Why, yes; he told my brother, Jack—
But never breathe how you hear."

"Oh, no; of course not—not a word;
But tell me all about it."
"Well, Tuesday night he beat his wife!
There is no chance to doubt it."

"The brute! (Jack enters.) When Jack comes
He'll tell us. I'm just dying
To know about it. 'Beat his wife!'
A beast without half trying."

Jack—"My sister, you are very wrong"—
Thus gently he rebuked her.
Charles did say that he beat his wife—
At six straight games of euchre."

—Lena Gilbert Ford, in Judge.

The Lamp.

Clear as if she passed me now—
Stepping leopard-like and quick,
Long limbed, with a furtive grace—
I can see the ivory brow;
See the gold bronze of the face
Burn with joy, I know not how;
See beneath the scarf the hair,
Black as midnight, fragrant, thick,
Falling all about her there.
And as fire bursts from char,
Each eye kindle like a star!
When her long-lost lamp I bring—
There's such magic in the thing—
From her ashes scattered far,
From her thousand years away,
She comes back to me to-day.

Just a little earthen lamp—
Here the oil swam, here the wick,
Here the flame went flaring back
If the bearer turned her quick;
Turned her in the shadowy space,
Saw the flash of one swart face;
Saw the eager arms, and—hark!
Sprang aside, and let the dark
Blow her out and drown the spark!

—Harriet Prescott Spofford, in Harper's Bazar.

Unrequited Love.

The fairest of the fairies, she,
The daintiest of doves,
The prettiest of pictures,
The loveliest of loves:
Her face is like an angel's,
Each hand is like a pearl—
Most beautiful of creatures is
The pretty tennis girl.

Her voice is like the siren's song,
Her words my heart entrance,
Her laughing eyes are full of love,
And charm with every glance;
Her dainty feet in shoes of tan
My brain put in a whirl;
I love her for her loveliness—
The pretty tennis girl.

The golden tresses like a frame
Surround her charming face,
And half conceal and half reveal
The neck of wondrous grace;
I bless the lucky breeze that plays
About each truant curl;
And though she doesn't care for me
I love the tennis girl.

—G. P. Taggart, in Table Talk

That Bothersome Fan.

My heart is full of a maiden fair,
The sweetest that e'er was seen,
With gleams of gold in her sunny hair
And wells of light in her een;
But, ah! I'm afraid
This beautiful maid
Is a trifle cold,
And thinks I am bold,
For she grants me naught but her fan to hold.

And when I attempt to declare my love
She manages artfully
To hide her face behind the pesky thing,
And thus gets the drop on me;
And then, I declare,
I almost despair,
For what chance have I
When she is so shy?
By Jinks! I could fire that fan sky-high!

—Frank B. Welch, in West Shore.

Humble Service.

Even the little daisy
Has humble service done;
Its shadow has protected
The dewdrop from the sun,
The lingering jewel trembled,
As some fond heart might do,
To speak for smallest service
Its gratitude to you.

True service for another
In one brief act may glow,
To waken love and reverence,
To banish doubt and woe.
A voluntary kindness
Has a luster all its own,
The tribute for its service
In sparkling tear-drop shown.

—Clarence H. Griffith, in Golden Days.

FOR LITTLE PEOPLE.

A DREADFUL THING.

She never meant to do it—the darling little thing!
She bent her head at prayer-time, and then stood up to sing.
But oh! that sermon seemed such a weary time to sit,
How could she keep from fidgetting a very little bit?

She tried to keep herself awake by looking very wise,
And staring at the minister with very sober eyes.
And when the lids were droopy she tried another way—
She counted back and forward the flowers in her bouquet.

She smiled at all the pansies, and saw how very plain
The cunning little faces kept smiling back again.
She gathered up the rose-leaves which fell about her feet,
And put one to her pretty lips, as rosy and as sweet.

She never meant to do it—she wanted just to try
How nearly she could come to it, and never could tell why
In one unlucky moment before her lips could stop
She drew her breath too hard and it went off with a pop!

Tom couldn't keep from laughing, although he bravely tried
To look as solemn as a judge when little Polly cried.
And then he softly whispered: "I wouldn't mind it so,
You'll never crack a rose-leaf in church again, I know."

You will not find a little girl if all the world you search
Who thinks it such a dreadful thing to make a noise in church.
She never thought of doing it—'twas all because, you see,
The sermon was too long for such a little mite as she.

—Youth's Companion.

A LITTLE JOKE.

Two Merry Children's Sad Experience with a Spool of Thread.

It was a very pleasant evening party; at least the children all thought so. With music, games and refreshments, what could have been wanting? They had gathered into a circle for the last play of the evening, for it was ten o'clock; and they had promised not to remain late. Mattie Vernon was standing beside Charlie Benson, and the two were very warm friends. She saw a bit of thread on his shoulder, but, instead of brushing it off, she said:

"Charlie, there's a raveling on your sleeve."

He looked at it down his cheeks, and demurely said:

"Pick it off, Mattie."

She caught the end of the thread and pulled. To her intense amazement she drew out about ten yards of the thread, and it still kept coming. It seemed as if Charlie was unraveling.

"Mattie," he said, with a grin, "if you insist on having that thread, why, I might as well give you the whole spool."

As he spoke, he reached into a side pocket of his coat, and handed her the spool. All the children laughed uproariously, while Mattie grew very red in the face, and an angry sparkle came into her eyes.

Charlie had poked the end of the thread through the seam in his sleeve, with the spool hidden away in his pocket. He had arranged it to trick some one; Mattie was the first to notice the raveling, but, as they were such famous friends, she thought he might have spared her. She hated to be laughed at, and was vexed enough to cry about it. She lost her temper, and angrily said:

"Charlie Benson, you're too mean for any thing!"

"Don't mind it Mattie," Charlie pleasantly said. "It was only a little joke."

"But not a joke to my liking," she sharply said, "And I'll never speak to you again."

Charlie colored, but made no reply, for he knew it would aggravate her all the more. It was an unpleasant episode, and threw a damper upon the group. Charlie had brought Mattie to the party, but when he offered to walk home with her, she turned from him in disdain.

He tried to make peace, the next time they met, but she would not listen to him.

"I told you never to speak to me," she said.

"No, Mattie, you didn't," he gently replied. "You said you would never speak to me. After all, it was a very harmless joke, and caused a good deal of fun."

"Yes, at my expense," snapped Mattie. "It was mean in you to set it up on me."

"I didn't, Mattie," declared Charlie. "You happened to be the first to notice it. I hadn't the least idea that you would get angry, or I would have given you warning. I really had meant that stupid Joe Barber should fall into the trap."

"I don't want to hear any more about it," Mattie resolutely said. "We can never be friends again."

"Mattie, please don't say that," pleaded Charlie. "It makes me feel miserable. You play jokes yourself, and I thought you would enjoy one put upon you. Didn't you hand me a bouquet with pepper on it at the picnic? Didn't I sit down on the floor, at Nellie's birth-day party, because I didn't know that you had removed the chair from behind me? Every body laughed, but I didn't get angry. I laughed too."

"Yes, that's true," assented Mattie, in a modified tone.

"What did you think, Mattie, when the thread began to play out?" Charlie roguishly asked.

"I was almost dazed," Mattie said. "At first I couldn't understand it. I was afraid you were coming all apart. Then I saw into the trick—"

"And got mad," interjected Charlie.

"I felt hurt," Mattie said.

"The look on your face was absolutely comical to see," Charlie remarked. "It was a cute little joke, and they all thought it very funny."

He began to laugh, because he couldn't help it, and his laugh was so contagious that Mattie had to laugh too.

"Charlie, it was funny," she said.

"And we are friends again, Mattie?"

"Why, yes," she replied, with a smile. "I have been silly. I lost my temper, which you didn't, when I played those jokes upon you. If we can't take a joke, we shouldn't play any. I'll not meddle with your coat sleeve again, even if it is covered with lint."

"I am glad you have forgiven me, Mattie," Charlie said, with a bright look on his face. "And glad that we are friends again."—Frank H. Stauffer, in Interior.

TWO PET PARROTS.

A Naughty and Mischievous Bird—One That Rode Horseback—A Sad Tale.

Down in the Southern States of America pet parrots are very common. Sailing vessels are constantly bringing them from South and Central America and from the West Indies.

I recall one now that I was the happy owner of when a child in New Orleans. She was a dark green parrot, with a black bill and feet; she was very bright and a great favorite with all the children. She spoke very plainly, and could laugh and cry quite like a human being; it was very amusing to hear her.

She was full of mischief. If a servant was called, she would answer (herself unseen), sharply: "What!" and when the servant was reproved for his lack of respect she would shout with laughter.

She learned from the newsboys on the street, very naughty words, which was finally the cause of our having to part with her. From her hanging cage on one of the front verandas, she would cry out to a passer-by: "Oh, you rat!" and when the passer-by would stop to see who it was that made the remark, and discover the parrot, the naughty bird would only laugh.

Another serious fault was a habit of opening her cage with her bill. She could do this quite cleverly when it was not securely tied. Then she would come out and walk into pools of water and mud in the yard. When the careful laundress had hanged the clothes-lines full of freshly-washed linen, she would walk up and down the lines soiling the clothes with her muddy feet, and cutting off all the buttons with her bill. With all her faults, however, we loved her dearly, and many tears were shed when she was finally sent away on account of her bad language.

Another parrot which lived in a Southern city was a great favorite in the family of some friends of mine. She was quite old—though her exact age I can not now tell. She had lived in the State of Texas, while it was a republic belonging to Mexico, and seemed equally happy in her home after it became one of the United States.

She formed a great attachment for a horse which the children drove, and the two became great friends. She would climb up on a fence, the horse would come along beside it, allow her to get on her back, and then walk slowly around while the parrot held a piece of his mane with her bill. After she had ridden as long as she wished she would climb into the pantry window, and hand out, with her bill, rolls or cookies, or any thing she could find, to the horse, as a return for her ride.

In the early morning she would go up stairs, visit the sleeping rooms of the children, and call out: "Get up, Charlie!" "Get up, Frank!" until she had aroused them all.

When they set off for school, she would sit aloft on the cross beam of the high front gate, and call out as long as they were in sight: "Good-bye, Charlie!" "Good-bye, Frank!"

And here on her favorite perch she finally met her sad fate.

There were two tame eagles in the city; they had been caught when young, tamed and often allowed to fly about where they liked.

One morning, as Polly sat on the gate bidding her young friends good-bye, one of these great birds swooped suddenly down upon her, and carried her off in his claws, followed by the frantic but fruitless shrieks of the children.

So long as she could be seen a mere speck in his claws, as he soared toward the sky, she was sending back the most piteous cries of "Poor Polly!" "Poor Polly!"—Our Little Men and Women.

The Latest Fad in Canes.

I notice in all the shop windows a new fad in silver-headed canes. The small knobs of silver on rough handles are no longer the proper caper, but have given away to the smooth-turned handle, irregularly covered with a smooth coating of silver oxidized in a cloudy pattern. Following the line of the oxidized portions is fastened a small chain made of braided silver wire, much after the style of applique work of dress goods. It makes a most picturesque appearance, and, I am told, is very expensive, as all the applique work must necessarily be done by hand. A manufacturer, in speaking of the fad, said: "It is bound to become popular, for in this style of work engraving is done away with, and any name or initials can be worked out on the handles with the braided silver or gold wire."—N. Y. Star.

—I suppose when you do a friend a good turn, and he is so busy with enjoying its benefits that he goes off in a hurry and forgets to say "Thank you," you are likely to say to yourself, "I'll next try my hand on somebody at least who can get breath enough before he eats his cherries to look back on the orchard." I'd rather a man would hurl "Thanks, awfully," at me than to keep dumb. Even conventional and slang thanks are better than utter discourtesy and blank ingratitude.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

—Miss Belle Curry, of Evanston, Ill is the superintendent of the telephone system in that city. When undergoing examination as to her ability to fill the position, she was asked: "Can you climb a pole?" "Even that I can do, if necessary," was her prompt answer.

—Sixteen negro jockeys in the United States can earn salaries ranging from $2,500 to $8,000 a year.

REFORMER BESSIE.

Four Children Learn a Good Deal from a Little Puppy.

L. S. Hunt tells the following little story in the Examiner:

Bessie must have wakened in the morning with a plan in her busy little head for teaching certain members of the Newton family a lesson. The first thing she did was to go into the library, and finding on a chair a new magazine that Harry had left there she pulled off a cover. "There!" thought she, "I'll teach Harry not to leave so valuable a thing as a book where it doesn't belong." Then she went in the boys' room, and finding a borrowed book out of place she remarked to herself: "This will never do. A borrowed book should always be carefully put away. I'll just destroy this one to teach Master Willie a lesson." So she soon defaced its pretty, bright color badly.

Next she visited Marjory's room, and, finding more dust on the floor than should have been there, she evidently thought of the saying: "Dirt is misplaced matter," and gave Marjory a gentle hint by tipping the contents of the scrap basket out upon the floor.

Then she went into the sitting-room, and, finding Alice's hat on a little work-stand, she thought: "Another thing out of place—another lesson to be taught." So she pulled out the feather, leaving hat and trimmings on the floor.

When all was done she cuddled up on the lounge, well satisfied with her morning's work. At the dinner table four members of the family looked as though each wished some one else would speak first. Finally mamma said:

"I see Bessie has been trying to teach us again."

Four voices answered faintly: "Yes."

"She certainly has taught us once more that there shall be a place for every thing and every thing should be in its place," said papa.

"Including Bessie herself," added mamma.

And Bessie? Well, Bessie was a six-months-old puppy with innocent, soft brown eyes.

SOME BIG MISTAKES.

An Epigrammatic Lecture by the Editor of the "Ram's Horn."

Preachers who get sour and scold when things do not go to suit them, make a big mistake.

People who leave their politeness at home when they travel on railway trains, make a big mistake.

Young people who put off becoming Christians because they think they have fifty years to do it in, make a big mistake.

Men who are afraid to give their wives a word of praise, for fear it will spoil them, make a big mistake.

Parents who want their children to keep out of the church until they are old enough to understand all the doctrines and decide for themselves, make a big mistake.

Farmers who feed their pigs and cattle good corn, and pay no attention to what kind of books and papers their children are reading, make a big mistake.

Women who are overly anxious about their complexions, and underly anxious about their salvation, make a big mistake.

Young men who think they know it all, and that father and mother don't know any thing, make a big mistake.

Fathers who whip their boys for doing on the sly what they themselves are doing openly, make a big mistake.

People who expect to get to Heaven, just because they have shaken hands with the preacher and had their names enrolled on the church book, make a very big mistake.

Wild Animals in Texas.

Wolves, coyotes, wild cats and panthers in Texas are multiplying under the protection of the barbed-wire fence and the apathy of the State legislators. A few years since a thorough scalp law would have settled forever the wild animal question in Texas at a small expense. Now it will cost twice the money, and meantime stockmen and farmers have lost many times the money in calves, colts, and sheep killed. In a few years things will be much worse. A ranchman, G. A. Anderson, of Kinney County, has been compelled to buy a pack of hounds and turn huntsman to protect his flock from the increasing ravages of panthers. The same thing is happening all over Texas.

No Americans for Her.

The Duchess of Buccleugh, with other leaders of London fashion, has decided that "society" must be protected from the inroads of financiers and Americans. Next year no American is to be recognized socially who is not properly introduced by the United States Minister at the Court of St. James. These aristocratic confederates regard the Prince and Princess of Wales as inexcusably tolerant of the newly rich, and at her Grace of Buccleugh's late ball and garden party, which were splendid affairs, hardly an American, a financier, or a "cotton lord" was to be seen, though the Marlborough House garden party swarmed with them.

The End of His Courtship.

"Now, Maude," said the young man, about 11 p. m., "don't give me any old chestnuts. Do not say you will be a sister—" just then the parlor door opened and a hoarse voice said: "Young man, let me be an assister to you." And when Chappie picked himself up from the green lawn in front of the doorstep and painfully limped his way down to the gate he breathed a prayer of thankfulness that he was no closer related to that family. The old man had hurt his feelings.

Hard on the Industrious Farm Hands.

"These barbed wire fences ain't no good," said the farm hand. "I wouldn't have one of 'em around the place, if I had my way."

"Why not?" inquired the stranger. "They're cheap and strong, and keep cattle in better than any thing else."

"That may be," replied the farm hand; "but then a feller can't sit down to rest on 'em."

"HURRY UP."

The words came harshly from the stage manager; an impatient audience are awaiting the next act, and she who has fainted takes the leading part. This is "a peep behind the scenes," and a sight familiar to the "green-room" of every theatre. "Has she worked too hard, or been careless of her health?"

Actresses, singers, and others in the profession, do not always think; they rush into the tide of popularity, regardless of all save fame and fortune. How often we read of some favorite actress—"Ill in London, nervous prostration, etc." We have the cure of hundreds of such cases on record. Send stamp for "Guide to Health and Etiquette," a beautiful illustrated book.

M'GONEGAL IS GUILTY

Convicted of Manslaughter in the First Degree.

THE AGED PRISONER UNMOVED.

The Penalty of the Crime Will be from Five to Twenty Years.

Allowed Until Next Friday Before Being Sentenced—His Lawyer Attempts to Prevent His Being Sworn on the Bible. The Judge Orders It and the Prisoner Sent to the Tombs.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—At 12:15 the jury in the case of Doctor Henry McGonegal, charged with causing the death of Annie Goodwin by unlawful practice, brought in a verdict of guilty of manslaughter in the first degree. The jury were out an hour and twenty minutes. The aged prisoner was remanded to the Tombs to await sentence on October 10.

The most intense interest prevailed in the case, and the general opinion was that the doctor's conviction was almost a foregone conclusion. The speeches of counsel on both sides were discussed. The doctor himself was apparently calm when the jury went out, with the appearance of having reconciled himself to the worst, and he sat motionless, resting his head upon his hand.

The hands of the clock crept round until they pointed to midnight, when there was a stir in the Court room. Fifteen minutes later the jury came in.

"Have you agreed upon a verdict?" asked the clerk.

"Guilt of manslaughter in the first degree," the foreman replied.

"Your Honor, I ask that the jury be polled," said Lawyer Oliver. McGonegal stood up, blinking nervously at the jury as the clerk polled them. Each man replied that the verdict was his verdict.

"I would like to have the prisoner remanded so that we can have a chance to get the minutes," said Mr. Oliver. "Say until Monday week."

"I don't see any necessity for delay," interposed Colonel Fellows; "all they can do is to move for a new trial, which your honor will of course deny, and they cannot use the minutes until they appeal the case."

There bade fair to be a wrangle when Judge Fitzgerald stopped it by saying: "I will make it next Friday, Mr. Oliver."

A Bible was handed the old doctor, as it is the custom now to swear prisoners before taking their names and addresses. Lawyer Oliver interposed and drew Dr. McGonegal away.

"There is no necessity of that now," the Judge said. "Let it wait until next week."

Judge Fitzgerald ordered it and the doctor was sworn. Then he was taken back to the Tombs.

The penalty is from five to twenty years.

DENIES HIS GUILT.

A Curious Feature in the Pittsburg Malpractice Case.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Oct. 4.—R. L. Heaton, who is accused of being implicated in the death of pretty Blanche Perkins from malpractice, was brought here from Dayton, O., to-day. No requisition papers were needed. A doctor who lives on an island near Put-in-Bay, where the criminal operation is believed to have been performed, is also under suspicion, but has not been arrested.

A curious feature of the case is that Mrs. Perkins, the mother of the unfortunate girl, has exhibited a desire that Heaton should not be arrested. When Heaton was arrested at Dayton he was entering the depot with two gripsacks, and accompanied by a young girl, who he said was his adopted daughter Viola. Heaton told the officers they had made a mistake, as he had never murdered anybody. The girl Viola said they had lived in Middleton. She does not believe in Heaton's guilt.

Government Railroad Commissioners.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Mr. A. J. Cassatt of Pennsylvania and Henry Davis of West Virginia have accepted the office of Intercontinental Railroad Commissioners to which they were nominated on Tuesday by the President. Mr. Pullman originally declined because of poor health and increasing responsibilities in connection with his present business, but it is believed that he may be induced to reconsider his declination and accept the position.

The Body Recognized.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 4.—The identity of the man who jumped from the Camden ferry boat last Saturday afternoon was settled in the morning by the finding of the body floating in the dock of Haggerty's Wharf, Gloucester City, N. J. On the body were found papers which proved the man to be J. J. Coather, general Philadelphia agent for Lafey & Dubord, silk and veiling importers of No. 416 Broome street, New York city.

Don't Believe He Suicided.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Oct. 4.—Search for the body of young Brightman, whose hat was found at Crab pond bridge with a note pinned to it stating that he had jumped off the bridge, was continued all day but proved unsuccessful. The opinion is gaining ground that Brightman is alive. He was recently discharged by his employer for irregularities.

Drank from a Poisoned Well.

READING, Pa., Oct. 4.—Somebody put a quantity of poison in a well at Samuel Greiner's, on Ephrata Mountain, and members of the families of Mr. Greiner, Alfred Buzzard, Henry Hoover, Milton Eichelberger, Henry Fasnacht and George Whitney, who drank from the well, were made ill. Samuel Greiner died from the effects of the poison.

THE WESTERN TRIP.

Details of the President's Itinerary for Next Week's Outing.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—The preliminary details only of the President's trip have been arranged, and those are subject to slight changes. It is fully decided, however, that the President and party will leave Washington Monday morning at 11:25 o'clock on the Chesapeake & Ohio road for Cincinnati, where a short stop will be made Tuesday morning to change cars. The party will then proceed via the Ohio & Mississippi Road to Vincennes, Terre Haute and Danville; then by the Indianapolis, Wilmington & Western Road to Galesburg, Ill., reaching there Wednesday.

At that place the President will attend the reunion of his brigade in the afternoon, and will leave the same evening for Ottumwa, Ia., where he will spend Thursday, which will be Soldier's Day, at the exposition. That night the President will be taken by way of Atchison to Topeka, Kan., arriving there in the morning and remaining until about 4 o'clock, when he will take the train to Kansas City, arriving there two hours later.

He will be the guest of his brother, who is a resident of that city, until evening, when he will leave for St. Louis to attend the annual festival of the followers of the Veiled Prophet on Saturday. The next morning he will leave on the Fort Wayne road for the National Capital via Pittsburg, reaching here Tuesday morning. The party is not yet complete, but it is certain that it will include Attorney-General Miller and Marshal Ramsdell.

A SCHOOL FIGHT.

The Pupils Stand by a Deposed Professor and Demand His Return.

HARTFORD, Oct. 4.—The dismissal of Professor F. R. Childs from the Hartford High School is creating a good deal of talk and much feeling in this city. The pupils are almost unanimous in favor of the teacher, and have expressed their disapproval of the action of the Board of Education in a most characteristic manner. Passersby on Farmington avenue this morning were confronted with a unique banner suspended from an electric light wire at the junction of the street with Asylum avenue. It consisted of a piece of white cloth several feet square, upon which was printed in huge black letters, "We want Childs." Of course it attracted a great deal of attention.

There is also a strong public feeling in favor of a fair hearing and investigation of the charges made against Professor Childs. If there are good reasons, the public have a right to know them, and if it is only jealousy on the part of Principal Hall, it is equally important that it should be investigated.

Y. M. C. A. in Session.

ROUNDOUT, N. Y., Oct. 4.—The annual convention of the Young Men's Christian Association of the second district of New York State began here last night. About 75 delegates are in attendance. Rev. G. A. Hall and others prominently identified with the Association throughout the State are present. The district embraces Poughkeepsie, Newburg, Catskill, Hudson, Middleton, Port Jervis, Ellenville, and other places along the central Hudson counties. Rev. C. S. Stowetts, of this city, delivered the address of welcome, which was responded to by Thomas Caldwell, of Newburg. Remarks were made by State Secretary Hall, and an address on "Personal Work" was delivered by Rev. G. C. Yeisley, of Hudson. Sessions will be held to-morrow.

Said to Have Eloped With an Anarchist.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Oct. 4.—Mrs. Peace Abberle of High street, in this city, is said to have run away with Charles Klopp, one of the Anarchists who were engaged in a riot some months ago with the Elizabeth police. Klopp was under $500 bail to stand trial for that affair at this term of court. His bondsman is Samuel Hallenberger. Mrs. Abberle, it is said, took $500 with her, leaving her husband, who is a carpenter, with only fourteen cents in his pocket. She also left their two-year-old boy.

Shot His Mother.

UTICA, N. Y., Oct. 4.—At Herkimer last night John Walsh, aged 27 years, shot his mother, it is believed fatally, because she refused to give him money. Walsh for some time resisted arrest, standing at the top of the stairway on the second floor of his home with a revolver in his hand, but was finally captured and locked up. Mrs. Walsh is wounded in the stomach, the bullet going entirely through her body. Physicians say she cannot survive long.

Killed By A Cave-in.

FITCHBURG, Mass., Oct. 4. — Patrick Dacer, aged about 60, was killed by a cave-in during the morning. Another man was buried up to his shoulders and had a narrow escape.

Death of a Soldier's Wife.

UPROAR AT A TRIAL

An Abrupt Adjournment in the Tipperary Cases.

THE MAGISTRATE GETS ANGRY.

Counsul Harrington for the Prisoners Ordered to Leave the Case.

The London Gas Workers Will Strike. McAuliffe and Slavin's Hearing—King William Praised by Priests—Quarantine Established Against Cholera at French and Algerian Ports.

DUBLIN, Oct. 4.—The hearing in the case of the Government against Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien and the other Nationalists, who were arrested on the charge of conspiracy, was continued in the magistrates' court, at Tipperary.

In the course of the proceedings a question arose as to the time the trials would occupy, and Mr. Ronan, the prosecutor for the Crown, declared that he was entirely ignorant of the time it would take to present the case for the Government or for the accused to make their defence. Mr. Healey, of counsel for the defendants, said he was in mortal fear lest the trials would last for six months. Mr. Healey's remarks excited the laughter of those present at the hearing.

Mr. Timothy Harrington, while cross-examining a witness referred to a policeman as a shadow. The presiding magistrate called upon him to withdraw the term, and upon Mr. Harrington refusing to do so, ordered him to leave the case.

An uproar ensued in the court room, amid which Messrs. O'Brien and Dillon expressed their minds freely in regard to the magistrate's action and the general conduct of the case. The court was adjourned for half an hour to put an end to the confusion.

When it reassembled Mr. Harrington's clients announced that they would defend themselves without counsel.

Mr. Dillon was proceeding to address the bench when the crowd in the court room raised a cheer for Harrington. The magistrate at once ordered the room cleared and abruptly adjourned the court, while tumult reigned among the spectators.

A large force of police were massed outside the building.

BOULANGER'S EXTRAVAGANCE.

His Big Hotel Bills in London and Brussels—One Suite at $40 a Day.

PARIS, Oct. 4.—The announcement that General Boulanger is about to resume his travels and that he will winter in Malta makes certain disclosures in the latest chapter of "Les Coulisses du Boulangisme" especially interesting. In commenting on the General's wanderings, M. Mermeix charges him with the grossest extravagance and gives details of his personal budget. From these it is learned that his private expenditures amounted to 10,000 francs a month, while double that amount was paid out for public purposes.

In further proof of his assertions, Mr. Mermeix cites the fact that Gen. Boulanger's bill for a fortnight at the Hotel Mirgelle, Brussels, was 22,000 francs, and that when he went to London he engaged rooms at the Hotel Bristol, one of the most expensive and aristocratic hostelries in the English metropolis. For these he agreed to pay $40 a day, and although he got the best suite, when shown the apartments by the manager he seemed greatly displeased at what he considered the mediocre character of the furniture, and asked: "Have you nothing better than that."

CHOLERA IN THE EAST.

Quarantine Established at the French and Algerian Ports.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—It is denied at Lloyd's that cholera has appeared at Aden. Notwithstanding the denial quarantine has been established at the French and Algerian ports against vessels arriving from Aden.

Forty cases of the disease were reported in Aleppo Wednesday, 28 of which proved fatal. The inhabitants of the place are leaving to escape the disease.

SUAKIM, Oct. 4.—Great discontent continues here owing to the stringent precautionary measures taken by the Government against cholera. All trade is completely paralyzed. Hundreds of natives in the interior are dying of starvation.

The Oldest Woman in Connecticut Dead.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Oct. 4.—Mrs. James Caley, probably the oldest woman in this State, if not in New England, died at her home at Easton, aged 110 years.

A BOY DIES OF HYDROPHOBIA.

He Was Bitten Six Weeks Ago and the Wound Had Apparently Healed.

NEW BRITAIN, Conn., Oct. 4.—About six weeks ago Arthur, the ten-year-old son of J. W. Holmes, was bitten on the arm by a vagrant dog which was attacking his father's sheep. The wound was dressed and it healed, only a small scar being visible. The other day the boy complained of feeling very sore about the body and the pains seemed to come from the neighborhood of the wound. Doctors were called in, but were unable to do anything for the boy's relief.

Drs. Strong and Wainwright of Hartford were summoned, and held a consultation with Drs. Swazy and Lyon of this city. They pronounced the case incurable, and said that they thought it was hydrophobia.

Last night the boy became delirious and frothed at the mouth, and every few minutes made sounds like the barking of a dog. It took the United strength of several people to keep him on the bed at times. His agony lasted all night, and was only ended by death, which came to his relief at 5 o'clock this morning.

AFIRE IN PORT.

The Steamer Iroquois Makes a Spectacle for Bridge Pedestrians.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The steamer Iroquois of the Clyde Line was discovered to be on fire shortly before 12 o'clock last night.

She was lying at Pier 28, East River, near Roosevelt ferry. She is loaded with cotton and the fire was discovered in her forward hold. Pedestrians and passengers on the Brooklyn Bridge watched the flames.

Several tugs near at hand towed her out into the river, and it was thought unless the flames could be extinguished quickly that she would have to be scuttled.

Funeral of Hon. Frederick Billings.

WOODSTOCK, Vt., Oct. 4.—The funeral of the late Frederick Billings took place here during the morning. The business of the town was wholly suspended. The services, which were held in the Congregational Church, were simple but impressive, and the church was filled by the townspeople and friends from abroad. The pulpit was decorated with flowers and palm leaves. The services were conducted by Rev. Peter McMillan, pastor of the church, assisted by President M. H. Buckham, of the University of Vermont; Rev. Dr. Henry Van Dyke, pastor of the Brick church in New York, where Mr. Billings attended; Rev. J. F. Brodie, of Salem, Mass., and Rev. Francis W. Smith, rector of the Episcopal Church at Woodstock. The body was borne to the cemetery, followed by a long procession in carriages and on foot.

A New Reform League.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 4.—Leading Democrats of this city, including ex-Surrogate Woods, ex-County Clerk Moore and others, have organized a league which threatens to do injury to the Democratic party in this section. The fundamental principles of the proposed league are: First, political honor; second, the purity of the ballot box; third, the enforcement of the State primary law; fourth, to convince citizens of this city and county that those who shirk political duties are not good citizens, and deserve to be classed among those who seek that which they have not earned; fifth, to seek to get honest men to combine against the dishonest.

No More Indians for Show Business.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Acting on information that efforts are being made to secure Indians from the reservations in the West to join wild west shows in Europe, Assistant Indian Commissioner Belt has issued a letter of instruction to agents to promptly refuse any applications for this purpose, as it is now against the policy of the Interior Department to grant permits for such purposes. The Indians are also to be informed that if they attempt to leave their reservations for exhibition purposes it will be regarded as an open defiance of the authority of the Government, and that prompt measures will be adopted to detain them.

Quite Immaterial Details.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 4.—Judge Fenn of the Superior Court listened to a motion by counsel for Yan Phon Lee, the Chinaman who is being sued for absolute divorce by his wife, Maud Jerome Lee. Mr. Lee's counsel asked the court to order Mrs. Lee to be more particular in her complaint and specify the houses in San Francisco where it was alleged the Chinaman was unfaithful and also to give the name of the co-respondent. The court denied the motion.

Verdict Against the Pastor.

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 4.—The jury in the breach of promise case brought by Miss Annie Husaboe against the Rev. Peter Roberts, pastor of Plymouth Congregational Church, one of the leading churches of the city, rendered a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $3,000 damages. No defense was offered. The official board of the church has been called to consider its duty in view of the verdict.

Newspaper Men at Leisure.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 4.—The newspaper representatives of Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia, with their ladies, will be the guests of the Baltimore & Ohio, the Philadelphia and Reading and the Central Railroad of New Jersey, during a trip on the Royal Blue Line between the Capital and the metropolis to-day and to-morrow.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 4.—Christopher Smith, Republican nominee for member of Assembly in the Fourth district of this county, has declined the nomination.

END OF THE SEASON

To-Day's Contests Wind up the Championship Games.

ALL LOOKING TO A CONFERENCE.

The Baseball War Has Satisfied Both Sides and They Will Come Together.

Allen G. Thurman, Jr., as a Peacemaker—He Shows the Necessity of Combination—Chicago Secures Second Place—The Brooklyns and the Giants Have Not Settled Their Great Struggle.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—There is undoubtedly a strong feeling existing among the leaders in the National and Players' League and American Association that the present disastrous conflict should cease, and the indications are that a conference will be held soon between representatives of the National and Players' Leagues and probably of the American Association to devise some means whereby a settlement can be perfected.

The question of an actual conference only leaked out yesterday, and there are various reasons to believe that such an event will take place. What part the American Association will take in the settlement, if there is any, is simply a matter of conjecture, but one thing is certain, Allen W. Thurman, Jr., a member of the Board of Arbitration, and one of the largest stockholders of the Columbus Club, has been in the city for some time and has had a conference with President Day of the New York (N. L.) Club, Vice-President Talcott of the New York (P. L.) Club, and other luminaries of baseball.

Mr. Thurman admits that the season has been very disastrous for baseball, and he thinks that another year of the same kind would about kill the interest in the sport entirely. His object, he says, in coming to New York was chiefly to consult with the officials of the two rival clubs in the city to see if some plan could not be effected to stop the war. "The continuance of this fight," said he, "means ruin to those financially interested in the clubs. We have considerable at stake in Columbus, and we don't want to lose it."

SLEEPING AND PREACHING.

Rev. David Kaufman Creating a Sensation in Lancaster County, Pa.

READING, Pa., Oct. 4.—At the Gap, Lancaster county, a sensation has been created by the discourse of Rev. David Kaufman, who is known as the "sleeping preacher."

The clergyman lies down in a bed at a private house, and when he is asleep he arises and begins preaching first in the English and then in the German language.

At the house of C. L. Kaufman, the sleeping preacher spoke nearly three hours when he became exhausted and had to be carried up stairs.

When sleeping and preaching he says he cannot hear, see or feel and when he awakes next morning he is fully refreshed and remembers nothing that took place the night before.

He is going about from house to house and the people have confidence in him.

FELL DEAD AT THE TABLE.

Written Request That He Be Cremated. "Be Sure I Am Dead First."

CHICAGO, Oct. 4.—William H. Spencer, a travelling salesman, fell dead at the breakfast table during the morning.

He had in his pocket a card dated July 27, 1889, reading as follows:

"I am William H. Spencer, 334 West Eighteenth street, New York city. Aug. 30, 1890.—Am now rooming at 36 Pine street, second flat. Should I be taken ill send word to Mrs. C. Spencer, 334 West Eighteenth street, New York; Miss Julia Spencer, care of William Ellis, Shawville Postoffice, Virginia; Mrs. E. Henrot, care of Monroe & Co., 7 Rue Scribe, Paris, France.

"I am insured in the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, office 2 West Fourteenth street and Fifth avenue, New York. I wish to be cremated when dead, not buried. Be sure I am dead first."

The Cincinnati Deal.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 4.—There may be a hitch in the transfer of the Cincinnati Club to the Players's League. Secretary Frank H. Brunell is here with the money, and E. B. Talcott has also arrived. Al Johson and John Ward will get here to-day, when a conference with President Stern will be held. There is a disposition on the part of several of the Cincinnati players to hold back, and the old spirit to "squeeze" somebody is evident. It is hardly probable, however, that the deal will fall now.

Dispatches from Suakim.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Dispatches from Suakim state that much discontent continues among the inhabitants. Trade is paralyzed. Hundreds are dying in the interior from starvation.

—A carriage was crippled at the corner of East Second street and Park avenue last evening, by getting one of its wheels wedged firmly underneath the body of the vehicle. A crowd of people stood around in the rain and watched two men work with a monkey-wrench a quarter of an hour, until the wheel was released from its unwonted state and restored to its customary position where it could rotate without any difficulty.

—The fact that A. Iacolucci has opened a first-class confectionery establishment at 33 and 35 West Front street, is recorded in the advertising columns of THE PRESS today. Mr. Iacolucci is a foreman in the celebrated New York establishment of Tenney, whose candies have become so popular in Plainfield through the agency of the Moy Pharmacy Company. Mr. Iacolucci will continue his relations with Tenney, and in addition will give Plainfielders the best fancy fruit cakes, chocolates, bon-bons, jellies and fine confections his art and skill can devise.

—"Helps to read" have undergone so many improvements since the days of the old-fashioned spectacles that one is not surprised nowadays to hear of new wonderful achievements in the matter of remedying imperfect sight. No matter how bad the case may be, Dickinson, the Park avenue jeweler, feels confident that he can relieve and rejuvenate eyes that are failing of their duties. He has just received a full line of Dr. King's celebrated spectacles and eye-glasses, and can fit one's eyes in a scientific manner. He is Dr. King's sole agent in Plainfield.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

The Rev. Mr. Shields, pastor of the African Methodist Episcopal church at Bound Brook, will preach in Bethel chapel, this city, Sunday evening.

David Wotherspoon of this city, and partner, won a match for doubles against Warner and Beedau, of Roselle, at the Westfield tennis tournament, Thursday.

During the absence of Herman Simonds, of Broadway, who will make a two-months' trip through the South, his family will be guests at Van Court Inn, Roselle.

The Rev. George Karner, of this city, whose wife was Miss Cadmus, has accepted a call to Albany. Mr. and Mrs. Karner are now in Plainfield visiting at the home of the latter's father, Abram L. Cadmus. Albany has drawn from this city the Revs. Raymond, Dunn, Karner and Skellinger.

Prepared Her Husband's Supper, and Fell Dead.

The death of Acky Annie Bray, wife of George Bray, of 185 Grove street, North Plainfield, occurred last evening, under peculiarly distressing circumstances. She had been ill since early July, but of late had been feeling a great deal better, and was planning to give her husband a happy celebration of his birthday anniversary, today. Last evening she prepared supper, and made every thing bright and cheerful for his home-coming from a hard day's work. Then she seated herself in a chair to rest. When her husband arrived he found her lying on the floor, in front of the chair, from which she had fallen, dead. Dr. Long was summoned, but the woman was past medical aid. Mrs. Bray was forty years of age. She had been married fourteen years, and was a devoted wife.

THE BOROUGH'S MARCH OF PROGRESS.

Electric Lighting at Last a Probability—No Money for Somerset Street—Mr. Emmons and Mr. Hegeman Talk Back at One Another.

At the Borough Common Council meeting last evening the project to repair Somerset street was knocked in the head. Councilman Emmons did his best to wrest sufficient money from the hands of the Street Committee for the purchase of 500 tons of crushed stone exclusively for Somerset street, and when the question came to a vote Councilmen Smalley and Sebring stood by him and tied against Councilmen Hegeman, Buckle and Needham. Mayor Place put his deciding vote against the Emmons contingent, and Somerset street stays as it was. Those who voted against the Emmons project explained that they did so, not because they didn't favor it, but because they had been kept, through the remission of the Street Committee, in ignorance of just how big a balance was left in the street mending treasury.

Mr. Emmons said that if he might be permitted to make a few remarks he thought he ought to be allowed to say something, and he wanted to state, and he defied contradiction, that the Street Committee was spending all its money in one favored part of the borough to the exclusion of the other side of town.

Mr. Hegeman protested against Mr. Emmons' talking that way and arousing sectional feeling, and said he protested against it anyway. He also characterized as ridiculous Mr. Emmons' charges that he, Mr. Hegeman, legislated for the interests of one section of the borough and against the interests of another section, and added that Mr. Emmons was himself the obstructionist. Mr. Emmons had voted against the proposition to macadamize Greenbrook road [which statement Mr. Emmons indignantly denied], and as long as Mr. Emmons opposed Greenbrook road Mr. Hegeman would oppose Somerset street.

In explaining the position he took, Mayor Place said, casually, that he supposed the Street Committee—of which Mr. Hegeman is chairman—knew what it was about, at which Mr. Emmons said he'd thought the whole year that they didn't.

For fear that Mr. Emmons didn't understand, Clerk Brokaw arose and said "Motion's lost!"

"Yes"—said Mr. Emmons sarcastically—"I marked it that way."

Petitions which received attention and were referred to appropriate committees was one seeking for the adjustment of the grade and the scraping of the gutters on Vine street, so that pools of detrimental stagnant water would no longer accumulate; one from Warren Engine Company asking the privilege of procuring, through popular subscriptions, a good big fire alarm bell, in place of the present "insignificant" one; and one from the Edison Electric Light Company of North Plainfield, through Chas. F. Hughes, seeking to obtain a franchise to light the streets of the Borough at the rate of $18 per year for each lamp; at least 200 twenty-candle-power lamps would be required, making the annual cost $3,600.

The Fire, Water and Lamps Committee reported that it favored the Edison Company's proposition, and at an adjourned meeting to be held Friday evening, October 10, something will be done towards closing a contract.

Reform Club.

At the regular meeting of the Reform Club last Thursday evening, the following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, That the ladies of the Temperance Aid Society be and they are hereby respectfully requested to arrange and introduce a varied order of exercises for our Thursday evening meetings, with the view of rendering those occasions increasingly attractive and interesting; and that a special committee of three members of the Reform Club be appointed to co-operate in carrying into practical effect the foregoing suggested work."

President Harper named as such Committee Messrs Vanderbeek, Sampson and Burnett.

The Club also resolved to discontinue its meetings in Reform Hall during the coming union evangelical services under the leadership of Mr. Mills.

Mechanical Drawing.

The Y. M. C. A. classes in mechanical drawing will be resumed on Tuesday evening, Oct. 14. The advantages to any one connected with the manufacture of machinery of a knowledge of mechanical drawing are so well known that it is not necessary to repeat them here.

The instructors will be C. J. Robertson, draughtsman at Scott's Press Works, and A. J. Gavett, civil engineer. The membership fee in the association ($2) includes this and all other privileges of the Association. Full information at the rooms.

A Plainfielder Goes Abroad and Gets an Office.

D. T. Dunlap, a brother of Wm. W. Dunlap of Plainfield, and himself a former Plainfielder, has been elected Clerk of the District Court in Carbon county, Wyoming. His plurality was 130. He ran on the Republican ticket, and ran considerably ahead of it.

Possibility.

"Scotland's burning! Scotland's burning!"
(Wonder what would happen if it should?)
"Pour on water! pour on water!"
(As if 'twould do the smallest bit of good.)
Plainfield's burning! Plainfield's burning!
(Wouldn't it be dreadful if it should!)
Bells are ringing; engines ready;
(Horses down at Westfield hauling wood.)

Still Crowing.

(From the Somerville Democrat.)

Al. Mack says we can't lose with him scoring. We are afraid the score would suffer if it was not for Reger. [But they should both learn that three men put out in one inning is not a "triple play."]

John J. Kenney, of Plainfield, the enterprising shoe dealer, takes an unusual interest in base ball matters, and was so ready to boil over during the excitement of the last game, that it still clings to his right hand.

The West Ends are as a rule noted for being hustlers and always out for blood, but especially is this so concerning their Manager, when two weeks ago he was looking for Gore the whole day long.

Martin and Lufbery were seen deeply engaged in a game of billiards. They seem to be more at home in playing with three balls than with one.

Our John was in fine condition, and was confident of winning the game, but it was declared a tie in favor of the rain. [Yet John told us he was not in condition, and hoped the game would be postponed a week. He said: "Next Saturday I can pitch them out of sight."]

Can it be possible that the Crescents are to lose three straight? It certainly seems so, and yet they wanted to make it a five game series. We would do it, but three games in a season from one club is enough to win.

Better Mail Service for New Market.

The following letter will bring joy to the hearts of the suburban folks out Seventh street way:

RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE,
Office of Superintendent,
NEW YORK, Sept. 30, 1890.

Stanley Day, Esq., New Market, N. J.

Your letters of September 25 to the Honorable Postmaster General at Washington, D. C., enclosing an envelope mailed at New York at 2 P. M. and addressed to yourself at New Market, Sept. 24, and which did not reach you until Sept. 25, has been referred here.

As this office has explained to you on several occasions recently you could not receive at your place the same afternoon by train 5, any mail deposited in the New York postoffice later than 11:30 A. M.

The matter of direct dispatch from New York to New Market by the 5:10 P. M. Lehigh Valley Railroad train has been given attention and arrangements have been made so that commencing with Sept. 30, this mail will be dispatched from New York.

The Postmaster has also been advised of the establishment of this additional mail.

It is trusted that this arrangement will be satisfactory.

Respectfully,
R. C. JACKSON, Supt.

Why the Adams Express Company is Becoming Unpopular.

The queer movements of the Adams Express Company have called forth words of censure from the Bound Brook Chronicle, which says that wherever the company exists the old and reliable men are being dismissed and younger men hired at low wages to fill the vacancies.

Besides abolishing the offices at Plainfield and Somerville the company has now discontinued its Elizabethport branch, much to the inconvenience of Elizabeth merchants, who now threaten to institute a boycott against the entire concern.

The Bound Brook office will be retained. A. M. Converse, of East Bound Brook, who for nearly a quarter of a century has held a position of trust with the company in its main office in New York, is among the list of old men discharged.

Fanwood Club Car.

Wednesday evening the 5:15 train from New York carried the Fanwood club car on its first trip. The car is one of the handsomest of its kind. It is the original Howard car but much improved in its interior furnishing. Mrs. James Fancher was the first lady to honor it with her presence.

The members of the club include such representative men as R. P. Moore, Walter Force, George Brown, A. D. Beeken, Buz Kempshall, Col. Charles Moore, Bishop Kyte and Wm. E. Gibbs. The car leaves so early in the morning and returns so late in the evening, that Abner P. Downer did not join its coterie. Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Gibbs and Mrs. Warren are among the ladies who have been the club's guests on the car. It leaves Fanwood every morning at 7:37.

Death of the Rev. W. P. Tilden.

The Rev. W. P. Tilden, who organized the Unitarian Society of Plainfield, died at his home in Milton, a suburb of Boston, yesterday morning, in his seventy-ninth year. Mr. Tilden had for many years been a familiar figure in Boston, where he was a long time pastor of the New South church, and of Church Green. He went to Boston in 1862, and remained until the close of 1883. He was greatly beloved by his parishioners for his kindly ways and his thoughtful care of their welfare. He was preaching in Plainfield, and working hard for the success of the church, when taken ill a year ago. He went to Lakewood and other resorts, hoping to recover his health, but his frame was worn out, and his spirit took its flight.

Young Men's Rally.

The singing at the Young Men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A., to-morrow afternoon, will be an especially attractive feature. Frederick Moon will conduct the service and there will be brief telling talks by young men. Ten or more men took part in the meeting last week. All men will be heartily welcome.

THE PUGILISTS' HEARING.

Perhaps the Backers and Spectators Will Also be Prosecuted.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The hearing in the case of Slavin and McAuliffe, who are charged with assaulting each other and committing a breach of the peace, took place in the Lambeth Police Court. Counsel for the Crown said that if the contest between the two men was declared unlawful by the court, those persons who arranged and abetted the fight would be prosecuted.

After hearing the evidence for and against the prisoners, the court announced that it would reserve its decision for a week.

Wilhelm Praised By Priests.

BERLIN, Oct. 4.—The Roman Catholic papers of Germany publish a pastoral from the German bishops which deals with the social problem. Emperor William is praised by the bishops for having taken the initiative in the movement toward reform. The pastoral maintains the position already assumed that in the Church will be found the most efficient healer of social ills.

MONTREAL, Oct. 4.—Sir Charles Tupper, the Canadian High Commissioner, has cabled from London that an examination of the lungs of the suspected bullocks, which were shipped from Montreal on the Norse King, shows that they are in a healthy condition, and the English Board of Agriculture have declared the entire shipment of the cattle free.

The cause is supposed to have been incendiary.

THE SHOOT IS ENDED.

Bad Weather Interrupts the Sport at Dunellen But Big Events Are Coming.

The sixth annual tournament of the Middlesex Gun Club came to an end last night. For the first time in the history of the club the weather has operated against success. Torrents of rain fell Thursday night, the 2,000 pigeons left after Wednesday's live-bird sport were drenched in their coops, and 400 of them were killed by the water. Yesterday afternoon a penetrating mist fell, and the men had to wear cumbersome waterproof garments and to shoot through a blinding atmosphere of rain and smoke. The outlook for today was so dreary that it was abruptly decided to postpone the big one-hundred-dollar-entrance sweepstakes, which was to bring together the champions of the various States, and to end the tournament last night.

The shooting for the big guaranteed purse of the season yesterday began well. Of the first 200 birds released from the traps only seven were lost, and of these three were hit and fell dead outside of the boundary line. W. H. Wolstencroft of Philadelphia, who won first money in the same event last year, shared first prize yesterday with W. Crosby of Batavia, N. Y.; each having a clean record of 25 birds killed, defeating the American champion. Quimby, Kleinz, Elliott, Welch, Riggott and VonBrackle each brought 24 to earth, and divided second money. W. H. Green, Wild, Hedden, Manley, and Whitney each missed two and went shares on third. Cannon and Marsh defeated Seigler and Class in shooting off a tie for fourth, and went halves. Peacock and Williams had been in for fifth money, but in shooting off the tie Williams lost.

The marksman who won the most applause during the day was William S. Canon, the famous one-armed shooter from Newark, who brought down his birds with the utmost ease. He lost his arm during the war, and fought two years without it. He arranges his necktie without assistance, laces his shoes rapidly; and in fact does everything as quickly and correctly with one arm as most men do with two. W. Fred. Quimby also was accorded cheers for being the sportsman to use his second barrel least of all during the day.

In several minor events of the day Canon, Kleinz, Crosby, and Welch won first money, and Collins, C. Smith, A. Hedden, Manley, Voorhees, Sigler and Leek won second. Other moneys were won by Dayton, Terry, C. M. Hedden Lindsley, Green, and Peacock.

Financially the tournament has been a great success to the club, and a dozen or two of the participants have profited considerably.

The indefinite postponement of the big one-hundred-dollar-entrance fifty-live-bird sweepstakes was a great disapointment to the participants in the tournament, and especially to those who had planned to take part in the event. Elliott, the live-bird champion of the United States, had hoped to compete in this affair with the champions of other States, and, to give vent to his ambition to defeat them, he arranged last night with Frank Class, of Pine Brook, champion of New Jersey, and J. Frank Kleinz, of Philadelphia, champion of Pennsylvania, for a three-cornered match, each man contributing $1,000 to the prize pot and each shooting at 100 live birds. The match will take place within two months.

The conference of delegates from the different New Jersey gun clubs, which was to be held last night, did not take place for want of a quorum; hence the annual Fall tournament of the New Jersey State Sportsmen's Association could not be arranged for, but it was decided to hold a tournament at Newark, from Nov. 25 to Nov. 28, and to adopt it as the State tournament as soon as the consent of a quorum could be procured. At this tournament the shooting of Nov. 25 and 26 will be at inanimate targets, and that of Thanksgiving Day and Nov. 28 at live birds.

Cigarettes Result Fatally.

Willie Major, an eight-year-old boy living near Bound Brook, died Tuesday from excessive cigarette smoking. Last Saturday he made cigarettes from the silk of green corn. This he wrapped with newspaper and smoked a number of them. On Sunday he was taken ill and became delirious. He had every symptom of brain fever and died in convulsions.—Plainfield Press.

This fatality occurred in Trenton, several miles from Bound Brook. From the manner in which this town is reported by our city contemporaries it seems as though they are writing under the order "if you don't know where it happened say Bound Brook."—Chronicle.

The above item was not taken from THE PRESS. It was never published in these columns because there was doubt—and is yet—of its truth.

Hog Cholera Rampant in the Rural Regions.

Cholera is epidemic among the live stock in the Bound Brook neighborhood. Wm. Emery, of Gatesville, lost a number of fine hogs with the disease. A large number of chickens, geese and ducks have also died with the same complaint. One who knows says that an ounce of carbolic acid in a gallon of water, set where they will drink it, will save the poultry. He thinks the same treatment would be favorable to the hogs.

The problem of medicine is solved by Hires' Root Beer imparting pure, rich blood. Source of health. Without pure blood a person cannot long remain healthy and free from disease. Hires' Root Beer Packages makes five gallons of a delicious, sparkling temperance drink. Cooling and quenching the thirst. All first-class druggists and grocers sell it.

"Ladies" Who Remember When Broad Street Was a Cart Path.

(From the Westfield Standard.)

What might properly be termed an old folds re-union occurred at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. C. Marsh last Sunday. There were present at this time a number of ladies who lived in Westfield when Broad street was a cart path, and Ripley Hill a heavy forest. There were no exciting times about school meetings in those days, and a road that could boast of a well-defined wagon track was a boon. The names of those old residents are:—Mrs. Eliza McPeck, of Greenpoint, L. I., who is 80 years of age, Mrs. Wm. Davis, of Phillipsburg, 76 years old; Mrs. Dennis Moffat, of Plainfield, 74 years old, and Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Long, of Plainfield.

A Grateful Patient Sings Muhlenberg's Praises.

Ross Linbarger, of Plainfield, has been spending a few days with A. J. Linbarger —says the Bound Brook Chronicle. He is recovering from what was expected would be a fatal illness. He was suffering with gangrene in his left foot, and for a long time was an inmate of the Muhlenberg Hospital. He speaks in the highest praise of his treatment at that institution, and says he owes his life to the faithful nursing he received there.

Bound Brook Borough Must Wake Up.

The Somerset County Grand Jury has made a presentment against the Bound Brook Borough Commissioners for permitting the Bound Brook streets to remain in such a deplorable condition. The Court was requested to bring the matter before the December grand jury if improvements were not made in the meantime.

Hope to be Granted Light Next Monday Night.

The residents of Arlington avenue have graded their street, cut out the curb lines and put the thoroughfare in good condition. Now they clamor for lights. They claim that the street is traveled so extensively and is ordinarily so dark that lamps are an absolute necessity.

INDIAN BASE-BALL.

It Isn't Much Like the National Game, but It Is a Lively Sport.

Ball playing seems to have been a general source of amusement among all the American Indian tribes, but, writes Henry Inman, in the Kansas City Star, it is conceded that the Choctaws, in their uncivilized state, were the most skilled in the game. Of course, the Indian method of playing is not at all similar to the American National game, and indeed it is more like tennis.

It is played with two bats or sticks, and in every house I visited in the Choctaw Nation I saw one or more pairs of these peculiar bats. The sticks are bent into an oval loop at one end, with a web of fine buckskin thongs stretched across them to prevent the ball from falling out when tossed or caught. Each player carries two of these bats, one in each hand, and they catch the ball by jumping into the air, and throw it from the bats, and never are allowed to strike it or catch it with their hands.

In their primitive days it was an invariable law of the game that no player should wear moccasins on his feet, and he could make his appearance on the ball grounds only in the prescribed dress. He had to wear his breech-clout and a beautiful head belt and tail, made of white horse hair or quills, with a mane around his neck constructed of the same material as the tail, dyed in colors. The match was made up months before the day agreed upon for the playing of the game, and was led by two champions, or captains, as we should call them. These captains had the power to go through the tribe, from village to village, and alternately choose the men for their respective sides. The choice of players was generally effected by proxy; two "runners" were sent, armed with a pair of "ball-sticks." These were elaborately ornamented with paint, ribbons and any thing that had a gaudy appearance, and were touched by the players selected as an evidence that they accepted and would be on hand promptly at the appointed time, prepared to take part. Each side erected on the ground, where the game was to take place, two upright poles about thirty feet high and six feet apart, across the top of which another pole was fastened. These were called the goals or "byes," and the distance between them, one representing one side and one the other, was some 800 feet. At a point exactly half way from each goal a small stake was driven where the ball was to be thrown into the air at a certain signal.

All the preliminaries for the game were attended to by an old men, who were also the judges or umpires. First a line was drawn from one goal to the other; this was called the betting line, across which all bets were made and placed in possession of the regularly-appointed stake-holders, and all betting was made the night before the game was to be called. Every conceivable thing was staked that the Indian possessed, for there is no such inveterate gambler as poor Lo. The women of the tribe, too, were as earnest to wager what their lodges contained, even to the last blanket.

The night before the game, all the players assembled around their respective "byes," where, by the light of torches and other fires, the squaws beat their tom-toms and sung the weird songs of the nation. Then was the "ball-play dance" indulged in, all the players of both sides, in their full game dress, rattling their bats together and joining in the monotonous chants of the tribe. Then the squaws formed on each side of the betting-line and there danced and sung appeals to the Great Spirit to decide the game to-morrow in their favor.

The game was always opened by four old medicine men, who were also the umpires. The night before the game was called, while the players and the betters were dancing and having a good time at the "byes" and the betting line, they were squatted down at a small stake, away from the fun, smoking to the Great Spirit for ability to impartially decide the game to-morrow, as their duties required.

The four old men standing at the small stake throw the ball up in the air and then the players, numbering 700 or 800 frequently, rush frantically to the spot, leaping and actually jumping over each others' heads, darting between their adversaries' legs, and all the time keeping up the most demoniacal yells in their efforts to toss the ball to their own side. Sometimes a regular hand-to-hand fight occurs, but it never becomes serious, because, according to one of the rules of the game, every weapon is left in the village and no man is allowed to go or send for one, so that these occasional broils never amount to anything. The game is for 100 points, and a point is when the ball is passed through the poles of either side, which counts one.

All the players' efforts seem to be concentrated upon keeping the ball up in the air, but of course it does fall to the ground once in awhile, and then the scene is pandemonium broke loose; you can not see the players for the dust they raise as they rush together, nor can they see the ball either, and bloody noses and broken shins are the rule. Besides the 700 or 800 players there will often be twice that number of spectators on the ground, so that it can be imagined what a noise they make when all whoop and yell together.

The Type of Ideal Beauty.

This is Max O'Rell's idea of "the type of ideal beauty":

R—Take the hair of a Hindoo,
The nose of a Greek,
The mouth of the English,
The complexion of a German,
The height of a Norwegian,
The feet of a Chinese woman,
The teeth of an African,
The arm of a Belgian,
The leg of an Italian girl,
The eye of a Spaniard,
The grace of a French woman,
And you will have an American beauty.

The Work of a Statesman.

Some are disposed to attribute to Bismarck the German law which requires the closing of the windows of a room in which a young lady is practicing on the piano. At any rate, the author of the law was a full-grown statesman, who knew how to serve the public.

A BLUE-GRASS IDYL.

Two Kentuckians Settle a Difficulty and a Bill in a Gentlemanly Way.

A blue-grass idyl has been circulating through the Southern society for several days. It is, says the New York Times, a tale of two Kentuckians—one a Major, the other a Colonel—who, after a night of luck at poker, determined to gratify an oft-expressed desire to visit New York. They came, and after two days of sight-seeing the Colonel suggested to the Major that a trip to New York would not be complete without a dinner at Delmonico's. The Major agreed.

It was deemed that it would hardly be considerate to take Mr. Delmonico unawares, and in order to prepare him for so unusual an event as a swell dinner for two the Kentucky gentlemen went to the restaurant early in the day, called for the head waiter and told him what they wanted. "Spare no expense," they said.

They dined at six. It was a splendid dinner. They tasted wines of all kinds that they had never heard of before. They ate a great deal and drank a great deal and told each other stories that both knew by heart. The banquet lasted three hours.

They called for their bill. The waiter placed a check, face down, on the menu. The gentlemen were toasting each other as the waiter did this, and when they placed their glasses on the table he was gone. They saw what appeared to them to be a scrap of paper on the menu and brushed it off. The old fellows were ignorant of the customs of French restaurants and they concluded that the menu must be the bill. The Colonel began to figure up the prices. It seemed that they had eaten a great deal, but the names of dishes were in a language unknown to them, and, any way, they were not in a mood to bother about trifles.

But the Colonel gasped when he figured up the total. It was $960.

"Great heavens, sah!" he exclaimed to the Major. "It is $960. If we pay this we can't get back home."

"We might," suggested the Major, faintly, "we might jump out of this window and run."

"No, sah," said the Colonel, bringing his fist down on the table. "We are Kentucky gentlemen, sah. We will pay this bill, sah, and then, sah, we will shoot the landlord, sah."

HEART FAILURE

Weak Heart, Shattered Nerves and Nervous Prostration the Trouble with Thousands.

Failure or weakness of heart action is becoming a very prevalent disease. It is a most serious and dangerous condition to be in, and gradually runs into palpitation, spasms or neuralgia of the heart, total exhaustion of nerve power or death. At the first sign of these dread diseases every one should immediately seek a cure, and not wait until the fatal symptoms point unmistakably to death.

The first symptoms may be very slight and apparently trivial. But do not fail to heed them if you value your life. They often begin with a nervousness and weakness, a trembling or strange faint feeling, with tendency to giddiness. As the disease increases these symptoms grow in intensity and will be accompanied by dizziness, swimming of the head, fluttering or palpitation in the left side of the chest, shortness of breath, a sinking sensation, with coldness of the feet and legs. There is often also a feeling of apprehension or anxiety, as of impending danger, and a tendency to drowsiness during the day and sleeplessness at night.

A little over-exertion, excitement or emotion may bring on the attacks at any time. Sudden rising from a stooping or reclining position will cause dizziness, and rapidly climbing stairs will make the heart palpitate, produce weariness and shortness of breath. In some cases there are pains in the region of the heart, but in most cases there is no pain whatever.

If you are affected by these symptoms lose no time in seeking a cure, for a cure is not only possible, but sure, if you use Dr. Greene's Nervura, the great and wonderful discovery for heart, brain and nerves. It is purely vegetable and harmless, and its use offers the only sure hope of curing these terrible diseases and averting the fatal result. It is, we unhesitatingly affirm, a remedy of so great merit and marvellous virtues that no sufferer should neglect to use it, if a safe and sure cure is desired. It is for sale by all druggists at $1 per bottle.

No Other Remedy in the World Ever Had Such a Testimonial.

For the benefit of those who may be suffering and fail to find relief, I desire to state my case. For over a year I suffered from a HEART DISEASE, a constant pain, with severe attacks of palpitation, until I anticipated a sudden death at any time. I became weak and debilitated, with a loss of energy, despondency, &c. Hearing Dr. Greene lecture, he so faithfully described my condition that I determined to try Dr. Greene's Nervura. My improvement has been continuous and rapid. I have taken five bottles, and the pain and palpitation are gone. I sleep well, have an excellent appetite and feel well. S. A. DESART, Norstondale, York Co., N. B.

RELIGIOUS MATTERS.

BE THOU MY STRENGTH.

When on my day of life the night is falling,
And in the winds from unsinned spaces blown,
I hear far voices out of darkness calling
My feet to paths unknown.

Thou who hast made my home of life so pleasant,
Leave not its tenant when its walls decay;
O love divine, O Helper ever present,
Be Thou my strength and stay!

Be near me when all else is from me drifting,
Earth, sky, home's picture, days of shade and shine,
And kindly faces to my own uplifting
The love which answers mine.

I have but Thee, O Father! Let Thy Spirit
Be with me then to comfort and uphold;
No gate of pearl, no branch of palm, I merit,
Nor street of shining gold.

Suffice it if, my good and ill unreckoned,
And both forgiven through Thy abounding grace,
I find myself by hands familiar beckoned
Unto my fitting place.

Some humble door among Thy many mansions,
Some sheltering shade where sin and striving cease,
And flows forever through Heaven's green expansions
The river of Thy peace.

There from the music round about me stealing,
I fain would learn the new and holy song,
And find at last, beneath Thy trees of healing,
The life for which I long.
—John Greenleaf Whittier, in Churchman.

"THEREIN TO BE CONTENT."

The Secret of True Happiness—An Inward State Not Dependent on External Conditions.

In the journals of the late Louisa M. Alcott is this entry, made in 1874: "When I had the youth I had no money; now I have the money I have no time, and when I get the time, if I ever do, I shall have no health to enjoy life. I suppose it's the discipline I need; but it's rather hard to love the things I do, and see them go by because duty chains me to my galley." This expresses more lugubriously the truth to which Thackeray gave a whimsical setting: "When I was a boy, a confectioner's window that I passed every day was full of taffy. It was a shilling; I had none. Now I have the shilling, but I don't want the taffy." By a sort of irony of fate, it happens to the most of those whom the world esteems supremely fortunate, because they have won the prizes of wealth or fame, that the things won come too late to give happiness, if they ever had that power.

What is this but to say, with the Scripture, that "a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth?" Youth is not a desperately unhappy period, as a rule, because many things are desired that can not be possessed; and advanced years need not be void of happiness because they bring possession without desire. The apostle Paul has taught us the secret of happiness, the philosopher's stone that transmutes all into gold, the true elixir of life: "For I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therein to be content."

Therein, be it observed, not necessarily therewith. Paul writing these words, chained by the wrist to a Roman soldier, and prepared for a speedy sentence of death, was probably no more content with such a state than we should be, but he was content in it. His happiness rested on a securer basis than outward circumstance and condition. The peace of God, that passeth all understanding, kept his heart, as he prayed that it might keep the hearts of the Philippian Christians. It is the common delusion of men that they could be happy if they were only otherwise circumstanced—that if they had this or that, perfect contentment would abe possible. Paul touches the deepest secret of human nature when he indicates that contentment is an inward state, not in the least dependent on external condition. As our great English poet has sung:

The mind is its own place, and in itself
Can make a Heaven of hell, a hell of Heaven.

We are so constituted by nature that our desires always outrun our possessions,

As if increase of appetite had grown
By what it fed on.

An insatiable craving for more, more, and ever more, makes all that we have seem insignificant by comparison with what we have not. For this craving there is no cure but one, a radical change of nature that shall substitute for love for self the love of God and man. This inward transformation, this moral and spiritual regeneration is what the spirit of God accomplishes for man; and the fruits of this Spirit are love, joy, peace, long-suffering, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, meekness, self-control.

There is nothing in Christian contentment of supineness or slothfulness of spirit, nothing inconsistent with that noble discontent which impels men to strive manfully for the bettering of themselves, their fortunes, and the world. To be content is not to vegetate, not to float with the stream. It is rather to preserve a serene spirit, an unshaken trust in God and the wisdom of His providence, that shall nerve and inspire its possessor to do the utmost of which his powers are capable for the betterment of himself and of the world. —N. Y. Examiner.

THE BOOK OF LIFE.

It Has a Wonderful Vitality for a Work That Has Been so Often Demolished.

The Bible is a book which has been refuted, demolished, overthrown and exploded more times than any other book you ever heard of. Every little while somebody starts up and upsets this book; and it is like upsetting a solid cube of granite. It is just as big one way as the other; and when you have upset it it is right side up, and when you overturn it again it is right side up still. Every little while somebody blows up the Bible; but when it comes down it always lights on its feet, and runs faster than ever through the world. They overthrew the Bible a century ago, in Voltair's time—entirely demolished the whole thing. In less than a hundred years, said Voltaire, Christianity will have been swept from existence, and will have passed into history. Infidelity ran riot through France, red-handed and impious. A century has passed away. Voltaire has "passed into history," and not very respectable history either; but his old printing-press, it is said, has since been used to print the Word of God; and the very house where he lived is packed with Bibles, a depot for the Geneva Bible Society. Thomas Paine demolished the Bible and finished it off finally; but after he had crawled despairingly into a drunkard's grave in 1809, the book took such a leap th at since that time more than twenty times as many Bibles have been made and scattered through the world as ever were made before since the creation of man. Up to the year 1800, from four to six million copies of the Scriptures, in some thirty different languages, comprised all that had been produced since the world began. Eighty years later, in 1880, the statistics of eighty different Bible societies which are now in existence, with their unnumbered agencies and auxiliaries, report more than 165,000,000 Bibles, Testaments and portions of Scripture, with 206 new translations, distributed by Bible societies alone since 1804; to say nothing of the unknown millions of Bibles and Testaments which have been issued and circulated by private publishers throughout the world. For a book that has been exploded so many times, this book still shows considerable life.

I have heard of a man traveling around the country exploding this book, and showing up "the mistakes of Moses," at about $200 a night. It is easy work to abuse Moses at $200 a night, especially as Moses is dead, and can not talk back. It would be worth something, after hearing the infidel on "the mistakes of Moses," to hear Moses on "the mistakes of the infidel." When Moses could talk back, he was rather a difficult man to deal with. Pharaoh tried it, and met with poor success. Jannes and Jambres withstood Moses, and it is said found a grave in the Red Sea. Korah, Datham and Abiram tried it, and went down so deep that they have not yet got back. But now Moses is dead, and it is easy to abuse him. It does not take a very brave beast to kick a dead lion.—Dr. H. L. Hastings.

STRENGTH OF CHARACTER.

Do Not Mistake Strong Feeling for the Real Article.

It was Robertson who said most profoundly: "We mistake strong feelings for strong character. You must measure the strength of a man by the power of the feelings which he subdues, not by the power of those which subdue him." This mistake, however, is almost universally made, especially by the young. How often we hear a girl or a boy confessing to a hasty and uncontroled temper in words which clearly convey the suggestion that such a temper is an evidence of strength of character; how many young people deem an even temper a sign of weakness, and the power of self-control an evidence that there is not much either of strength or of sensibility beneath a quiet and equable surface.

Such a view is entirely erroneous. As Robertson says, the only evidence of strength in a man is his power over his own self. Indeed, his powers are not his until they are entirely under his own control. That of which we can be robbed by untoward circumstances, or by the caprice of others, is not ours. This thought carries us one step farther, showing us not only the need of mastery over our own turbulent and insubordinate characteristics, but the need of a voluntary and deliberate exercise of the powers which are by nature ours. For instance, a person may have been endowed with a large stock of good temper, yet he is not truly good-tempered until he has deliberately chosen to be good-tempered in a time when to fail would be natural. Thus George MacDonald says of one of his strongest and most beautiful characters, dowered with an inexhaustible fund of good temper, "but it was not hers until she had made it her own by choosing and willing to be good-tempered when she was disinclined, holding it fast with the hand of determination when the hand of wrong would snatch it from her."

Thus it is only the virtue deliberately willed and chosen which is really ours, ours so truly that no self-will or misbehavoir of another, no untoward circumstance beyond our control, can rob us of it. It is because this truth is not understood and appreciated that so many people fail in their strongest point. So it was that the meekest man spoke unadvisedly with his lips, and the man of courage, Elijah, gave way to utter discouragement and prayed for death. It is not only when we think we stand, but just there where we believe that we stand most firmly, that we have need to take heed lest we fall.—American Messenger.

"RAM'S HORN" SAYINGS.

Custom is a merciless master.

Never look where you shouldn't walk.

Much doing is not so important as well doing.

Every soul is a battlefield where the powers of hell and Heaven meet and engage in conflict.

The young man that fools away his time is about as long-sighted as the farmer who makes a hen-roost out of his two-hundred dollar self-binder.

God won't help a man who won't do something to help himself. It won't do to sit in a chair and pray for muscle. You can only get it by using what you have.

Astronomy has counted three hundred and fifty millions of shining worlds, all no doubt full of gold mines and yet the church is crowded with people who are afraid that God will not be able to fulfill His promises.

When Solomon made his celebrated remark about considering the ways of the energetic insect and garnering wisdom therefrom, he was not looking at the man who quibbles about trifles. The hairsplitter is always busy.

WAR ON THE PARTRIDGE.

A Day in the Woods with Dog and Gun.

Pen Sketches from a Day's Hunt—A Disappointing Point—Where to Look for Partridges—Gun and Shells That Will Give Best Results.

[COPYRIGHT, 1890.]

The dawn of the first of September is always greeted with a rattling volley of shotguns in all parts of rural New York. The partridge can no longer skulk about under the protection of law, and he finds it necessary to keep his eye peeled or down goes his shanty.

Nevertheless the first always finds plenty of sportsmen waiting for its arrival and anticipating a day in the woods with their dogs. In some parts of the State very good shooting can be had. But mark you it means work and the hardest kind of work too. One secures his partridge in the same manner as the honest farmer whose ground he hunts upon earns his bread—by the sweat of his brow.

The country is mountainous and the path of the hunter strewn with thorns. In other words it is filled and canopied with thorns and briars, and under foot with jagged rocks and stumps. For a protection against the first wear an entire suit of canvas, with short breeches and leggings. For the feet, lace shoes with thick uppers and medium heavy soles filled with bob nails, are the best.

IT WAS A TURTLE.

So equipped and accompanied by my two two Irish setters, Fan and Lady Bel, I started out bright and early on the first. We reached a choice piece of cover just in time to see a rabbit, closely pursued by a couple of hounds, make a short run in the adjoining field and then take to the cover again, the hounds in full bay after it. I soon found it was time wasted to hunt over this ground, as every bird was treed, and I only had the doubtful satisfaction of seeing my dogs make false points and of hearing birds get out of trees usually behind me. A short walk brought me to another cover which was a noted partridge retreat for this season of the year, there being plenty of berries for the birds to feed on. It was a tough-looking place to tackle, and after I got in I found it to be even worse than it looked. After having succeeded in extricating myself from an unusually bad tangle, and on recovering enough wind for the purpose, I whistled for the dogs, which were nowhere to be seen. They were apparently out of hearing as well as sight. So I started in search of them.

I began getting pretty well out of temper, and was tearing through the brush regardless of consequences when I stumbled pell mell over the two dogs, carrying them both to the ground with me. On reaching a sitting posture, I found they had already recovered themselves and were standing as staunch as before. It was a sight to warm one's heart. Lady Bel was half a length ahead of Fan with tail, back and head on the same level and both front legs braced squarely in front of her as if to prevent the animated dog flesh that they supported from approaching nearer the game.

Fan was in an easier position. One front foot was raised and her lips were slightly parted, through which could be seen the gleaming fangs and slowly dropping saliva.

With tightly grasped gun pushed well in front of me, I stepped ahead of my dogs. Three, four, five steps ahead of them. Still no signs of a feather. Yet I knew from the dogs' actions that the game was very close. Another step! The suspense began to be unpleasant. A kick in the brush and, for a moment, I thought the rush of air would carry me away with it. Birds got up all around me and some of them within reach of my gun barrel. Luckily the brush was low so they were well up over it before they came in proper range. I dropped one ahead of me and just had time to cover another with my left as it disappeared in some higher cover to the right. My eyes were gladdened, however, by some floating feathers that marked the spot he disappeared in.

After reloading I gave my dogs, who dropped to shot, permission to "fetch." Lady Bel almost immediately brought in a good sized young bird, and I sent her back to help find the other, walking in the same direction myself. On reaching the spot where I thought the bird fell, I found Fan making game with head turned back looking and waiting for me. As I drew near her she began moving slowly forward, only moving as she heard me do so behind her. So afraid was she of getting too far ahead and flushing the bird. The scent became so strong that she almost crawled on her belly, and just as she stiffened into a point, I heard Lady Bel coming through the bushes. As she approached me I saw she had a winged bird fluttering in her mouth. She got within a few feet of us before knowing it. Suddenly she saw Fan. Slowly her tail raised to the level of her back and one front foot left the ground, making as pretty a back as I ever saw. Meantime, mind you, she had a live bird fluttering in her mouth struggling to get away. A greater proof of intelligence could not well be imagined. Reaching down I stroked her with my hand. She acknowledged the caress by a barely perceptible wag of the tail, but her eyes never for a moment left Fan's form. A few steps forward brought me alongside Fan and with a whir-r-r-r up got a bird which I was fortunate enough to kill. At the command "fetch" Fan went out to retrieve it, and Lady Bel gave up the winged one she had held so long, which I killed, not by wringing its neck or thumping it against a tree, but in a more humane way—by breaking its neck between my teeth.

The last bird fired at which Fan soon brought in turned out to be a very fine old cock. The signs of an old bird are a dark orange mark over the eyes; they also have a much thicker skull than the young ones.

After a pull at my pipe and a chat with the dogs, who understood and appreciated the compliments I gave them, we began walking in the direction that most of the brood had taken. I put up six of them, getting a point on every one and killing three.

This increased my bag to six, and I had made a double shot, the first one I ever made on partridges. By a strong effort I escaped the "big-head," which feeling I had nearly succumbed to after making the double, and pointed my face towards home. I was walking along the top of one of the steep sides of a deep ravine with a creek running through it, which, by the way, is a favorite place for partridges later in the season, as it is warm and protects them from the wind. The dogs were working down below me, one on each side of the stream. I saw Fan just at the water's edge come to a stand and pointing nearly behind her. Lady Bel, seeing her from the other side, drew slowly up, reached the stream and stepped carefully into the water. When about half way across she was evidently overtaken by the fear of coming too near and encroaching on Fan's rights. So she stopped, half emerged, in mid-stream. Dreading the descent down the steep bank, I stood where I was hoping the bird would get up of its own accord. This did not occur, so I slid, scrambled and fell to the bottom and approached the dogs. I reached the stream, but had not yet disturbed a feather. A few more steps brought me on the same side as Fan. I wondered how she could retain the uncomfortable and cramped position she was in. But she did, and showed no signs of weakening either.

Nerving myself for the denoument, I pushed in ahead to flush the partridge, walking over all the ground pointed out, but failing to put up the bird. Had I not been sure of the dogs, I should have thought it was a rabbit or squirrel. Under the circumstances it completely mystified me. I looked over at my companions. They stood the same as before. I spoke to them, but they obstinately held their point, and in a way that suggested that they knew their business and thought it was just a little queer I didn't know mine. I began to think I didn't sure enough, when my eyes were attracted by a small, round spotted object just at my feet. By the Great Hora spoons! it was a turtle. The mystery was solved.

One rule that should be closely adhered to in this sport is, to always shoot. It makes no difference if you see a feather or not, throw your shot just in front of the leaves the bird's flight disturbed. You may not kill him: the chances are about nine out of ten against you. The advisability of this habit though is proved when a bird shows himself for a few feet only. There is not then a moment's hesitation as to will I or will I not shoot. But the bird is instantly covered and after some practice often killed, although the chance seems a slim one.

In regard to gun and shells the best result in partridge shooting can be obtained with a seven pound breech loader having twenty-eight inch barrels, the right hand barrel cylinder bore and left medium heavy choke. Shells for the right hand barrel (or for the barrel that is first fired) should be loaded with three and a half drahms of smokeless powder, primed with black and one ounce number ten shot. Three wads should be put over the powder and one on top of shot. Shells for the other barrel should have three drahms of best black powder and one ounce number eight shot. For later shooting when the birds are wilder, tougher, and better protected with feathers, use number seven and number five shot.

In the choice of dogs for partridge shooting select a setter. His long thick hair will prove invaluable as a protection against the briars. Whereas a pointer will get foot-sore after a day's hunt, and will also refuse to enter briar patches that a setter will come out of unscratched.

For a pleasant day's shoot a man's dog should be well under control, and to ensure this they must be worked for at least a week in advance of the shooting season. Otherwise they will be headstrong and rank, and will flush, although, perhaps, unintentionally, about as many birds as they stand. J. W. J.

Henry Watterson's Anecdote of an Old-Time Kentucky Gambler.

It is related of Chunky Towles, says Henry Watterson in the Louisville Courier-Journal, that in 1852, grown weary of waiting for the coming of the latest intelligence from the National Democratic convention, then sitting in Baltimore, he retired to his bed. An hour or two after tidings of the nomination of Franklin Pierce arrived, and Samuel Bugg, Chunky's political guide, philosopher and friend—an earnest Democrat withal, and a gentleman of extensive knowledge—proceeded at once to awaken the sleeping sportsman. "And who in thunder is Franklin Pierce?" says Chunky. "Why," says Mr. Bugg, "Franklin Pierce is the son of General Benjamin Pierce of revolutionary fame. He was a distinguished Representative and Senator in Congress from New Hampshire; he was offered a seat in Mr. Polk's cabinet and declined it; and he fought gallantly in Mexico as the youngest and most brilliant of New England's Brigadiers!" "In that case," says Chunky, with decision, "I'll get up and dress." He did so, and came down to the City Hotel, in front of which a goodly company was enjoying the summer night in discussing the news. As Chunky approached a leading Whig exclaimed: "Here is Chunky Towles now, and I'll bet him one hundred dollars he never heard of Franklin Pierce in his life, and can't tell who he is, or where he's from." Chunky paused a moment, gazed compassionately upon his interlocutor, and then, with an air of composure and authority, said; "Put up your pocket-book, Colonel. It ain't good sporting rules to win on a certainty. Franklin Pierce, sir, is a son of General Benjamin Pierce, of revolutionary fame. He was a distinguished Representative and Senator from New Hampshire. He was offered a seat in Mr. Polk's Cabinet and declined it. And he served gallantly in Mexico as the youngest and most brilliant of New England's Brigadiers. He is the very man we wanted. I was for him from the first. Hurrah for Pierce!"

The President and Party Start on Their Journey.

TO BE ABSENT EIGHT DAYS.

The Trip Being Made in an Elegant Hotel Car.

Places at Which They Will Stop and Who Comprises the Party—The Time to Be Spent at St. Louis—A Big Reception Arranged for the President at Galesburg, Ill.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—President Harrison and party left here this morning at 11:20 over the Chesapeake & Ohio road for a Western trip, to be absent eight days.

The Presidential party consists of the President, Secretary Tracy, Marshal Ransdell, Capt. Meredith, Secretary Halford, the Executive stenographer, and G. G. Bain, representing the United Press. A representative of the Associated Press will join the party at Cincinnati. The special train is in charge of Charles R. Bishop, General Eastern Passenger Agent of the Chesapeak & Ohio Railway, who will accompany the party during the entire journey.

The train will arrive at Cincinnati early Tuesday morning, the party will leave at 8 a. m., and make short stops at various points between Cincinnati and Danville, Ill., not herestofore announced. From Danville the party will go over the Indianapolis, Bloomington & Western road to Galesburg, Ill., where they will arrive at 9:50 Wednesday morning. From Galesburg to Ottumwa, Ia., and westward to Kansas City and return to Washington.

It is not positively decided yet whether the President will on his return trip remain in St. Louis until late next Saturday night; but if train arrangements can be made to bring him to Indianapolis early on Sunday morning the party will not leave St. Louis until 10 p. m., that night.

The President and party will travel the entire journey in an elegant hotel car. Portions of the journey will be made as a special train and other portions with the special car attached to regular express trains.

To Receive the President.

GALESBURG, Ill., Oct. 6.—Extensive arrangements have been completed for the reception of President Harrison when he arrives here next Wednesday. A message from Governor Fifer says that General Vance, with Battery D, has been ordered here. The reunion of the One Hundred and Second Regiment will be held to-morrow, and the Ohio and Indiana regiments will arrive that morning.

POSTAL TELEGRAPH.

A Letter of Postmaster-General Wanamaker on the Subject.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Postmaster-General Wanamaker has just made public a letter recently addressed to Representative Bingham, chairman of the House Committee on Postoffices, embodying an elaborate argument in favor of his limited plan of postal telegraphy. He said in part:

"I am more than ever convinced of the wisdom and practicability of restoring the telegraph to the postal service and make it what it was originally intended to be, a part of the postal system. I say this after closely studying the arguments against the bill made so vigorously by the great telegraph company which is now its only visible opponent. I do not believe it possible to argue this question down. There is a deep and far reaching conviction among the people that the telegraph service is by right a part of the postal service. To carry the postal system from pony riders to stage-coach and on to railroad service, and stop all further progress because three thousand owners of telegraph stock oppose, is not in accord with the genius of our people or the spirit of the times."

As to the constitutionality of postal telegraphy, the Postmaster-General says: "It has been argued by learned lawyers for a score of years that a Government telegraph is unconstitutional. The motives of these gentlemen have been one of two in all cases. They have been the paid attorneys of those corporations whose special interests have demanded that their monopolies should in no way be interfered with. They have known their business and done it well."

He then follows with an elaborate explanation of the limited plan, and of its operation; arguing that it would pay the telegraph companies and be more efficient as well as lower priced.

Strange Absence of a Buffalo Man.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 6.—The police at New York, Albany and other points have been notified of the disappearance of James Stamp, who lived with his wife at 247 Court street, this city. His wife says he left the city on Sept. 4 last to spend two weeks at Cape May to try and benefit his health. He had in his possession at the time he left some $600, and Mrs. Stamp fears foul play as nothing has been heard of him since he left Buffalo.

Hadn't the Means to Prosecute.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Ernest Riall, who was arrested at the St. James Hotel Saturday night on a telegram from Omaha, Neb., for embezzling $18,000 from Richard J. Straight by bogus land transactions, was arraigned in the police court during the morning. Mr. Straight was present, and said he had no desire to prosecute Riall and that he had made a mistake in causing his arrest as he could not bear the expense of taking the prisoner back to Omaha for trial. Riall was discharged.

THE NEW TARIFF LAW.

Some Little Confusion In Interpretating a Few Points in the Measure.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—The Custom House authorities began this morning to levy duties under the new schedule provided by the McKinley bill. The officers and other employes looked refreshed after Sunday's rest when they appeared for duty this morning, but within an hour the worry of explaining the new schedule to different importers and merchants made them look extremely irritated.

On some points in the bill the Custom House authorities are as much in the dark as the importers themselves, and confusion for a while is certain to ensue. This was somewhat aggravated by the rush of goods that came in yesterday and during the early hours of this morning, just too late to pass under the old tariff.

The importers and brokers who had goods on these belated vessels spent a very unhappy Sunday, but they made the best of a bad bargain. The losses of a number of merchants will be very heavy, but no hope for their relief is apparent.

Comment on the New Tariff Law.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—The Observer, in an article on the McKinley tariff, expresses the hope and the belief that the new measure will, by its stimulus to American manufacturers, attract large numbers of the unemployed workingmen from England to America, thus affording partial relief to the labor market here.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—The Daily News says: The European expectation of a revolt of the American farmers against the artificial dearness caused by the tariff is one that has never been realized. It has always been threatened, but always postponed, and the day of its fulfilment is doubtless yet afar off. The idea that the McKinley tariff will have a weakening effect upon Canadian independence is absurd.

Grain Importers Were Busy.

OSWEGO, N. Y., Oct. 6.—The harbor is full of barley-laden vessels from Canada, about 300,000 bushels being afloat. The total importations of barley at this port for the past 30 days has been $1,800,000 bushels. Twenty-nine thousand dollars in duties were collected at the Custom House Saturday night. Every avilable craft was pressed into the service to get the grain here in time. The last ones to leave Canada were instructed to return to Canada with their cargoes if they could not make Oswego by midnight.

Spain and the McKinley Bill.

MADRID, Oct. 6.—A rumor is current here that the Spanish Government intends to enter into negotiations with the United States Government for reciprocal concessions touching Cuban and American products. It is also reported that the Government has instructed its agents abroad to notify the home authorities of any measures that may be taken by foreign Goveraments with respect to the new United States tariff law.

THE MILLER MURDER.

Damaging New Evidence Said to Have Been Found Against Lingo.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—The Camden County officials disclosed new and important evidence to-day toward fastening the guilt of the murder of Mrs. John Miller upon Frank Lingo. Prosecutor Jenkins says he has facts to break down Lingo's alibi. He refused to reveal what it was, but said the facts reached him by a queer coincidence.

The Prosecutor, County Physician Izard, Dr. Formad and Coroner Stanton held a consultation last night and fixed the inquest for Thursday morning at the Camden Court House.

Dr. Formad and County Physician Izard had compared notes on the microscopical examination of Lingo's clothes. Their analyses were essentially the same, and County Physician Izard says that Lingo's undershirt is not the only blood stained garment which accuse Lingo of not only having murdered Mrs. Miller, but also of having criminally assaulted her.

"All these stains bear evidence of Lingo's guilt. I feel sure we have the right man."

Prosecutor Jenkins said this morning that the aggregate evidence against Lingo was strong, and that the grand jury would surely indict the man.

Green Goods Men Run Down.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Two young men, Robert D. George and James F. Hafley, of Limestone County, Alabama, were remanded at the Yorkville court on the charge of dealing in "green goods." A complete outfit of green tinted paper, tied up to resemble rolls of bills, and $1,800 in genuine money, were found in their possession.

Day's Trial to Begin October 16.

BUFFALO, N. Y, Oct. 6.—The trial of Arthur Day, the bigamist of Rochester, who, it is alleged, sought to hide his crime by pushing his first wife over the cliff at Niagara Falls, will come up at the Fall Assizes, Monday, October 16, and promises to attract about as much attention as the famous Birchall case

ADMIT THEIR DEFEAT

Binghamton's Cigarmakers' Strike at an End.

DECLARED OFF LAST NIGHT.

A Disastrous Struggle for Employers and Employes.

Two Big Factories Forced to Make Assignments and Many of the Strikers Apply to the Poor Authorities for Assistance—The Conspiracy Cases to Be Pushed to the Bitter End.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Oct. 6.—The long and bitter struggle between the cigarmakers of this city and their employers has ended.

The men held a meeting last evening and voted to declare the strike off.

The fight has been the most disastrous ever experienced here. Two factories have been compelled to make assignments and on the other side there has been much want and suffering among the familes of the 3,000 men called out, many of them having been compelled to ask aid from the poormaster.

It is fifteen weeks to-day since the strike was ordered.

Some of the shops have been able to procure nearly all the men they need, and it will be difficult for many of the strikers to obtain employment here.

It is reported that the conspiracy cases brought by the manufacturers against the leaders of the strike will be vigorously prosecuted.

A COSTLY TRIP.

How Jay Gould Proposes to Journey in Foreign Waters.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—It is reported that Jay Gould is endeavoring to close negotiations with one of the Atlantic steamship companies for one of their racers for his intended extensive trip in foreign waters. When the yacht Atalanta was first advertised for sale nine months ago, the project of making a two years' tour around the world, which Mr. Gould now contemplates, was about to be consummated. The only stumbling-block was the superstitious views entertained by the Wall street magnate about not caring to sail in anything but an ocean greyhound. The objective point at the outset will be Japan, and the party intends to spend at least six months in Asiatic waters to give Mr. Gould ample time for botanical research in China and the East Indies. The trip will involve an enormous outlay, as much of the interior of the ship will be remodeled to permit of several large suites of sleeping apartments being constructed, and to render possible other luxurious appointments, such as Mr. Gould enjoys at his country place at Irvington. Among the most salient features will be appliances for the cultivation of flowering plants and large store rooms for the preservation of exotics, choice fruit and fresh mushrooms. Mr. Gould will be accompanied by twenty invited guests in addition to his immediate family, and the full complement of crew and officers will be retained.

Convention of Architects.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—The annual convention of the American Institute of Architects will open in this city on the 22d inst. and continue its session three days. Several important matters will be discussed; one of which, the establishment of United States testing stations for building material, will be of some interest to the public. This is important to the public as it tends toward safe building, and important to the profession as it will give them an opportunity to have doubtful, new or unknown materials and methods of construction tested by trained officials.

Is Pauline Hall Engaged?

NEW YORK, Oct. 6—Although the lady herself does not admit it, is reported in theatrical circles in this city that Miss Pauline Hall will soon marry a son of the late General George B. McClellan. The eldest son of the General married a society belle last year, taking Miss Hecksher to the altar. It is quite easy to imagine with what sensation the announcement concerning Miss Hall will be received. This lady was recently reported to have secured a limited divorce from E. R. White. She has been financially successful, and has just bought a fine house on Seventy-first street, in the fashionable quarter, into which she will move in the fall.

Ex-Mayor Pendleton's Marriage Episode.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Oct. 6.—Judge Blackhall in the district court has granted Mrs. Pendleton No. 1 a divorce from ex-Mayor Pendleton, and also gave her the custody of the children. Addie Cullen, the telephone beauty will join ex-Mayor Pendleton in Chicago and a second marriage ceremony will be performed.

MANY ALLEGED FORGERIES.

Suits Growing Out of the Patterson Matter Begun at Asbury Park, N. J.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Oct. 6.—Ex-Judge Samuel F. Hendrickson, of Monmouth County, and Wm W. Conover, two of the wealthiest men in the county, have brought suit in the Supreme Court against Henry Kroehl, importer of bristles in New York; A. E. Buchanan & Co., extensive lumber dealers, and Samuel D. Ludlow, of Hoboken, N. J., for the amount of promissory notes held by them as endorsers, which are claimed to be forgeries.

These notes are the ones upon which Frank Patterson, of this place, was indicted seven years ago for having uttered.

Forty-one indictments for forging were found against Patterson. Upon many of them he was convicted and sentenced to ten years imprisonment.

The decision in the case was reversed by the Supreme Court, and three trials ensued, in each of which the jury disagreed, whereupon all of the indictments were quashed, and Patterson was released from jail and is now living here.

As the State was unable to prove the cases against Patterson, Conover and Hendrickson, who held these notes as endorsees, together with about $100,000 worth more of the alleged forged notes, will endeavor to collect them all.

Many of the notes and checks are drawn upon some of the most prominent business men in New Jersey.

At the time of Patterson's arrest he was manager of the Grand Opera House here and had several theatrical troupes on the road. Conover and Hendrickson were his backers and had all the notes discounted.

INGERSOLL BARRED OUT.

The Noted Infidel Refused the Use of Two Halls in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—I. N. Baker, private secretary to Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, has encountered some difficulties in his attempt to secure a suitable hall in Philadelphia for the colonel's lecture on "Art and Morality."

The lecture is designed to be a testimonial benefit to Walt Whitman, and art and morality are to be discussed, with the aged poet's words as a text. When application was made to the authorities of the Academy of Music, Secretary Bonnaffon, after communicating with Alfred G. Baker, president of the company, refused to let the Academy for this use, on the ground that Col. Ingersoll could not be allowed to speak there.

Mr. Baker then applied for the Union League Club annex, whilh Col. Weidersheim declined to place at his disposal. Finally, Horticultural Hall was engaged and the lecture was arranged for Oct. 31.

Alfred G. Baker said that it had been a principle of the Academy Company throughout his presidency that no person should use their property for the purpose of advocating infidelity and atheism.

On inquiry at the Union League Club it was learned that the hall in the annex was not commonly let to other than club members, and that the refusal might have been on that ground.

GRIEVES FOR HIS WIFE.

Birchall Worried More for Her Than for Himself.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Oct. 6.—The jail officials say that yesterday Birchall showed more signs of breaking down than on any day since his conviction. He spoke of his wife several times and appeared to be grieving more for her than himself. He dreads the parting with her. This morning he wasmore cheerful, but his old, nonchalant and jocular manner has given way to a quieter and more thoughtful demeanor. Those who come in contact with him daily say that a marked change has come over him and that he begins to appreciate the solemnity of his position. Any little incident occurring in the jail-yard, that comes under his notice, however, amuses him as much as ever.

The strict watch put upon him after his sentence is still maintained and will be until his execution.

No one is allowed to see him, and he will have but few visitors except his counsel and spiritual adviser, when he asks for one.

Mrs. Birchall's health is improving. She has not seen her husband since the last day of the trial and may not do so until just prior to her departure for England, which it is understood her friends have finally induced her to make the latter part of this week.

Scotch Iron Furnaces Idle.

GLASGOW, Oct. 6.—All the Scotch iron furnaces are now quenched with the exception of a few which do not belong to the Ironmasters' Combination and which make iron for private purposes. The lockout reduces the market supply 20,000 tons weekly.

Gilbert and Sullivan's Opera in Berlin.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—Gilbert and Sullivan's opera, "The Yeoman of the Guard," has been produced for the first time in Berlin, with brilliant success, though "The Gondoliers" recently met with almost complete failure at Vienna.

Pleased With His American Welcome.

NEWS FROM ABROAD

Conference of Nationalists in Dublin To-Day.

MR. PARNELL NOT PRESENT.

Resolutions Denouncing the English Government to Be Adopted.

An Effort to Prevent the Promotion of Archbishop Walsh—Famine Victims Already Announced—"Jack the Ripper" Sends Two More Letters—Wealthy Jewish Merchants Ordered From Russia.

DUBLIN, Oct. 6.—Mr. Parnell is not present at the conference of Nationalist leaders in session here to-day. Mr. Justin McCarthy is in the chair and outlined Mr. Parnell's views. It is understood that resolutions will be adopted denouncing the Government for its failure to take steps toward mitigating the evils of deficient food supply in Ireland; and for its prosecution of O'Brien, Dillon and others at Tipperary.

THE POPE AND IRELAND.

A Rumor that Englishmen are Working Against Archbishop Walsh.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—Advices from Rome state that the British Ministry, through its friends in that city, is bringing all the influence possible to bear upon the Pontiff against the bestowal of a Cardinal's hat upon Archbishop Walsh, of Ireland. The effect of these appeals is not known, but it is said that the Pope is deeply perplexed, as between the British Government and the Irish people.

It is claimed, on behalf of the British Government, that the elevation of the Archbishop at this time would be an expression of approval on the part of Rome of the prelate's course in sanctioning the National League agitation and the plan of campaign, which have heretofore been condemned by the Holy See.

It is rumored in Rome that the opponents of Archbishop Walsh have obtained an assurance that he will not be promoted for some time to come, if ever.

Gas Workers Fear Discharge.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—Three thousand gas workers met at Woolwich last evening and formally declared that the suspicions of the Gas Light and Coke Company that they intended to strike were absolutely unfounded. Resolutions were adopted deprecating the action of the company in erecting barracks for contemplated new employes, and in securing the presence of the military in anticipation of a strike. The truth is that the men are afraid that these preparations are for a different purpose than is announced. They are apprehensive lest an attempt is about to be made to force all union men to leave the company's employ, and thus break up the organization.

Two More Warnings from the "Ripper."

LONDON, Oct. 6.—The police have received two more letters signed by "Jack the Ripper," and announcing the intention of the bloodthirsty unknown to commit fresh murders and mutilations. The police believe that the letters are genuine. Vigilance committees are being organized in the Whitechapel district, in expectation of a renewal of the "Ripper's" depredations. The police force has also been increased.

The Irish Famine Now On.

DUBLIN, Oct. 6.—Several deaths are reported from the island of Achill, on the West coast of Ireland, owing to a lack of proper food, and indirectly to the failure of the potato crop. The condition of the inhabitants on this and other islands is being investigated by order of the Government, but no relief has so far been extended.

The Kaiser's Sister's Coming Marriage.

BERLIN, Oct. 6.—The date of the marriage of the Princess Victoria of Prussia to Prince Adolf von Schaumburg-Lippe is announced as December 21, the birthday of the Empress Frederick. The Princess is a sister of the Kaiser, and was once reported to be in love with Prince Alexander of Batten, formerly ruler of Bulgaria.

Israelites Ordered to Leave Russia.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—Several wealthy Jewish merchants of Odessa have been ordered by the authorities to settle up their business and leave Russian territory. No charge is made against them, except that they are Jews. The trade of Odessa is largely in Jewish hands, as is indeed that of most Russian cities

Read "Thanatopsis" at the Funeral.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—The body of the man Easton, who shot himself at St. Paul's Cathedral on last Sunday, was cremated at Woking on Saturday. Mr. Forder, secretary of the Secular Society, who conducted the funeral, read a portion of Bryant's "Thanatopsis" instead of the regular service.

A Missing Man Heard From.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 6.—Julius Wolffe, formerly superintendent of the Birmingham Iron Foundry, who disappeared several weeks ago, has been heard from. He has written from Hamburg, Germany, to his late employers that he will not return, he having fled to get rid of an uncongenial wife.

A Prominent Buffalo Lawyer Dead.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 6.—John M. E. Kinney, a prominent lawyer of this city, is dead at his home, No. 279 Oak street. For a time he taught classics in De Lasselles College in New York. He was Assistant Attorney at Buffalo in 1873-6.

BASEBALL MEN EXCITED.

The Sale of the Cincinnati Club Still Causing Considerable Talk.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—The transfer of the Cincinnati baseball club, its franchise, players and grounds to the managers of the Players' League is still the all-absorbing talk in baseball circles.

One prominent magnate said this morning that this move on the part of the Players was proof sufficient that they were here to stay, and that the National League people must stir themselves or get out of the way. Another interested and knowing man said that the deals had just begun and that within a few weeks all trouble would be patched up and next season would again witness old-fashion and harmonious baseball.

On Thursday next the National League and as many of the Association directors as accept the invitation sent out by the magnates, will hold a conference at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. No conference of baseball men was ever held that has been anticipated with as much interest as the approaching one. The present situation will be discussed and it is reasonable to say that plans for the redemption of the game will be adopted. In connection with this subject the question of waiving all claims to the players taken from the League and Association by the new rival will be considered.

The outcome of this meeting will probably be the appointment of a committee to consult with representatives of the Players' League. A compromise will then be easy enough to effect if both organizations will concede a little. The League people say they see no possibility of a compromise until the Players consent to withdraw their teams from the cities occupied originally by them and to give in to other demands of a like nature. Such a proposition is not expected to meet with success. In fact, it is claimed that a programme is already arranged with the possibility of a reasonable understanding being reached by the fighting factions.

The nature of the compromise is only a conjecture, but the impression is now gaining ground that the League and Association will have the field next season and the clubs of the Players' organization divided between them. In this way two strong bodies will be formed and all differences settled. Some such scheme as this has been under consideration ever since the sale of the Cincinnatis was first spoken of. That town has been trained to support cheap baseball and will not likely come up to the expectation of the League or Brotherhood.

Death of a Wealthy Baltimore Man.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 6.—George B. Graham, one of the wealthiest and best known young society men in this city, died at his country residence at Catonsville last evening. Mr. Graham on September 26 was reported to have made an attempt to commit suicide. This was strenuously denied by his family, and it was claimed that the gash which was found in Mr. Graham's throat was the result of an accident while in the act of shaving himself. The wound was not considered dangerous and his recovery was not doubted. Fever, however, followed the injury and to this cause his death is attributed.

Mettman Will Turn State's Evidence.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—A special from Leavenworth, Kan., says: John Mettman, the husband of Mrs. Teresa Mettman, who was so foully butchered here last March, was rearrested on suspicion Friday night. Last night he sent for his attorney, and will turn State's evidence against C. A. Benson, recently arrested at Camden, N. J., and Mrs. Rautzahn, his daughter, who is in jail here. All three are implicated.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Marguerite Day, of this city, is visiting friends in New York.

Elmer E. Runyon will sing this season with the Metropolitan Singing Society of New York, under the leadership of W. R. Chapman.

Lewis A. Anderson, a former resident of Plainfield, and a brother-in-law of Elias H. Bird of this city, died at New Brunswick Saturday, after an illness of two weeks. He leaves a wife and three children. The funeral services will be held to-morrow.

The first sociable, for the Fall and Winter season, of the New Market Baptist Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, was held Wednesday evening at the home of John I. Brokaw, president of the society. The attendance was large, and every one, as usual, had a good time.

Dr. Dan Adams and Capt. Doane have returned from the Adirondacks with a record of five deer killed besides an innumerable lot and assortment of small game, trout and salmon. They shipped one of the deer to Plainfield, but it was delayed on the road a week and arrived, alas! too late.

One Man's Misfortune Drove Him to Drink, Another Was "Led Astray."

The sum of fifty dollars was paid into the City Treasurer this morning by Eugene Brannon, James Whalen, Alonzo Randolph, Ludlow Frazee, Thomas Waldron, Walter Leland, John Kiernan and Thomas Carney, who had crowded the lock-up over Sunday, and whose individual fines for drunkenness and disorderly conduct ranged from five to eight dollars. Eugene Brannon had had his shoulder dislocated by a kick from a horse, and had sought to drown his anguish in the flowing bowl. Alonzo Randolph was a young boy who said he had been enticed into bar-rooms and tempted to drink. Those who sold him liquor may expect an investigation.

Will Crowd Old Trinity to the Doors.

The convention of the Union County Union of Young People's Societies of Christian Endeavor, to be held in the Trinity Reformed church, Plainfield, this week Friday evening, promises to be a most interesting event. The music will be rendered by the local society, with hymns by the congregation.

The Rev. W. H. Shermer, of the First Baptist church of Elizabeth, will speak on "The Manliness of Christianity," and the Rev. George H. Payson, of the Presbyterian church of Rahway, on the "New Pledge." A paper on "Why we Study the Bible" will be read, and there will be other interesting exercises. Societies from all parts of the county will attend.

Is it not surprising that nearly every household in the country should be acquainted with the merits, virtues, and the healthful properties of Hires' Root Beer? For years it has been the standard drink of those who enjoy a delicious temperance beverage. It tones up the system, helps nature, and is just what all need in hot weather. A 25 cent package makes five gallons. Sold everywhere.

THE NEW GRACE CHURCH.

A Model Decided on, and the Vestry Tell the People What Must be Done by Them to Build it.

At last the parishoners of Dr. Rodman's church are being moved in a way that will undoubtedly result in the building of the church they have long needed on the fine location they have long owned at the corner of Seventh and Sycamore streets. Besides the earnest addresses on the subject that have emanated from the pulpit, a circular has been sent forth by the vestry that speaks very plainly as regards the people's duty in the matter.

The vestry believe that it is entirely within the ability of the parish to contribute the funds necessary to enable the vestry to erect and inclose sufficiently for use a suitable church, leaving, if necessary, the finishing and furnishing for another effort; and the only question to be determined is whether those who attend Grace church, and are interested in its growth and prosperity, will do what they can.

A stone church of sufficient capacity can be erected and furnished for about $40,000. With the available funds (about $5,000) now on hand, and additional subscriptions of say $10,000, the vestry would feel justified in soliciting detailed plans and specifications, and proceeding with the work, relying on additional subscriptions of at least $5,000 before the building was inclosed.

On this plan the vestry would expect to borrow (mortgaging the church property) $15,000, whice, with funds on hand and subscriptions before named, will enable them to erect the building and make it habitable, leaving a portion of the finishing and furnishing—estimated at say $5,000—for further subscriptions after the church can be occupied.

That they should have and must have a new church building, they say, must be apparent to all, and does not admit of any discussion. The effort made three years ago was not supported as the vestry hoped it would be, and was abandoned; but this effort will not be abandoned, so far as the vestry is concerned, but will be continued until a contract has been made for the erection of the building; and for that purpose the vestry ask for contributions in cash, or in form of subscriptions, which can be sent to C.P. Bull, Treasurer.

The vestrymen themselves have subscribed $5,000, and if the rest of the church people give but twice what those eight men have given, there is sufficient. A sub-committee of vestrymen for the purpose—consisting of W. E. Lowe, O. T. Waring and C. P. Bull—have, after diligent inquiry, decided to recommend the adoption of a ground and elevation similar to that designed by Architect R. W. Gibson, and erected at Olean, N.Y. This has been duplicated, or rather an enlarged copy of the same has been contracted for, by Trinity church, Sing Sing. The church in Sing Sing is to seat 650 people, the greatest width is 81 feet, and the greatest length 140 feet; the contract price for masonry and carpenter work is $26,000; that will finish the church, but not furnish it. Adopting the plan of the Sing Sing church, and inclosing four feet more in width and five feet more in length, and not leaving quite as much space between chancel rail and commencement of pews, yet allowing liberal space for each sitting, there is arranged a plan that will accommodate 720 people, at, it is believed, a cost for masonry and carpenter work not exceeding $28,000; it being estimated that the masonry will be as cheap in Plainfield as in Sing Sing.

Mr. Gibson, the architect, is well known as the designer of the Cathedral in Albany, and whose design for the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York, is the favored one. What has influenced the vestry most in their choice is the fact that, while the style of church recommended is very beautiful in its design, it is of economical construction. The style adopted is Gothic. The ground plan consists of chancel, nave, side aisles, with shallow transepts, narthex, organ room, vestry and robing room. Side aisles serve for passageways only, none of the congregation being seated behind pillars or other obstructions. This enables the pillars to be erected of a substantial design and size, giving the interior a dignified effect. The transepts are introduced to give variety and picturesqueness to the design and so as to enlarge the seating capacity near to the pulpit. The masonry work of the interior is of plaster, ornamented with mouldings and carved capitals. The windows at the west end in the transepts and chancel are large tracery windows, while those in the nave aisles are comparatively small and simple. The clere-story gives a double window to each bay division of the nave. The roof has open timber work of pointed arch form, all finished in wood and stained. The roof rests direct upon the pillars of nave, which have no arches. This arrangement enables the clere-story to be used in a height which would not permit of it otherwise, with much more effect than is usually obtained, and at a moderate cost.

Externally the building will be of stone, rough dressed, with bold, pointed arches and water tables, and the trimmings of cut stone of fine quality. The handsome square tower designed for the front, and which will occupy a considerable part of the space, will rise in noble proportions and terminate in battlements, with turret running up easterly corner and overtopping the battlements. The whole effect of the building, as viewed from the front, will be singularly massive and dignified.

These are the main features of the church recommended for consideration, and in order to co-operate with the rector to secure money enough to commence to build, the vestry would suggest that a circular be issued to the parish, which shall embody their views, and an effort be made to secure at least $15,000. In the event of said amount being raised, they further recommend that an architect be employed, at a cost not exceeding three and a half per cent. of the estimated outlay, to furnish plans and specifications of a building, the cost of masonry and carpenter work (to include gas fixtures and windows) of which shall not exceed $30,000.

A PRETTY OCTOBER WEDDING.

A Notable Bridal Ceremony at Netherwood's Church of Our Saviour.

The marriage of Miss Marion Gasquoine Haines, the eldest daughter of Samuel A. Haines, President of the National Commercial Travelers' Association, and Constantine P. Ralli, manager of the banking house of Brown Brothers & Co., of New York city, and eldest son of the late P. C. Ralli, of London, was celebrated Saturday morning in the Protestant Episcopal Church of our Saviour at Netherwood. The beautiful little house of worship, which is close by the home of the bride, was prettily decorated with palms and cut flowers, and filled with the friends of the young pair.

Miss Haines, who was accompanied to the chancel rail by her father, wore an extremely pretty costume of brown cloth trimmed with ostrich feathers, with bonnet to match, and carried a bouquet of white roses, yellow chrysanthemums, stephanotis, and smilax. Her only ornament was a beautiful diamond pendant in the shape of a cross, with a superb sapphire in the centre, and a fleur de lis between the bars. This was a gift from the bridegroom, who was attended by James Brown Mabon as best man. Wm. M. Kingsley and Martin Bates were the ushers. There were neither bridesmaids nor maids of honor. The Rev. Dr. George Vandewater, rector of St. Andrew's church, Harlem, officiated, and was assisted by the rector of the Church of Our Saviour, the Rev. S. P. Simpson. A wedding breakfast was served after the ceremony at Belvedere House, the home of the bride's father.

Among the guests were Miss Johnston, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Coe, Mr. and Mrs. John Whiting, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Ralli, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Anthony, Mr. and Mrs. William Palmer Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Brian H. Smith, Mrs. Oscar Hermance, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Rice, George H. Church, Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Buchanan, Henry C. Bowen, Major and Mrs. R. L. Burnett, Miss Anthony, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ellis and family, Mr. and Mrs. William Lord, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Plummer, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Bowen, Mr. and Mrs. J. Vanderventer, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Talmadge and Miss Helen White, of Netherwood; Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Ginna, Mr. Daniel Ginna, Mr. and Mrs. Dorsey Hyde, Miss Edith Hyde, Mrs. S. Jacobus, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fisk, Miss S. Lawrence and Miss Bessie Ginna, of this city.

Real Water and a Real Garsman.

The famous tank drama, which is one of the great successes, will be presented at Music Hall this and to-morrow evenings. Messrs Jefferson and Taylor have had the play re-written, and in the present shape it promises to be the most remarkable sensational play ever placed on a stage in this country. The great lake and river scenes, which were such features of the drama, have been greatly improved, and the tank will now prove to be no inconvenience to the setting of the other scenes of the play. It will be remembered that much of the action of the piece took place in a very limited space, as the huge tank, which contained many thousands of gallons of water, was of course a permanent fixture during the engagement. As now played the water will be covered over in such a manner that it will not conflict with the setting of the stage in those scenes where the river is not needed. Instead of showing and utilizing the real water in two acts only, as was done originally, the tank will be made to do excellent service in three acts. The great regatta scene, one of the prettiest pictures ever shown on any stage, will be retained, and George Hosmer, the popular Boston oarsman, will be seen in a racing boat illustrating his successful methods and winning the diamond sculls at Henley. The sensational rescue act will be retained, but will be more realistic than ever, and many specialties, including the Herbert Brothers, a trio of trained athletes, will enliven the scene preceding the regatta. The plot of the piece has been strengthened, and much that is amusing and enjoyable has been added to the comedy element.

Forgot His Manhood in Woman's Presence.

Fanwood society is greatly stirred over an episode which took place yesterday at the home of one of the most prominent residents of Plainfield's thriving suburb. A Union county official whose home is in Fanwood is said to have used insulting and grossly improper language in the parlors of his neighbor, in the presence of the neighbor's wife; and became, it is alleged, so objectionable a visitor that he had to be summarily ejected, after being repeatedly requested to leave. A PRESS reporter sought to interview the husband this morning, but that gentleman said he had nothing to say. It is understood, however, that the husband has written a letter to the official demanding that the disturber apologize to the insulted wife.

A Chance for Choir Boys.

Three more soprano voices are wanted to train for the Episcopal church choir at Scotch Plains. Boys under twelve years of age, having good voices, and sufficiently fond of music to go through considerable practice in voice training and learning to read music, may apply to Mr. Embury, 60 Washington avenue, Thursday, October 9, at 4:30. All meetings for practice are held at a convenient place here in Plainfield. A conveyance is provided on Sundays, and the boys sing only at morning service.

The Brightest Jewels

In a mother's diadem are her fair, healthy children—the pride and ornaments of her home. But a mother cannot bear and nourish such children while she is the victim of suffering and disease. By a course of self-treatment with Dr Pierce's Favorite Prescription, every woman can thoroughly eradicate, and at the same time build up and invigorate the whole system by its health-imparting influence. A trial bottle will convince. "Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, to give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

A Female Highway Robber.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Otto Kleanheim, a well-developed German, while walking along Fourteenth street, near Pennsylvania avenue, last night, was seized by a colored girl, who pulled him into an alley, kicked him, knocked him down, and then seized his watch and what money he had in his pockets and ran away. She was subsequently arrested, and turned out to be Eliza Fray, who was just released from the penitentiary, where she served a term for arson.

National Convention of Jewish Workmen.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—The second day's session of the National Convention of Jewish workmen was well attended, 120 delegates, representing 35 trades unions of the United States and Canada, were present. Resolutions were passed advising an international union of the trades unions of the United State and Canada were passed, as were also resolutions condemning the sweating system, which was declared to be a source of much sickness.

A Notorious Criminal Recaptured.

NASHUA, N. H., Oct. 6.—Four weeks ago John Soucier, a notorious criminal from Montreal, charged with criminal assault upon a woman and horse stealing, broke jail at Beauharnais, Quebec, and escaped to the United States. He was traced to this place and arrested late last night by a detective from Montreal, who will return to Canada with him this afternoon provided the prisoner does not demand extradition papers.
